Good morning Bruce,

Unfortunately, if your client has a noon hearing tomorrow, the USMS are going to come pick him up first thing. As such, it is doubtful he will be here past 7 or 8 am tomorrow. Bobbi is coming to see him around noon today. Are you able to come with Bobbi or after the count?

Thank you,

>>> Bruce Barket <[redacted]> 9/15/2019 10:49 PM >>>
I wasn't able to get to see Nick over the weekend so I have to seem tomorrow before court on Tuesday. I hope that is ok. I will be at the facility by 8;00.

Thank you for the social visit on Friday. Nick and his mom are very grateful and I am glad that it was accomplished before court. It will be very helpful to us.

I have a private investigator we have appointed under CJA coming to visit our client from out of town next week Monday and Tuesday. What do we need to do to get him permission to come in with us for a legal visit? Thank you.

Hi [redacted]. I'm not sure if you've already relocated but I'm hoping you can help or redirect me to someone who can. I have a private investigator we have appointed under CJA coming to visit our client from out of town next week Monday and Tuesday. What do we need to do to get him permission to come in with us for a legal visit? Thank you.

Trump might win a Pyrrhic victory against Obamacare, as the balance of judicial power shifts his way

People wait in line to enter the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit in New Orleans on Tuesday to hear arguments on whether Congress effectively invalidated the Affordable Care Act when it zeroed out the tax imposed on those who choose not to buy insurance. (Gerald Herbert/AP)

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Joanie Greve and Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: Oral arguments in New Orleans on Tuesday over the future of the Affordable Care Act foreshadowed the massive impact that President Trump's free rein to fill the courts with like-minded judges will probably have on American jurisprudence judges will probably have on American jurisprudence over the next generation.

For now, Trump continues to suffer legal setbacks. In a case involving his push to add a citizenship question to the 2020 Census, a district court judge rejected the Justice Department's request to change out its team of lawyers. Separately, an appellate court in New York upheld a lower court's decision that it is unconstitutional for Trump to block critics on Twitter because he's a public official who uses the platform to communicate with constituents.

But the balance of power is changing on the courts each week to become more favorable to Trump, and it sure sounded like the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit might be ready to uphold at least parts of a federal district judge's decision in Texas that the entire 2010 health-care law is unconstitutional because the 2017 GOP tax bill got rid of the individual mandate to buy insurance. Two of the three judges on the panel expressed skepticism during the oral arguments that Obamacare can remain intact since the mandate was how Chief Justice John [redacted] justified upholding the law in 2012.

Judge Kurt Engelhardt, whom Trump put on the bench just last year, was the more outspoken of the two. He repeatedly noted that the law was written without an explicit feature guaranteeing that if one part were ever removed by Congress or the courts, the rest would remain in place. He suggested that it's the job of Congress to forge a solution. He questioned whether the courts should be "taxidermist for every legislative big-game accomplishment that Congress achieves." The judge who seemed to largely agree with him was appointed by George W. Bush. A third judge, appointed by Jimmy Carter, stayed silent during the 90-minute hearing, per Amy Goldstein, who was in the courtroom for us.

Engelhardt was grilling attorneys representing Democratic attorneys general and the Democratic House. Normally it would have been Justice Department lawyers defending a federal law, but the Trump administration is refusing to do so and told the 5th Circuit this spring that the administration agrees with the plaintiffs that it should be struck down.

If Trump gets what he's hoping for in New Orleans, there's a strong argument to be made that the president will be like the proverbial dog that catches up with the truck. Health care – the issue that dogged Republican candidates in the 2018 midterms more than any other – would almost certainly take a starring role in the 2020 campaign. The Supreme Court would probably then hear an appeal, in which [redacted] would probably again cast a deciding vote – one way or another – in June of an election year.

McConnell mum on whether he supports Trump-Obamacare lawsuit

1) Despite a decade of efforts to kill Obamacare, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) refused to say yesterday whether he supports the suit to invalidate the law. "I think the important thing for the public to know is there is nobody in the Senate not in favor of covering preexisting conditions," he said at his weekly news conference. "And if it were, under any of these scenarios, to go away, we would act quickly on a bipartisan basis to restore it."

Trump has had a historically large number of judicial vacancies to fill during his first two-and-a-half years largely because McConnell blocked consideration of so many of Barack Obama's nominees once he seized control of the Senate in 2015. It was not just Merrick Garland.

2) Sen. Susan Collins (R-Maine), who cast a key vote for the tax bill that could be used as a pretext by judicial activists to repeal Obamacare, is trying to distance herself from the lawsuit challenging the ACA. She also voted to confirm Engelhardt to the 5th Circuit, in addition to Justice Brett Kavanaugh. These votes could imperil her reelection next year. She issued a statement saying she opposes Trump's decision not to defend the health-care law in court. "The Affordable Care Act remains the law of the land, and it is the Department of Justice's duty to defend it," Collins said.

3) "Democrats are savoring the moment," Paige Winfield Cunningham reports in the Health 202. "They're spending the week bludgeoning Republicans over the high-stakes lawsuit, which they well know is prime fodder for 2020 attacks. The House Oversight Committee will hold a hearing this morning dubbed 'The Trump Administration's Attack on the ACA: Reversal in Court Case Threatens Health Care for Millions of Americans,' where a number of patients and consumers advocates will testify. The Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, the Democratic Attorneys General Association and the Democrat-affiliated group Protect Our Care launched hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of print and digital ads around the country. Democrats in Congress delivered floor speeches castigating their GOP colleagues. House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jerry Nadler (D-N.Y.) said he's also planning a hearing on the lawsuit."

-- As the judges in Louisiana considered the fate of health care for millions of people, the Senate voted 53 to 45 on party lines to confirm another controversial Trump nominee to the 9th Circuit, the court of appeals that has most often drawn the president's ire. Hailey Fuchs notes that Daniel Bress's confirmation gives Trump his seventh judge on the historically liberal bench, which now has 16 judges nominated by Democratic presidents and 12 by Republicans. The court still has one vacancy that Trump plans to fill. Bress, who once clerked for the late Antonin Scalia, was nominated to fill the vacancy left by [redacted] Kozinski, whom Kavanaugh once clerked for and who resigned in December 2017 amid allegations of sexual misconduct.

British Ambassador Kim Darroch speaks at an afternoon tea hosted by the British Embassy to mark Trump's inauguration in January 2017. (Paul Morigi/Getty Images)

-- British Ambassador Kim Darroch resigned from his post this morning after three days of public attacks from Trump, who was angry about leaked cables that showed the diplomat privately described the president as "inept" and "insecure." Jennifer Hassan reports: "Trump blasted Darroch in a series of tweets this week, calling him 'a pompous fool' and said his administration would not work with him." In his resignation letter, Darroch said the "current situation is making it impossible for me to carry out my role as I would like. Although my posting is not due to end until the end of this year, I believe in the current circumstances the responsible course is to allow the appointment of a new ambassador."

Federal Reserve Board Chair Jerome Powell speaks at a news conference in May. (Patrick Semansky/AP)

-- Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell has two messages for Congress this morning: Central bank independence is critical, and an interest-rate cut is likely at the end of July. Heather Long got a first look at his prepared testimony before the House Financial Services Committee: "Since [June], it appears that uncertainties around trade tensions and concerns about the strength of the global economy continue to weigh on the U.S. economic outlook. Inflation pressures remain muted," Powell will say. The U.S. economy is doing "reasonably well," Powell will add, but he notes that business investment has "slowed notably," probably because of the uncertainty around trade and global growth. He will also stress that the economic gains have not been shared evenly by everyone. Hispanics, African Americans and people in rural communities are continuing to have a harder time finding jobs that pay well.

-- Reader feedback: Many of you, on the left and right, emailed in response to yesterday's Big Idea to say that manufacturers should keep raising wages for workers if they want to make their industry more appealing to young people and close the skills gap. Readers wrote that higher salaries would have a bigger impact than any marketing campaign from a trade association in making the sector more appealing.

-- Support for legal abortion has hit a 24-year high as more states pass severe restrictions on the procedure, according to a new Washington Post-ABC News poll. Emily Guskin and Scott Clement report: “The Post-ABC poll finds a 60 percent majority who say abortion should be legal in most or all cases, up from 55 percent in a 2013 Post-ABC poll, and tying the record high level of support from 1995. The latest survey finds 36 percent say abortion should be illegal in all or most cases, also tying a record low. A 41 percent plurality of Americans want their own state to avoid making it either harder or easier for women to have access to abortion. Fewer, 32 percent, say their states should make it easier and fewer still, 24 percent say their states should make it harder for women to have access to abortion. … Even within party ranks, allowing or banning abortion in all cases is a minority position. Among Democrats, 77 percent say abortion should be at least mostly legal, but just over 4 in 10 (42 percent) say it should be legal in all cases. Among Republicans, 52 percent say it should be at least mostly illegal, but fewer than a quarter, 22 percent, want it to be illegal in all cases.”

-- North Carolina state Rep. Greg Murphy won the Republican primary for the state's reliably red 3rd Congressional District, besting pediatrician Joan Perry by 20 points in a special election. Felicia Sonmez reports: "The race had been viewed by some as a test of women's standing within the Republican Party. Perry had won the endorsements of all 13 House Republican women and received nearly $1 million in support from an outside group created to boost female Republican House candidates. But in the end, she was outflanked by Murphy, who was backed by several House Republican heavyweights, including Reps. Jim Jordan (Ohio) and Mark Meadows (N.C.)."

Joe Biden stops for ice cream in Iowa in April. (Melina Mara/The Washington Post)

-- Cashing in: Joe Biden, who continues calling himself "Middle Class Joe" on the campaign trail, earned $15.6 million over the past two years. Matt Viser and Anu Narayanswamy: "The vast majority of the former vice president's income — which totaled $11 million in 2017 and $4.6 million in 2018 — came from book payments and speaking fees, according to newly released tax returns and financial disclosure forms required of federal office-seekers. All told, the Bidens made nearly five times more in the past two years than the next- highest earner, Sen. Kamala D. Harris (D-Calif.), who with her husband earned $3.3 million. Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.) and Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) each took in about $1.7 million in family income. … Since leaving office, he has benefited from an explosion of Since leaving office, he has benefited from an explosion of wealth. He gave 47 speeches, according to the new filings, with fees as high as $234,000. His speaking fees and book payments amounted to $10 million in 2017 and $3.2 million in 2018. Biden was also a professor at the University of Pennsylvania, where he was paid $371,159 in 2017 and $405,368 in 2018."

Shane Bieber of the Indians pitches for the American League last night at Progressive Field in Cleveland. (Jason Miller/Getty Images)

-- On the strength of its pitchers, the American League will get home-field advantage in the World Series after a 4-3 win in the All-Star Game. Dave Sheinen reports from Cleveland: "Perhaps someone sneaked into the bowels of Progressive Field on Tuesday and replaced the regular, turbocharged 2019 baseballs with century-old versions from the Dead Ball Era. How else to explain — in the midst of the biggest home run binge in the history of the sport, one year after the most homers ever hit in an All-Star Game and one night after the most electrifying performance in the history of the Home Run Derby — the relatively pedestrian showing in this year's Midsummer Classic? There is one other possible explanation, of course, and it is the one, conspiracy theories aside, that will have to suffice: There are great pitchers scattered across this game (shellshocked as they may be by the nightly home run binges), and on Tuesday night they shone brightest. ... The victory was the seventh in a row by the AL, its 14th in the past 17 and 19th in the past 23 All-Star Games."

-- MLB Commissioner Rob Manfred denied yesterday that the league has knowingly "juiced" baseballs to increase the number of home runs this season, despite mounting complaints from pitchers. Manfred attributed the spike in homers to naturally occurring variances in manufacturing baseballs and vowed transparency as officials move to correct the problem, per Sheinin.

Perot in 1992 warned NAFTA would create 'giant sucking sound'

GET SMART FAST:

1. Ross Perot, the Texas billionaire who waged two unsuccessful bids for president as an independent, died at 89. Perot was lauded for starting two software companies that later sold for billions, and his reputation as a successful entrepreneur helped him attract nearly 20 million votes in 1992 — marking the highest vote share for an independent or third-party bid since Theodore Roosevelt and ultimately contributing to Bill Clinton's victory. (Donald P. Baker)

2. Virginia's GOP-controlled General Assembly ended a special session on gun legislation after about 90 minutes. The Virginia Senate voted along party lines to adjourn until after the state legislative elections this

November, and the House quickly followed suit. The Republican House speaker accused Democratic Gov. Ralph Northam (D) of an "election-year stunt" for ordering the special session shortly after the May 31 mass shooting in Virginia Beach. (Gregory S. Schneider, Laura Vozzella and Antonio Olivo)

3. Democratic megadonor Ed Buck is facing allegations of human trafficking and revenge porn months after he came under fire when two black men died from overdoses in his home. Buck is now facing two more charges in an ongoing case brought by the mother of one of the two men who died in his West Hollywood apartment. (The Daily Beast)

4. A Republican candidate for Mississippi governor, [redacted] Foster, refused to allow a female reporter to travel with him alone because of her gender. Foster's campaign told journalist Larrison Campbell she would need to be accompanied by a male colleague if she wanted to go on a 15-hour trip with the candidate, saying the "optics" of the candidate with a woman could be used to insinuate an extramarital affair. (Mississippi Today)

5. A Senate bill would block federal funding for the 2026 World Cup until the U.S. Soccer Federation agrees to give the national women's and men's teams the same compensation. The proposal by Sen. Joe Manchin III (D-W.Va.) comes after the women won the World Cup this weekend as the crowd chanted.

"Equal pay!" (Des Bieler)

6. An inspector general report accuses the hospice industry of repeatedly ignoring patients' pain and needs. One particularly grisly example recounted how a patient in Missouri was so neglected that his family had to make a trip to the emergency room to treat a "maggot infestation" where his feeding tube entered his abdomen. (Chris Rowland)

7. Electric scooters have spread to several European capitals, where they are sparking the same complaints heard on this side of the Atlantic. The mayor of Paris condemned the scooters as causing "not far from anarchy" on the city's roads, and residents of Berlin have complained of drunk riders and at least one instance of a man trying to access a high-speed motorway on his e-scooter. (Rick Noack)

8. Pig-ear dog treats were recalled in 33 states because of a potential salmonella contamination, the FDA announced. The treats, which were sold in bins at Pet Supplies Plus stores in the states, are believed to be linked to an outbreak of human salmonella infections. (USA Today)

Trump says he feels 'very badly' for Acosta on Epstein link

THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- Trump is standing by his embattled labor secretary, saying he feels "very badly" for [redacted] Acosta, as Democratic calls mounted for Acosta's resignation over the generous plea deal he struck with financier Jeffrey Epstein when he was a federal prosecutor. Trump said the White House will look closely at the circumstances surrounding the sex-charges deal negotiated by Acosta. "I feel very badly, actually, for Secretary Acosta because I've known him as being somebody who works so hard and has done such a good job," the president told reporters in the Oval Office.

-- Acosta broke his silence and defended himself on Twitter: "The crimes committed by Epstein are horrific, and I am pleased that NY prosecutors are moving forward with a case based on new evidence," he wrote, suggesting that prosecutors have new evidence he did not when he was Miami's U.S. attorney

Miami's U.S. attorney.

-- Chuck Schumer and Nancy Pelosi called on Acosta to step down, as did most of the 2020 Democratic candidates. "Congressional Republicans supported Acosta, saying issues about the plea deal were vetted at his confirmation hearing in 2017. Acosta's critics said he was not fit to lead an agency that has oversight over human trafficking offenses," John Wagner and Lisa Rein report. "Some attorneys for victims questioned Acosta's tweet saying the evidence was new."

-- Acting White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney is privately urging Trump to dump Acosta, Politico's Eliana [redacted] and Burgess Everett report: "Acosta critics, including Mulvaney, have argued that he has not been aggressive enough in stamping out Obama-era workplace regulations and employment discrimination lawsuits, and they are using the Epstein lawsuit to push him out the door. Mulvaney on Tuesday acknowledged the tension with Acosta but said it was merely part of the job. 'I push all of the Cabinet Secretaries on the deregulatory agenda, as it is a top priority of the President,' Mulvaney said in a statement. … One move that has particularly rankled conservatives is Acosta's decision to allow an employment discrimination lawsuit to proceed against Oracle, the rare Silicon Valley company that is not entirely hostile to the GOP."

-- The Justice Department said Attorney General

William Barr will not recuse himself from the current prosecution of Epstein, but he will not engage in "any retrospective review" of the 2008 plea deal. Matt Zapotosky reports: "Barr had telegraphed at his confirmation hearing in January that he might have to step aside from any Justice Department reviews of Epstein's case, because another lawyer at his then-firm, Kirkland & Ellis, had represented the wealthy financier. The other lawyer, Jay P. Lefkowitz, helped secure [the previous deal]. The split nature of Barr's recusal suggests that federal prosecutors in New York — who unsealed new sex trafficking charges against Epstein on Monday — might not be investigating authorities' handling of the previous allegations. The Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility has been reviewing the handling of Epstein's 2008 plea deal for possible misconduct, and Barr is recused from that."

-- The Miami Herald has reported that Lefkowitz, Barr's colleague at the time, had a one-on-one meeting with Acosta at which the then-U.S. attorney agreed not to prosecute Epstein in federal court.

-- Epstein amassed a network of powerful connections as authorities say that he was simultaneously abusing dozens of young girls. Marc Fisher reports: "Even as dozens of women were looking to police, prosecutors and courts to hold Epstein to account for his alleged sexual abuses, he was amassing a stunning list of contacts and, in some cases, defenders across the worlds of Hollywood moviemaking, medical research, diplomacy, finance, politics and law. … He donated large sums toward neuroscience research at Harvard and a California lab. He invited researchers to his New York house and talked math with them over equations scrawled on a blackboard in his dining room. He flew former president Bill Clinton and actor [redacted] Spacey to Africa to promote AIDS awareness. He was a member of the Trilateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations."

-- The criminal case against Epstein had gone cold, but Miami Herald reporter Julie Brown kept pursuing the story and forced authorities to pay attention. The Times's Tiffany Hsu reports: "Months ago, she published a meticulously researched series of articles about the secret plea deal. ... Her work identified some 80 alleged victims … She worked on the award-winning series with Emily Michot, a visual journalist at The Herald. While Mr. Epstein moved about freely, reportedly building a new compound in the Virgin Islands, Ms. Brown continued to dig, accumulating enough documentation to fill a spare bedroom in her Florida home. … Geoffrey Berman, a federal prosecutor, said at a news conference that his team had been 'assisted by some excellent investigative journalism.'"

-- Trump once threw a party with "28 girls" at Mar-a-Lago. He and Epstein were the only men there. The Times's Annie Karni and Maggie Haberman dig into the relationship: "The year was 1992 and the event was a 'calendar girl' competition, something that George Houraney, a Florida-based businessman who ran American Dream Enterprise, had organized at Mr. Trump's request. "

Enterprise, had organized at Mr. Trump's request. 'I arranged to have some contestants fly in,' Mr. Houraney recalled in an interview on Monday. 'At the very first party, I said, 'Who's coming tonight? I have 28 girls coming.' It was him and Epstein.' Mr. Houraney, who had just partnered with Mr. Trump to host events at his casinos, said he was surprised. 'I said, 'Donald, this is supposed to be a party with V.I.P.s. You're telling me it's you and Epstein?'' In fact, that was the case, an indication of a yearslong friendship between the president and Mr. Epstein that some say ended only after a failed business arrangement between them. ...

"The full nature of their eventual falling out is not clear. ... The relationship with Mr. Trump turned so toxic that Mr. Epstein at one point told friends that he blamed Mr. Trump for his legal problems with the Palm Beach County police. But while Mr. Trump has dismissed the relationship, Mr. Epstein, since the election, has played it up, claiming to people that he was the one who introduced Mr. Trump to his third wife, Melania Trump, though neither of the Trumps has ever mentioned Mr. Epstein playing a role in their meeting."

SELECTIVE AMNESIA:

Darroch during the annual St. Patrick's Day lunch on Capitol Hill in March, inquiring about Brexit and bragging of his strong political standing. … Trump interacted with Darroch on a number of occasions in London and Washington. … But after leaked cables showed Darroch criticizing Trump's administration as 'inept' and the president as 'insecure,' the president seemed to have a memory lapse. 'I don't know the Ambassador but have been told he is a pompous fool,' Trump wrote Tuesday on Twitter. … Asked Tuesday about Epstein, Trump said that he was 'not a fan' of his. … 'I don't think I've spoken to him for 15 years,' Trump said. In a 2002 interview with New York Magazine before Epstein was in trouble, Trump sang a different tune. 'I've known [redacted] for 15 years. Terrific guy. He's a lot of fun to be with. It is even said that he likes beautiful women as much as I do, and many of them are on the younger side,' Trump said. ...

"Among those who have gotten the 'I barely know the guy' treatment: Former acting attorney general Matthew G. Whitaker, conservative commentator Ann Coulter, former lawyer Michael Cohen, fired FBI director James B. Comey, former senior White House aide Stephen K. Bannon, former campaign chairman Paul Manafort, former State Department official Brett McGurk, longtime adviser Roger Stone, former White House aide Cliff Sims, former campaign aide George Papadopoulos and even the rapper Lil Jon, who starred on Trump's reality TV show 'Celebrity Apprentice.' The people change, but the comments are eerily similar — and are something of a joke among some Trump advisers."

-- He is the do-as-I-say, not-as-I-do president: Trump attacked the "Radical Left" last night for encouraging boycotts against companies whose owners support him, even though he has repeatedly advocated the exact same tactic in the past against his perceived critics. Trump was rallying to the defense of Home Depot and its co-founder, Bernard Marcus, who have been at the center of a boycott from liberal customers after the billionaire said he plans to spend part of his fortune supporting Trump's 2020 campaign.

"Among the companies he has targeted are Macy's, which once carried his clothing line but abandoned him after he called Mexicans 'rapists' in his campaign kickoff speech in 2015, and Apple, which he urged to release the cellphone information of the perpetrators of the 2015 shooting in San Bernardino, Calif.," Isaac Stanley-Becker recalls. "Last year, he celebrated plans to boycott Harley-Davidson when the motorcycle company said it would move some production overseas because of steel tariffs imposed by the president. He has also implored his Twitter followers to boycott Megyn Kelly's show on Fox News and suggested that dropping AT&T could compel CNN to improve its coverage of him. … The president has argued that Nike and the NFL would encounter 'anger and boycotts' as long as they support players who kneel during the national anthem to protest police brutality and racial injustice. He struck a different tone on Tuesday, saying it was unfair to penalize a company because one of its co-founders supported 'your favorite President, me!'"

THERE'S STILL A BEAR IN THE WOODS:

-- A congressional panel grilled former Trump associate Felix Sater for more details on the president's failed Moscow project. Karoun Demirjian and Tom Hamburger report: "Sater met privately with House Intelligence Committee staffers investigating interference in the 2016 presidential election and questions surrounding Trump's business interests in Russia in 2016. At issue is Michael Cohen's false testimony before the same committee in 2017 and whether Trump was compromised by his organization's effort to build in Moscow. When pressed Tuesday to provide information about his knowledge of Cohen's testimony, Sater at one point cited lawyer-client privilege and declined to respond, according to accounts of the exchange described by Sater's attorney and a spokesman for the committee."

-- Federal prosecutors no longer want Michael Flynn to testify against his former partner because they doubt his version of events, according to a court filing. Rachel Weiner reports: "The move could have implications for Flynn in D.C. federal court, where he is awaiting sentencing in a case brought by the special counsel. … Flynn had been expected to be a key witness in the Virginia trial of Bijan Rafiekian, with whom he ran a consulting business. A court filing from Rafiekian's attorneys includes an email that Assistant U.S. Attorney James P. Gillis ended by saying prosecutors 'do not necessarily agree' with Flynn's 'characterizations' of how he came to make an inaccurate filing under the Foreign Agent Registration Act for an influence campaign that benefited the Turkish government. According to the email, Flynn says he did not provide false information to his attorneys at the time, did not read the FARA filing before signing it and was not aware that it contained falsehoods. In their filing, Rafiekian's lawyers say they 'interpreted the email's final sentence as a euphemism for, 'we've concluded [Flynn] is lying.'

"The decision by prosecutors could imperil Flynn's ability to avoid incarceration for lying to the FBI unless he is pardoned by Trump. Flynn's defense attorney, Sidney Powell, said in a statement that 'General Flynn is still cooperating with the government even if they don't call him as a witness.'"

-- The Justice Department directed two former members of Mueller's team, Aaron Zebley and James L. Quarles, not to testify before Congress. The Times's Nicholas Fandos and Katie Benner report: "It is unclear what effect the Justice Department's intervention will have on the men's eventual appearances, but it raises the prospect that a deal lawmakers thought they had struck last month for testimony from Mr. Mueller, the former special counsel, and the two prosecutors could still unravel. Both Mr. Zebley and Mr. Quarles have left the Justice Department and are now private citizens, meaning that the department most likely cannot actually block their testimony. But the department's view — depending on how strongly it is expressed — could have a chilling effect on two longtime employees and give them cover to avoid testifying."

-- The House Judiciary Committee will vote tomorrow on whether to subpoena 12 individuals with connections to Trump, including Jared Kushner and Jeff Sessions, for their investigation on whether the president obstructed justice. Colby Itkowitz reports: "The panel will also vote to subpoena documents related to the Trump administration's zero tolerance policy on migrants entering the country illegally, which led to the separation of thousands of children from their parents in 2018. … In addition to seeking subpoenas for Kushner and Sessions, the committee will vote to subpoena former White House chief of staff John Kelly; [Flynn]; former Trump campaign manager Corey Lewandowski; former deputy attorney general Rod J. Rosenstein; former White House deputy chief of staff Rick Dearborn; assistant attorney general Jody Hunt; former White House staff secretary Rob Porter; National Enquirer editor Dylan Howard; American Media Inc. chief executive David Pecker; and Keith Davidson, former attorney for adult-film star Stormy Daniels."

-- Ahead of the former special counsel's testimony next week, many lawmakers admit that they have not read Mueller's report in full. Politico's Darren Samuelsohn reports: "Trump can't give a straight answer about the subject. More than a dozen members of Congress readily admitted … that they too have skipped around rather than studying every one of the special counsel report's 448 pages. And despite the report technically ranking as a best-seller, only a tiny fraction of the American public has actually cracked the cover and really dived in. 'What's the point?' said Sen. Tim Scott (R-S.C.). … The result, say lawmakers, historians and cultural critics, is a giant literacy gap in the country when it comes to the most authoritative examination into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election and whether Trump obstructed that investigation."

-- Pelosi said she will not address "anything more that [Barr] has to say" because he "has lied to Congress." Pelosi's comments came a day after the attorney general accused Democrats of trying "to create some kind of public spectacle" by calling for Mueller to publicly testify next week. "I don't even want to address him," Pelosi said in response. "He has lied to Congress as the attorney general of the United States. He's lied under oath. I'm not speaking to anything more that he has to say." (John Wagner) federal prosecutor who was in charge of the Rich case. That was just three days after Rich, 27, was killed in what police believed was a botched robbery while walking home to his group house in the Bloomingdale neighborhood of Washington, D.C., about 30 blocks north of the Capitol. … In a graphic example of how fake news infects the internet, those precise details popped up the same day on an obscure website, whatdoesitmean.com, that is a frequent vehicle for Russian propaganda. The website's article, which attributed its claims to 'Russian intelligence,' was the first known instance of Rich's murder being publicly linked to a political conspiracy."

-- Russian intelligence agents appear to have been the first people to promote the conspiracy theory that DNC staffer Seth Rich was killed by assassins working for Hillary Clinton. Yahoo News's Michael Isikoff reports: "Russia's foreign intelligence service, known as the SVR, first circulated a phony 'bulletin' — disguised to read as a real intelligence report —about the alleged murder of the former DNC staffer on July 13, 2016, according to the U.S.

-- Christopher Steele, the author of the dossier, was interviewed for 16 hours last month as part of the investigation by Michael Horowitz, the Justice Department's inspector general. Politico's Natasha Bertrand reports: "The extensive, two-day interview took place in London while Trump was in Britain for a state visit, [two] sources said, and delved into Steele's extensive work on Russian interference efforts globally, his intelligence-collection methods and his findings about Trump campaign adviser Carter Page, who the FBI ultimately surveilled. … The interview was contentious at first, the sources added, but investigators ultimately found Steele's testimony credible and even surprising. The takeaway has irked some U.S. officials interviewed as part of the probe — they argue that it shouldn't have taken a foreign national to convince the inspector general that the FBI acted properly in 2016."

THE IMMIGRATION WARS:

-- Border arrests are dropping as Mexico's crackdown on migrants takes effect. Nick Miroff reports: "The number of people taken into custody along the U.S. southern border fell 28 percent in June, a drop that U.S. authorities say reflects the early impact of Mexico's crackdown on Central American migration. Border crossings typically rise in the spring and slump during the scorching summer months, but the drop registered from May to June was significantly larger than in previous years, according to Homeland Security statistics."

-- Migrant children in an overcrowded detention center in Yuma, Ariz., are making sexual assault allegations and saying they fear retaliation from U.S. agents when they complain about poor treatment. NBC News's Jacob Soboroff and Julia Ainsley report: "A 16-year-old Guatemalan boy held in Yuma, Arizona, said he and others in his cell complained about the taste of the water and food they were given. The Customs and Border Protection agents took the mats out of their cell in retaliation, forcing them to sleep on hard concrete. A 15-year-old girl from Honduras described a large, bearded officer putting his hands inside her bra, pulling down her underwear and groping her as part of what was meant to be a routine pat down in front of other immigrants and officers. The girl said 'she felt embarrassed as the officer was speaking in English to other officers and laughing' during the entire process, according to a report of her account."

-- California became the first state to offer health benefits to adult undocumented immigrants. NPR's Bobby Allyn reports: "The measure signed by Gov. Gavin Newsom on Tuesday extends coverage to low-income, undocumented adults age 25 and younger for the state's Medicaid program. Since 2016, California has allowed children under 18 to receive taxpayer-backed healthcare despite immigration status. And, state officials expect that the plan will cover roughly 90,000 people. … In California, extending health benefits to undocumented immigrants is widely popular. A March survey conducted by the nonpartisan Public Policy Institute of California found that almost two-thirds of state residents support providing coverage to young adults who are not legally authorized to live in the country."

-- Two active-duty Marines were arrested for allegedly trying to smuggle three undocumented Mexican immigrants through California. Meagan Flynn reports: "Lance Cpls. Byron Darnell Law II and David Javier Salazar-Quintero, based in Camp Pendleton, Calif., were arraigned Monday in federal court on charges of transporting undocumented immigrants 'for financial gain,' accused of taking jobs from 'recruiters' and following instructions from unknown people in Mexico to make extra cash on the side. They are among several active-duty U.S. troops charged or convicted in recent years of helping immigrants cross the border in exchange for money, highlighting how smugglers have sought to offer the shield of a uniform or credentials to assist desperate immigrants on the journey north."

THE BLACK EXPERIENCE IN AMERICA:

-- "A black principal, four white teens and the 'senior prank' that became a hate crime," by Jessica Contrera: "This was the last day of the year for the class of 2018 at Glenelg High School. There was going to be an awards ceremony, a picnic, that end-of-a-journey feeling that always made [Principal David Burton] so proud of his job. But as he was on his way to work at 6:25 a.m., the assistant principal had called, agitated and yelling about graffiti. 'It's everywhere,' he kept saying, so Burton had leaned on the gas and rushed the last few miles. … He turned a corner and saw something written in large capital letters on the sidewalk: 'BURTON IS A NIGGER.' He paused only for a moment, looking at the words, trying to comprehend that all of this was real. Later, school district officials, county administrators and prosecutors would have a name for what happened here. They would repeat it, condemn it and vow to prevent it from occurring again. Hate crime."

The video of their encounter went viral online. (Eli Rosenberg)

-- Elijah Al-Amin, a black teenager, was stabbed to death at a convenience store in Arizona by a white man, allegedly because he was playing rap music in his car. The man, Michael Adams, stabbed the 17-year-old two days after Adams was released from prison, where he had completed a sentence for assault and theft. Chester said he is still in talks with Google about the job, but in the meantime, his hometown of Columbus, Ga., has put up a billboard of the doodle. (Allison Klein)

Tom Steyer: 'Fundamental Change' | Campaign 2020

2020 WATCH:

-- Billionaire activist Tom Steyer formally entered the Democratic presidential primary with an announcement video outlining his pledges to reduce corporations' political influence and address climate change. Chelsea Janes reports: "In January, when he announced he would not run for president, Steyer said that rather than entering the race he would turn his attention fully to pressuring members of Congress to start impeachment proceedings against [Trump]. … On Tuesday, as he announced his presidential bid, Steyer did not mention impeachment or Trump, although the president was briefly seen in the video. Trump's former campaign chairman, Paul Manafort, was also seen in the video being led down a hallway in handcuffs. … Steyer will have one week to accumulate 65,000 donors to qualify for the second Democratic debate, which will take place at the end of the month."

-- Biden told a voter he'll "go further" than cutting incarceration by 50 percent. BuzzFeed News's Katherine Miller reports: "In a video shared ... by the ACLU, Biden tells a man, Keith Albert, who identifies himself as an ACLU voter, that he'd 'go further than' cutting incarceration by half. 'Would you commit to cutting incarceration by 50%?' Albert asks Biden. 'More than that. We can do it more than that,' he responds. Last month in Concord, New Hampshire, another self-identified ACLU voter asked if Biden would 'commit to cutting the prison population overall, and specifically the federal prison population, in half' — a slightly different wording."

-- CNN announced its rules for the next Democratic presidential debates. From CNN's Mark Preston: "The upcoming Democratic presidential debates will feature opening and closing statements and two hours of debate time each night … While candidates will not officially learn if they make the Detroit stage until July 17, Tuesday's call with the 20-plus Democratic campaigns was held to help them prepare for the debate should their respective candidates qualify, a CNN spokesperson said." The rules include:

- Colored lights will be used to help candidates manage their remaining response times.
- A candidate attacked by name by another candidate will be given 30 seconds to respond.
- There will be no show of hands or one-word questions.
- A candidate who constantly interrupts others will have their time reduced.
- Questions posed by moderators will appear on the screen for viewers.

-- The DNC announced that the third debate, which will be hosted by ABC News and Univision, will be held in Houston.

-- Democrats are increasingly focused on portraying

-- Democrats are increasingly focused on portraying Mitch McConnell as a villain in a bid to win back the Senate and energize liberals. [redacted] Costa reports: "That effort gained new momentum on Tuesday as Amy McGrath, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel and combat pilot, announced she would challenge McConnell (R-Ky.) and blamed him for turning Washington into 'something we despise' in a campaign video that drew millions of views. While McGrath faces a steep climb against McConnell in ruby-red Kentucky, which President Trump carried by 30 percentage points in 2016, she is expected to raise significant funds from national Democrats and provide the party with a relentless and high-profile opponent."

-- Though Sen. Pat [redacted] (R-Kan.) won't make an endorsement in the Republican primary race to replace him, he said former Kansas secretary of state Kris Kobach faces a "very difficult" path to the Senate. The Kansas City Star's Bryan Lowry reports: "'It seems to me if you have just lost a statewide race, that the chances of you winning another statewide race would be very difficult,' [redacted] told reporters. 'I have not talked to Kris about this. I did talk to him earlier, but that was all about allegedly being the head of DHS. But the votes weren't there.' … Kobach's campaign manager Steve Drake rejected [redacted]' analysis of the race and also hit back against the criticism from national Republicans. … Kobach's entry could ramp up efforts to recruit Secretary of State [redacted] Pompeo into the race."

-- The RNC is threatening to withhold support from

The RNC is threatening to withhold support from candidates who refuse to use the party's newly established online fundraising tool, WinRed, as tensions over the future of the party's grass-roots fundraising efforts reach a breaking point. Politico's [redacted] Isenstadt reports: "The moves illustrate how Republican leaders are waging a determined campaign to make WinRed the sole provider of its small donor infrastructure — and to torpedo any competitors. On Monday, the RNC sent an eight-page cease-and-desist letter to Paul Dietzel, a Republican digital strategist who earlier this month launched Give.GOP, a fundraising platform that includes a directory through which donors can give to party candidates and organizations. In the letter, RNC chief counsel Justin Riemer writes that while Give.GOP has a page inviting donors to give to the RNC, the committee hasn't yet received any funds from the platform or received any outreach from it. Riemer also accuses Dietzel of using the committee's trademark and logo without its permission."

-- Sarah McBride, a transgender activist who made waves after speaking at the Democratic National Convention in 2016, is now running for Delaware state Senate. Deanna Paul reports: "If she wins the 2020 race to succeed Sen. Harris McDowell, who is retiring at the end of his term, McBride will be the state's first elected transgender senator. … Now serving as national press secretary for the Human Rights Campaign, the nation's largest LGTBQ lobbying group, she has continued to be a force for the movement through the Trump-Pence administration, which she called 'one of the most explicitly anti-LGBTQ

THE NEW WORLD ORDER:

-- Mexican Finance Minister Carlos Urzúa abruptly resigned, dealing a major blow to President Andrés Manuel López Obrador's government. Mary Beth Sheridan reports: Urzúa quit after accusing López Obrador's government of making decisions "that were not grounded in evidence and of naming officials who were ignorant of economics. … López Obrador has sought to woo the business community by pledging a balanced budget and a stable peso, even as he has launched ambitious social programs to help youth and the poor. But the peso immediately slid after Urzúa announced his resignation on Twitter, falling more than 2 percent, to about 19.3 pesos to the dollar. It later recovered some ground after López Obrador named a U.S.-educated technocrat, Arturo Herrera, as Urzúa's replacement."

-- Iran's release after four years in prison of a Lebanese businessman was meant to be seen as an opening for U.S.-Iranian talks. But the gesture wasn't enough for Washington. Reuters's Lesley Wroughton, Jonathan Landay and Arshad Mohammed report: ""It was a missed opportunity," one U.S. source said of Nizar Zakka's June 11 release and the U.S. decision not to pursue talks. 'We should have explored whether there was something there.' A second source — who is familiar with Iran's thinking and spoke on condition of anonymity — said Iran freed Zakka as a signal it wanted to cool tensions that have fueled fears of a war, and described his release as 'a goodwill gesture.' … Iranian officials declined to discuss whether it was an overture, or what concessions Tehran wants from Washington."

-- The Pentagon's transition plan underscores an upheaval in leadership. Missy Ryan reports: "Mark Esper, who became acting defense secretary on June 24 after his predecessor, then-acting defense secretary Patrick Shanahan, abruptly stepped aside, is expected to hand over to a third acting secretary, Navy Secretary Richard V. Spencer, when the White House formally submits Esper's nomination to the Senate for confirmation. Under a federal law known as the Vacancies Act, Esper, who has been serving as Army secretary since 2017, is required to step aside while the Senate considers his nomination for the top Pentagon job. When he will do so is not clear, as the requirement will be activated only when the White House officially transmits his nomination to the Senate. Pentagon chief of staff [redacted] Chewning, speaking to reporters at the Pentagon, said the White House was expected to convey Esper's nomination 'shortly.'"

-- The Pentagon said it spent at least $1.2 million on Trump's Fourth of July celebrations. CBS News's

Kathryn Watson reports: “That figure does not represent the full cost of the event to taxpayers, but it does include the cost of flying hours and transportation for tanks and fighting vehicle platforms. Funding for the demonstrations, a Pentagon spokesman says, came from the services' training budgets for flying hours, and additional funds were used for the transportation of equipment. The Pentagon noted it's spent comparable amounts, if not more, on other events. The Pentagon noted that San Francisco Fleet Week cost $1.8 million in 2017, and Los Angeles Fleet Week cost $1.6 million.”

NEVER FORGET JAMAL KHASHOGGI:

-- After journalist Jamal Khashoggi was killed at the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul, a number of lobbying firms and think tanks in Washington began making a rare move: They publicly severed ties with Saudi Arabia. Months later, however, the country’s efforts to continue influencing U.S. policy remain strong. Beth Reinhard, Jonathan O’Connell and Tom Hamburger report: “Since fall 2018, high-powered lobbyists and lawyers have reaped millions of dollars for assisting the kingdom as it works to develop nuclear power, buy American-made weapons and prolong U.S. assistance to the Saudi-led weapons and prolong U.S. assistance to the Saudi-led coalition waging war in Yemen, foreign lobbying records show. One Washington-based communications firm — whose parent company initially expressed concern when Khashoggi disappeared — recently reported collecting nearly $19 million for what it says was several years of work for the Saudi government. A New York-based public relations firm run by a former Clinton administration appointee signed on in February to represent a Saudi interest for as much as $120,000 a month, filings show. The firms representing the kingdom operate under wide political cover provided by Trump. …

"Saudi Arabia is one of the highest-spending countries seeking to influence U.S. policy, ranking ninth in an analysis by the Center for Responsive Politics that reviewed the flow of foreign money from 2017 to the present. Roughly 20 firms are registered to lobby for Saudi interests, compared with more than 25 before Khashoggi's death, foreign lobbying filings show. … At least five firms did end up cutting business ties with Saudi interests in the fall: Glover Park Group, BGR Group, Harbour Group, CGCN Group and Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, filings show. Among the lobbying firms still representing Saudi interests are Hogan Lovells, which has been paid $1.6 million since fall; and McKeon Group, led by Howard 'Buck' McKeon, a former Republican chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, which has received $600,000. Two law firms are offering advice on the kingdom's efforts to build nuclear power plants: Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman, which got nearly $1.9 million between August 2018 and January; and King & Spalding, which received $946,000 in November."

-- Saudi Arabia invited Reporters without Borders, a global press freedom group, to the kingdom. Kareem Fahim reports: "The four-person delegation visited in April and met with senior Saudi officials, including the public prosecutor and the minister of justice, according to Christophe Deloire, who spoke publicly about the visit for the first time. The delegation's members demanded a thorough investigation of the killing of Khashoggi and pressed for the 'unconditional and immediate release' of at least 30 journalists that Reporters without Borders says are unfairly imprisoned in the kingdom, Deloire said. The invitation was the first from the Saudi government to RSF and the level of access the delegation was given was extremely rare, he said."

-- The Saudi princess who has been accused of ordering her bodyguard to assault a workman in Paris has gone on trial in absentia. From the BBC: "Princess Hassa bint Salman - Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman's sister - faces charges of complicity to violence with a weapon and complicity to kidnap. Her bodyguard … is also on trial. … [Both] deny wrongdoing. … Egyptian workman Ashraf Eid told police that, in September 2016, he was working in the Saudi king's apartment on the exclusive Avenue Foch in Paris when he went to take pictures of the bathroom on his mobile phone so that he could remember where items were placed before he started. However, the princess suspected him of wanting to sell images he had princess suspected him of wanting to sell images he had taken of her in the mirror and called the guard, French reports say. … According to one French account, the workman accused the princess of saying: 'This dog must be killed, he doesn't deserve to live. -- Nicki Minaj canceled a concert in Saudi Arabia after better "educating herself on the issues." Helena Andrews-Dyer reports: "Just one week after her performance at the Jeddah World Fest was announced, Minaj said in a statement that 'after careful consideration' she could no longer participate. 'While I want nothing more than to bring my show to fans in Saudi Arabia, after better educating myself on the issues, I believe it is important for me to make clear my support for the rights of women, the LGBTQ community and freedom of expression,' Minaj said in a statement Tuesday to the Associated Press."

THE BRAVE NEW WORLD, BROUGHT TO YOU BY BIG TECH:

-- Trump summoned Republican lawmakers, political strategists and social media stars to the White House to discuss the "opportunities" of the Web in a summit to discuss the "opportunities" of the Web in a summit that critics said could empower online provocateurs. Tony Romm, Michael Scherer and Amy B Wang report: "The high-profile gathering follows months of attacks from Trump claiming that Facebook, Google and Twitter ... secretly censor right-leaning users, websites and other content online, a charge of political bias that the tech giants strongly deny.. … But Trump hasn't invited any of the major tech companies, people familiar with the White House plans say, opting instead to grant a powerful stage to people who have a track record of sending inflammatory tweets and videos and posting other troubling content that social media sites increasingly are under pressure to remove. Among the expected attendees are James O'Keefe, the founder of Project Veritas, which has released secretly recorded videos of subjects, including a Google executive, in an attempt to paint them as politically biased. Another invitee, Ben Garrison, has published cartoons that have drawn sharp rebukes from the Anti-Defamation League and the Southern Poverty Law Center for including hateful text and imagery."

-- Apple, Amazon, Facebook and Google executives will testify to Congress next week as part of the House's antitrust investigation. Tony Romm reports: "The hearing, scheduled for July 16 in front of the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee that deals with antitrust, will bring simmering Democratic and Republican frustrations with Silicon Valley into public view, potentially setting the stage for further scrutiny — or regulation — of an industry that has long insisted that its size doesn't harm rivals or consumers." (Amazon founder Jeff Bezos owns rivals of consumers." (Amazon founder Jeff Bezos owns The Post.)

-- Twitter will ban posts that dehumanize people based on their religion. Hamza Shaban reports: "The update builds on Twitter's existing policies that bar the promotion of violence, threats and harassment against people in protected groups. But the company has acknowledged that what many people consider abusive tweets may not actually violate Twitter's rules. New policies banning dehumanizing language are an attempt to close that gap, Twitter said. … Twitter won't automatically flag offending posts, but will review them when they are reported by users. The company said it will require that dehumanizing posts are removed from the platform, starting Tuesday."

-- Netflix has lost two of its most popular shows — "Friends" and "The Office" — as old media companies begin to flex their streaming muscles. CNBC's [redacted] Sherman reports: "Disney, AT&T's WarnerMedia, and Comcast's NBCUniversal are all launching direct-to-consumer streaming services by the first quarter of 2020. And they're all coming after Netflix. Sure, there will be enough consumer dollars to go around for Netflix to keep its massive subscriber base, 155 million globally, growing. But there's little doubt that part of the motivation of legacy media companies embracing subscription streaming services is to capture some of Netflix's valuation — or bring CEO Reed Hastings' behemoth back down to earth."

I am pretty sure I thought he was already dead.* The contrast between the quietude of Perot's last aging years and the blaring trumpets of his 20th-century business and political career is so stark it takes some effort now to recall how large this cocksure Texas bantam once loomed. … But for people who on occasion (perhaps several times a week) respond to the

-- It will be dry again today, but prepare for high humidity. The Capital Weather Gang forecasts: "Our brief respite from high humidity continues today as we extend our break from showers and storms as well. We do trend a touch hotter today, before the humidity and storm chances come roaring back tomorrow. A few showers or storms may linger Friday, with a hot but mostly dry weekend the way it looks now."

-- Residents assessed the damage left behind by the storm that rocked the city on Monday. Fredrick Kunkle and Cortlynn Stark report: "A day later, things returned to normal except for a few isolated spots, with officials saying most of the mayhem had been short-lived. But for some, the work was just beginning. Ayers Variety & Hardware was open, drawing enough power from a generator to make the cash register work. An employee escorted customers through the dimly lit store to help them find what they needed. … In Montgomery County, officials were making arrangements for permanent repairs to a giant sinkhole that opened on Belfast Road in the Woodrock neighborhood of Potomac. … In Arlington, 20th Street North and 18th Street remain closed as officials work to make repairs there. They are expected to be fixed by end of the week."

-- The D.C. Council stripped Jack Evans of his chairmanship on the Committee on Finance and Revenue and said it will hire a law firm to investigate him. Steve Thompson reports: "The council stopped short of stripping Evans of other committee assignments — with the embattled, longtime lawmaker casting a deciding vote. … Brianne K. Nadeau (D-Ward 1), who voted in favor of taking away all of Evans's committee assignments, said the lawmaker's situation has already left voters in his ward disenfranchised. … Evans spoke few words during Tuesday's discussions, looking tired and occasionally puffing his cheeks as he exhaled."

-- Phil Freelon, the architect who helped design the African American Museum, died at 66. Matt Schudel reports: “He had complications from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, sometimes known as Lou Gehrig’s disease, said a son, Deen Freelon. Since 1990, Mr. Freelon led an architectural firm in Durham that specialized in designing public buildings, including other cultural centers devoted to African American life in Baltimore, Atlanta, Charlotte, San Francisco and Greensboro, N.C. He led a consortium of several architectural firms — formally known as the Freelon Adjaye Bond/SmithGroup — that won the design competition for the National Museum of African American History and Culture in 2009. Their proposal was chosen, in a unanimous vote, over submissions from such renowned architects as Richard Meier, I.M. Pei and Norman Foster.”

Trump might win a Pyrrhic victory against Obamacare, as the balance of judicial power shifts his way

People wait in line to enter the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit in New Orleans on Tuesday to hear arguments on whether Congress effectively invalidated the Affordable Care Act when it zeroed out the tax imposed on those who choose not to buy insurance. (Gerald Herbert/AP)

with Joanie Greve and Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: Oral arguments in New Orleans on Tuesday over the future of the Affordable Care Act foreshadowed the massive impact that President Trump's free rein to fill the courts with like-minded judges will probably have on American jurisprudence over the next generation.

For now, Trump continues to suffer legal setbacks. In a case involving his push to add a citizenship question to the 2020 Census, a district court judge rejected the Justice Department's request to change out its team of lawyers. Separately, an appellate court in New York upheld a lower court's decision that it is unconstitutional for Trump to block critics on Twitter because he's a public official who uses the platform to communicate with constituents.

But the balance of power is changing on the courts each week to become more favorable to Trump, and it sure sounded like the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit might be ready to uphold at least parts of a federal district judge's decision in Texas that the entire 2010 health-care law is unconstitutional because the 2017 GOP tax bill got rid of the individual mandate to buy insurance. Two of the three judges on the panel expressed skepticism during the oral arguments that Obamacare can remain intact since the mandate was how Chief Justice John [redacted] justified upholding the law in 2012.

Judge Kurt Engelhardt, whom Trump put on the bench just last year, was the more outspoken of the two. He repeatedly noted that the law was written without an explicit feature guaranteeing that if one part were ever removed by Congress or the courts, the rest would remain in place. He suggested that it's the job of Congress to forge a solution. He questioned whether the courts should be "taxidermist for every legislative big-game accomplishment that Congress achieves." The judge who seemed to largely agree with him was appointed by George W. Bush. A third judge, appointed by Jimmy Carter, stayed silent during the 90-minute hearing, per Amy Goldstein, who was in the courtroom for us.

Engelhardt was grilling attorneys representing Democratic attorneys general and the Democratic House. Normally it would have been Justice Department lawyers defending a federal law, but the Trump administration is refusing to do so and told the 5th Circuit this spring that the administration agrees with the plaintiffs that it should be struck down.

If Trump gets what he's hoping for in New Orleans, there's a strong argument to be made that the president will be like the proverbial dog that catches up with the truck. Health care – the issue that dogged Republican candidates in the 2018 midterms more than any other – would almost certainly take a starring role in the 2020 campaign. The Supreme Court would probably then hear an appeal, in which [redacted] would probably again cast a deciding vote – one way or another – in June of an election year.

-- Here are three telling illustrations of how the 5th Circuit could hand Trump a Pyrrhic victory:

1) Despite a decade of efforts to kill Obamacare, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) refused to say yesterday whether he supports the suit to invalidate the law. "I think the important thing for the public to know is there is nobody in the Senate not in favor of covering preexisting conditions," he said at his weekly news conference. "And if it were, under any of these scenarios, to go away, we would act quickly on a bipartisan basis to restore it."

Trump has had a historically large number of judicial vacancies to fill during his first two-and-a-half years largely because McConnell blocked consideration of so many of Barack Obama's nominees once he seized control of the Senate in 2015. It was not just Merrick Garland.

2) Sen. Susan Collins (R-Maine), who cast a key vote for the tax bill that could be used as a pretext by judicial activists to repeal Obamacare, is trying to distance herself from the lawsuit challenging the ACA. She also voted to confirm Engelhardt to the 5th Circuit, in addition to Justice Brett Kavanaugh. These votes could imperil her reelection next year. She issued a statement saying she opposes

Trump's decision not to defend the health-care law in court. "The Affordable Care Act remains the law of the land, and it is the Department of Justice's duty to defend it," Collins said.

3) "Democrats are savoring the moment," Paige Winfield Cunningham reports in the Health 202. "They're spending the week bludgeoning Republicans over the high-stakes lawsuit, which they well know is prime fodder for 2020 attacks. The House Oversight Committee will hold a hearing this morning dubbed 'The Trump Administration's Attack on the ACA: Reversal in Court Case Threatens Health Care for Millions of Americans,' where a number of patients and consumers advocates will testify. The Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, the Democratic Attorneys General Association and the Democrat-affiliated group Protect Our Care launched hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of print and digital ads around the country. Democrats in Congress delivered floor speeches castigating their GOP colleagues. House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jerry Nadler (D-N.Y.) said he's also planning a hearing on the lawsuit."

-- As the judges in Louisiana considered the fate of health care for millions of people, the Senate voted 53 to 45 on party lines to confirm another controversial Trump nominee to the 9th Circuit, the court of appeals that has most often drawn the president's ire. Hailey Fuchs notes that Daniel Bress's confirmation gives Trump his seventh judge on the historically liberal bench, which now has 16 judges nominated by Democratic presidents and 12 by Republicans. The court still has one vacancy that Trump plans to fill. Bress, who once clerked for the late Antonin Scalia, was nominated to fill the vacancy left by [redacted] Kozinski, whom Kavanaugh once clerked for and who resigned in December 2017 amid allegations of sexual misconduct.

British Ambassador Kim Darroch speaks at an afternoon tea hosted by the British Embassy to mark Trump's inauguration in January 2017. (Paul Morigi/Getty Images)

-- British Ambassador Kim Darroch resigned from his post this morning after three days of public attacks from Trump, who was angry about leaked cables that showed the diplomat privately described the president as "inept" and "insecure." Jennifer Hassan reports: "Trump blasted Darroch in a series of tweets this week, calling him 'a pompous fool' and said his administration would not work with him." In his resignation letter, Darroch said the "current situation is making it impossible for me to carry out my role as I would like. Although my posting is not due to end until the end of this year, I believe in the current circumstances the responsible course is to allow the appointment of a new ambassador."

-- Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell has two messages for Congress this morning: Central bank independence is critical, and an interest-rate cut is likely at the end of July. Heather Long got a first look at his prepared testimony before the House Financial Services Committee: "Since [June], it appears that uncertainties around trade tensions and concerns about the strength of the global economy continue to weigh on the U.S. economic outlook. Inflation pressures remain muted," Powell will say. The U.S. economy is doing "reasonably well," Powell will add, but he notes that business investment has "slowed notably," probably because of the uncertainty around trade and global growth. He will also stress that the economic gains have not been shared evenly by everyone. Hispanics, African Americans and people in rural communities are continuing to have a harder time finding jobs that pay well.

-- Reader feedback: Many of you, on the left and right, emailed in response to yesterday's Big Idea to say that manufacturers should keep raising wages for workers if they want to make their industry more appealing to young people and close the skills gap. Readers wrote that higher salaries would have a bigger impact than any marketing campaign from a trade association in making the sector more appealing.

A protester dressed as a character from "The Handmaid's Tale" walks back to her car in May after participating in a rally against restrictions on abortion rights in Montgomery, Ala. (Julie Bennett/Getty Images)

-- Support for legal abortion has hit a 24-year high as more states pass severe restrictions on the procedure, according to a new Washington Post-ABC News poll. Emily Guskin and Scott Clement report: "The Post-ABC poll finds a 60 percent majority who say abortion should be legal in most or all cases, up from 55 percent in a 2013 Post-ABC poll, and tying the record high level of support from 1995. The latest survey finds 36 percent say abortion should be illegal in all or most cases, also tying a record low. A 41 percent plurality of Americans want their own state to avoid making it either harder or easier for women to have access to abortion. Fewer, 32 percent, say their states should make it easier and fewer still, 24 percent say their states should make it harder for women to have access to abortion. … Even within party ranks, allowing or banning abortion in all cases is a minority position.

Among Democrats, 77 percent say abortion should be at least mostly legal, but just over 4 in 10 (42 percent) say it should be legal in all cases. Among Republicans, 52 percent say it should be at least mostly illegal, but fewer than a quarter, 22 percent, want it to be illegal in all cases."

State Rep. Greg Murphy debates Joan Perry on the campus of Pitt Community College. (Deborah Griffin/Greenville Daily Reflector/AP)

-- North Carolina state Rep. Greg Murphy won the Republican primary for the state's reliably red 3rd Congressional District, besting pediatrician Joan Perry by 20 points in a special election. Felicia Sonmez reports: "The race had been viewed by some as a test of women's standing within the Republican Party. Perry had won the endorsements of all 13 House Republican women and received nearly $1 million in support from an outside group created to boost female Republican House candidates. But in the end, she was outflanked by Murphy, who was backed by several House Republican heavyweights, including Reps. Jim Jordan (Ohio) and Mark Meadows (N.C.)."

-- Cashing in: Joe Biden, who continues calling himself "Middle Class Joe" on the campaign trail, earned $15.6 million over the past two years. Matt Viser and Anu Narayanswamy: "The vast majority of the former vice president's income — which totaled $11 million in 2017 and $4.6 million in 2018 — came from book payments and speaking fees, according to newly released tax returns and financial disclosure forms required of federal office-seekers. All told, the Bidens made nearly five times more in the past two years than the next- highest earner, Sen. Kamala D. Harris (D-Calif.), who with her husband earned $3.3 million. Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.) and Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) each took in about $1.7 million in family income. … Since leaving office, he has benefited from an explosion of wealth. He gave 47 speeches, according to the new filings, with fees as high as $234,000. His speaking fees and book payments amounted to $10 million in 2017 and $3.2 million in 2018. Biden was also a professor at the University of Pennsylvania, where he was paid $371,159 in 2017 and $405,368 in 2018."

Shane Bieber of the Indians pitches for the American League last night at Progressive Field in Cleveland. (Jason Miller/Getty Images)

-- On the strength of its pitchers, the American League will get home-field advantage in the World Series after a 4-3 win in the All-Star Game. Dave Sheinen reports from Cleveland: "Perhaps someone sneaked into the bowels of Progressive Field on Tuesday and replaced the regular, turbocharged 2019 baseballs with century-old versions from the Dead Ball Era. How else to explain — in the midst of the biggest home run binge in the history of the sport, one year after the most homers ever hit in an All-Star Game and one night after the most electrifying performance in the history of the Home Run Derby — the relatively pedestrian showing in this year's Midsummer Classic? There is one other possible explanation, of course, and it is the one, conspiracy theories aside, that will have to suffice: There are great pitchers scattered across this game (shellshocked as they may be by the nightly home run binges), and on Tuesday night they shone brightest. ... The victory was the seventh in a row by the AL, its 14th in the past 17 and 19th in the past 23 All-Star Games."

-- MLB Commissioner Rob Manfred denied yesterday that the league has knowingly "juiced" baseballs to increase the number of home runs this season, despite mounting complaints from pitchers. Manfred attributed the spike in homers to naturally occurring variances in manufacturing baseballs and vowed transparency as officials move to correct the problem, per Sheinin.

GET SMART FAST:

1. Ross Perot, the Texas billionaire who waged two unsuccessful bids for president as an independent, died at 89. Perot was lauded for starting two software companies that later sold for billions, and his reputation as a successful entrepreneur helped him attract nearly 20 million votes in 1992 — marking the highest vote share for an independent or third-party bid since Theodore Roosevelt and ultimately contributing to Bill Clinton's victory. (Donald P. Baker)
2. Virginia's GOP-controlled General Assembly ended a special session on gun legislation after about 90 minutes. The Virginia Senate voted along party lines to adjourn until after the state legislative elections this November, and the House quickly followed suit. The Republican House speaker accused Democratic Gov. Ralph Northam (D) of an "election-year stunt" for ordering the special session shortly after the May 31 mass shooting in Virginia Beach. (Gregory S. Schneider, Laura Vozzella and Antonio Olivo)
3. Democratic megadonor Ed Buck is facing allegations of human trafficking and revenge porn months after he came under fire when two black men died from overdoses in his home. Buck is now facing two more charges in an ongoing case brought by the mother of one of the two men who died in his West

Hollywood apartment. (The Daily Beast)

4. A Republican candidate for Mississippi governor, [redacted] Foster, refused to allow a female reporter to travel with him alone because of her gender. Foster's campaign told journalist Larrison Campbell she would need to be accompanied by a male colleague if she wanted to go on a 15-hour trip with the candidate, saying the "optics" of the candidate with a woman could be used to insinuate an extramarital affair. (Mississippi Today)

5. A Senate bill would block federal funding for the 2026 World Cup until the U.S. Soccer Federation agrees to give the national women's and men's teams the same compensation. The proposal by Sen. Joe Manchin III (D-W.Va.) comes after the women won the World Cup this weekend as the crowd chanted, "Equal pay!" (Des Bieler)

6. An inspector general report accuses the hospice industry of repeatedly ignoring patients' pain and needs. One particularly grisly example recounted how a patient in Missouri was so neglected that his family had to make a trip to the emergency room to treat a "maggot infestation" where his feeding tube entered his abdomen. (Chris Rowland)

7. Electric scooters have spread to several European capitals, where they are sparking the same complaints heard on this side of the Atlantic. The mayor of Paris condemned the scooters as causing "not far from anarchy" on the city's roads, and residents of Berlin have complained of drunk riders and at least one instance of a man trying to access a high-speed motorway on his e-scooter. (Rick Noack)

8. Pig-ear dog treats were recalled in 33 states because of a potential salmonella contamination, the FDA announced. The treats, which were sold in bins at Pet Supplies Plus stores in the states, are believed to be linked to an outbreak of human salmonella infections. (USA Today)

9. A rare polio-like illness marked by muscle weakness or paralysis affected 233 people in 2018, the majority of them children. The CDC said the number of recorded acute flaccid myelitis cases last year made it the worst year since the government started tracking the illness in 2014. (Philadelphia Inquirer)
10. A man who was swept over the largest waterfall at Niagara Falls survived. Reports of the incident sent Niagara Parks Police scrambling to get to the waterfalls early Tuesday morning, where they found the man with non-life-threatening injuries. (Allyson Chiu)

Trump says he feels 'very badly' for Acosta on Epstein link

THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- Trump is standing by his embattled labor secretary, saying he feels "very badly" for [redacted] Acosta, as Democratic calls mounted for Acosta's resignation over the generous plea deal he struck with financier Jeffrey Epstein when he was a federal prosecutor. Trump said the White House will look closely at the circumstances surrounding the sex-charges deal negotiated by Acosta. "I feel very badly, actually, for Secretary Acosta because I've known him as being somebody who works so hard and has done such a good job," the president told reporters in the Oval Office.

-- Acosta broke his silence and defended himself on Twitter: "The crimes committed by Epstein are horrific, and I am pleased that NY prosecutors are moving forward with a case based on new evidence," he wrote, suggesting that prosecutors have new evidence he did not when he was Miami's U.S. attorney.

-- Chuck Schumer and Nancy Pelosi called on Acosta to step down, as did most of the 2020 Democratic candidates. "Congressional Republicans supported Acosta, saying issues about the plea deal were vetted at his confirmation hearing in 2017. Acosta's critics said he was not fit to lead an agency that has oversight over human trafficking offenses," John Wagner and Lisa Rein report. "Some attorneys for victims questioned Acosta's tweet saying the evidence was new."

-- Acting White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney is privately urging Trump to dump Acosta, Politico's Eliana Johnson and Burgess Everett report: "Acosta critics, including Mulvaney, have argued that he has not been aggressive enough in stamping out Obama-era workplace regulations and employment discrimination lawsuits, and they are using the Epstein lawsuit to push him out the door. Mulvaney on Tuesday acknowledged the tension with Acosta but said it was merely part of the job. 'I push all of the Cabinet Secretaries on the deregulatory agenda, as it is a top priority of the President,' Mulvaney said in a statement. … One move that has particularly rankled conservatives is Acosta's decision to allow an employment discrimination lawsuit to proceed against Oracle, the rare Silicon Valley company that is not entirely hostile to the GOP."

Democrats demand Acosta resign over Epstein deal

-- The Justice Department said Attorney General William Barr will not recuse himself from the current prosecution of Epstein, but he will not engage in "any retrospective review" of the 2008 plea deal. Matt Zapotosky reports: "Barr had telegraphed at his confirmation hearing in January that he might have to step aside from any Justice Department reviews of Epstein's case, because another lawyer at his then-firm, Kirkland & Ellis, had represented the wealthy financier. The other lawyer, Jay P. Lefkowitz, helped secure [the previous deal]. The split nature of Barr's recusal suggests that federal prosecutors in New York — who unsealed new sex trafficking charges against Epstein on Monday — might not be investigating authorities' handling of the previous allegations. The Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility has been reviewing the handling of Epstein's 2008 plea deal for possible misconduct, and Barr is recused from that."

-- The Miami Herald has reported that Lefkowitz, Barr's colleague at the time, had a one-on-one meeting with Acosta at which the then-U.S. attorney agreed not to prosecute Epstein in federal court.

-- Epstein amassed a network of powerful connections as authorities say that he was simultaneously abusing dozens of young girls. Marc Fisher reports: "Even as dozens of women were looking to police, prosecutors and courts to hold Epstein to account for his alleged sexual abuses, he was amassing a stunning list of contacts and, in some cases, defenders across the worlds of Hollywood moviemaking, medical research, diplomacy, finance, politics and law. … He donated large sums toward neuroscience research at Harvard and a California lab. He invited researchers to his New York house and talked math with them over equations scrawled on a blackboard in his dining room. He flew former president Bill Clinton and actor [redacted] Spacey to Africa to promote AIDS awareness. He was a member of the Trilateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations."

-- The criminal case against Epstein had gone cold, but Miami Herald reporter Julie Brown kept pursuing the story and forced authorities to pay attention. The Times's Tiffany Hsu reports: "Months ago, she published a meticulously researched series of articles about the secret plea deal. ... Her work identified some 80 alleged victims … She worked on the award-winning series with Emily Michot, a visual journalist at The Herald. While Mr. Epstein moved about freely, reportedly building a new compound in the Virgin Islands, Ms. Brown continued to dig, accumulating enough documentation to fill a spare bedroom in her Florida home. … Geoffrey Berman, a federal prosecutor, said at a news conference that his team had been 'assisted by some excellent investigative journalism.'"

-- Trump once threw a party with "28 girls" at Mar-a-Lago. He and Epstein were the only men there. The Times's Annie Karni and Maggie Haberman dig into the relationship: "The year was 1992 and the event was a 'calendar girl' competition, something that George Houraney, a Florida-based businessman who ran American Dream Enterprise, had organized at Mr. Trump's request. 'I arranged to have some contestants fly in,' Mr. Houraney recalled in an interview on Monday. 'At the very first party, I said, 'Who's coming tonight? I have 28 girls coming.' It was him and Epstein.' Mr. Houraney, who had just partnered with Mr. Trump to host events at his casinos, said he was surprised. 'I said, 'Donald, this is supposed to be a party with V.I.P.s. You're telling me it's you and Epstein?'' In fact, that was the case, an indication of a yearslong friendship between the president and Mr. Epstein that some say ended only after a failed business arrangement between them. ...

"The full nature of their eventual falling out is not clear. ... The relationship with Mr. Trump turned so toxic that Mr. Epstein at one point told friends that he blamed Mr. Trump for his legal problems with the Palm Beach County police. But while Mr. Trump has dismissed the relationship, Mr. Epstein, since the election, has played it up, claiming to people that he was the one who introduced Mr. Trump to his third wife, Melania Trump, though neither of the Trumps has ever mentioned Mr. Epstein playing a role in their meeting."

SELECTIVE AMNESIA:

-- Trump has a pattern of quickly minimizing ties with people who criticize him or who find themselves facing an onslaught of negative attention that reflects poorly on him. Epstein and Darroch are only the two latest examples. Josh Dawsey reports: "Trump sat across from Darroch during the annual St. Patrick's Day lunch on Capitol Hill in March, inquiring about Brexit and bragging of his strong political standing. … Trump interacted with Darroch on a number of occasions in London and Washington. … But after leaked cables showed Darroch criticizing Trump's administration as 'inept' and the president as 'insecure,' the president seemed to have a memory lapse. 'I don't know the Ambassador but have been told he is a pompous fool,' Trump wrote Tuesday on Twitter. … Asked Tuesday about Epstein, Trump said that he was 'not a fan' of his. … 'I don't think I've spoken to him for 15 years,' Trump said. In a 2002 interview with New York Magazine before Epstein was in trouble, Trump sang a different tune. 'I've known [redacted] for 15 years. Terrific guy. He's a lot of fun to be with. It is even said that he likes beautiful women as much as I do, and many of them are on the younger side,' Trump said. ...

"Among those who have gotten the 'I barely know the guy' treatment: Former acting attorney general Matthew G. Whitaker, conservative commentator Ann Coulter, former lawyer Michael Cohen, fired FBI director James B. Comey, former senior White House aide Stephen K. Bannon, former campaign chairman Paul Manafort, former State Department official Brett McGurk, longtime adviser Roger Stone, former White House aide Cliff Sims, former campaign aide George Papadopoulos and even the rapper Lil Jon, who starred on Trump's reality TV show 'Celebrity Apprentice.' The people change, but the comments are eerily similar — and are something of a joke among some Trump advisers."

companies whose owners support him, even though he has repeatedly advocated the exact same tactic in the past against his perceived critics. Trump was rallying to the defense of Home Depot and its co-founder, Bernard Marcus, who have been at the center of a boycott from liberal customers after the billionaire said he plans to spend part of his fortune supporting Trump's 2020 campaign.

"Among the companies he has targeted are Macy's, which once carried his clothing line but abandoned him after he called Mexicans 'rapists' in his campaign kickoff speech in 2015, and Apple, which he urged to release the cellphone information of the perpetrators of the 2015 shooting in San Bernardino, Calif.," Isaac Stanley-Becker recalls. "Last year, he celebrated plans to boycott Harley-Davidson when the motorcycle company said it would move some production overseas because of steel tariffs imposed by the president. He has also implored his Twitter followers to boycott Megyn Kelly's show on Fox News and suggested that dropping AT&T could compel CNN to improve its coverage of him. … The president has argued that Nike and the NFL would encounter 'anger and boycotts' as long as they support players who kneel during the national anthem to protest police brutality and racial injustice. He struck a different tone on Tuesday, saying it was unfair to penalize a company because one of its co-founders supported 'your favorite President, me!'"

THERE'S STILL A BEAR IN THE WOODS:

-- A congressional panel grilled former Trump associate Felix Sater for more details on the president's failed Moscow project. Karoun Demirjian and Tom Hamburger report: "Sater met privately with House Intelligence Committee staffers investigating interference in the 2016 presidential election and questions surrounding Trump's business interests in Russia in 2016. At issue is Michael Cohen's false testimony before the same committee in 2017 and whether Trump was compromised by his organization's effort to build in Moscow. When pressed Tuesday to provide information about his knowledge of Cohen's testimony, Sater at one point cited lawyer-client privilege and declined to respond, according to accounts of the exchange described by Sater's attorney and a spokesman for the committee."

-- Federal prosecutors no longer want Michael Flynn to testify against his former partner because they doubt his version of events, according to a court filing. Rachel Weiner reports: "The move could have implications for Flynn in D.C. federal court, where he is awaiting sentencing in a case brought by the special counsel. … Flynn had been expected to be a key witness in the Virginia trial of Bijan Rafiekian, with whom he ran a consulting business. A court filing from Rafiekian's attorneys includes an email that Assistant U.S. Attorney James P. Gillis ended by saying prosecutors 'do not necessarily agree' with Flynn's 'characterizations' of how he came to make an inaccurate filing under the Foreign Agent Registration Act for an influence campaign that benefited the Turkish government. According to the email, Flynn says he did not provide false information to his attorneys at the time, did not read the FARA filing before signing it and was not aware that it contained falsehoods. In their filing, Rafiekian's lawyers say they 'interpreted the email's final sentence as a euphemism for, 'we've concluded [Flynn] is lying.'

"The decision by prosecutors could imperil Flynn's ability to avoid incarceration for lying to the FBI unless he is pardoned by Trump. Flynn's defense attorney, Sidney Powell, said in a statement that 'General Flynn is still cooperating with the government even if they don't call him as a witness.'"

-- The Justice Department directed two former members of Mueller's team, Aaron Zebley and James L. Quarles, not to testify before Congress. The Times's Nicholas Fandos and Katie Benner report: "It is unclear what effect the Justice Department's intervention will have on the men's eventual appearances, but it raises the prospect that a deal lawmakers thought they had struck last month for testimony from Mr. Mueller, the former special counsel, and the two prosecutors could still unravel. Both Mr. Zebley and Mr. Quarles have left the Justice Department and are now private citizens, meaning that the department most likely cannot actually block their testimony. But the department's view — depending on how strongly it is expressed — could have a chilling effect on two longtime employees and give them cover to avoid testifying."

-- The House Judiciary Committee will vote tomorrow on whether to subpoena 12 individuals with connections to Trump, including Jared Kushner and Jeff Sessions, for their investigation on whether the president obstructed justice. Colby Itkowitz reports: "The panel will also vote to subpoena documents related to the Trump administration's zero tolerance policy on migrants entering the country illegally, which led to the separation of thousands of children from their parents in 2018. … In addition to seeking subpoenas for Kushner and Sessions, the committee will vote to subpoena former White House chief of staff John Kelly; [Flynn]; former Trump campaign manager Corey Lewandowski; former deputy attorney general Rod J. Rosenstein; former White House deputy chief of staff Rick Dearborn; assistant attorney general Jody Hunt; former White House staff secretary Rob Porter; National Enquirer editor Dylan Howard; American Media Inc. chief executive David Pecker; and Keith Davidson, former attorney for adult-film star Stormy Daniels."

full. Politico's Darren Samuelsohn reports: "Trump can't give a straight answer about the subject. More than a dozen members of Congress readily admitted … that they too have skipped around rather than studying every one of the special counsel report's 448 pages. And despite the report technically ranking as a best-seller, only a tiny fraction of the American public has actually cracked the cover and really dived in. 'What's the point?' said Sen. Tim Scott (R-S.C.). … The result, say lawmakers, historians and cultural critics, is a giant literacy gap in the country when it comes to the most authoritative examination into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election and whether Trump obstructed that investigation."

-- Pelosi said she will not address "anything more that [Barr] has to say" because he "has lied to Congress." Pelosi's comments came a day after the attorney general accused Democrats of trying "to create some kind of public spectacle" by calling for Mueller to publicly testify next week. "I don't even want to address him," Pelosi said in response. "He has lied to Congress as the attorney general of the United States. He's lied under oath. I'm not speaking to anything more that he has to say." (John Wagner)

-- Russian intelligence agents appear to have been the first people to promote the conspiracy theory that DNC staffer Seth Rich was killed by assassins working for Hillary Clinton. Yahoo News's Michael Isikoff reports: "Russia's foreign intelligence service, known as the SVR, first circulated a phony 'bulletin' — disguised to read as a real intelligence report —about the alleged murder of the former DNC staffer on July 13, 2016, according to the U.S. federal prosecutor who was in charge of the Rich case. That was just three days after Rich, 27, was killed in what police believed was a botched robbery while walking home to his group house in the Bloomingdale neighborhood of Washington, D.C., about 30 blocks north of the Capitol. … In a graphic example of how fake news infects the internet, those precise details popped up the same day on an obscure website, whatdoesitmean.com, that is a frequent vehicle for Russian propaganda. The website's article, which attributed its claims to 'Russian intelligence,' was the first known instance of Rich's murder being publicly linked to a political conspiracy."

-- Christopher Steele, the author of the dossier, was interviewed for 16 hours last month as part of the investigation by Michael Horowitz, the Justice Department's inspector general. Politico's Natasha Bertrand reports: "The extensive, two-day interview took place in London while Trump was in Britain for a state visit, [two] sources said, and delved into Steele's extensive work on Russian interference efforts globally, his intelligence-collection methods and his findings about Trump campaign adviser Carter Page, who the FBI ultimately surveilled. … The interview was contentious at first, the sources added, but investigators ultimately found Steele's testimony credible and even surprising. The takeaway has irked some U.S. officials interviewed as part of the probe — they argue that it shouldn't have taken a foreign national to convince the inspector general that the FBI acted properly in 2016."

THE IMMIGRATION WARS:

-- Border arrests are dropping as Mexico's crackdown on migrants takes effect. Nick Miroff reports: "The number of people taken into custody along the U.S. southern border fell 28 percent in June, a drop that U.S. authorities say reflects the early impact of Mexico's crackdown on Central American migration. Border crossings typically rise in the spring and slump during the scorching summer months, but the drop registered from May to June was significantly larger than in previous years, according to Homeland Security statistics."

-- Migrant children in an overcrowded detention center in Yuma, Ariz., are making sexual assault allegations and saying they fear retaliation from U.S. agents when they complain about poor treatment. NBC News's Jacob Soboroff and Julia Ainsley report: "A 16-year-old Guatemalan boy held in Yuma, Arizona, said he and others in his cell complained about the taste of the water and food they were given. The Customs and Border Protection agents took the mats out of their cell in retaliation, forcing them to sleep on hard concrete. A 15-year-old girl from Honduras described a large, bearded officer putting his hands inside her bra, pulling down her underwear and groping her as part of what was meant to be a routine pat down in front of other immigrants and officers. The girl said 'she felt embarrassed as the officer was speaking in English to other officers and laughing' during the entire process, according to a report of her account."

-- California became the first state to offer health benefits to adult undocumented immigrants. NPR's Bobby Allyn reports: "The measure signed by Gov. Gavin Newsom on Tuesday extends coverage to low-income, undocumented adults age 25 and younger for the state's Medicaid program. Since 2016, California has allowed children under 18 to receive taxpayer-backed healthcare despite immigration status. And, state officials expect that the plan will cover roughly 90,000 people. … In California, extending health benefits to undocumented immigrants is widely popular. A March survey conducted by the nonpartisan Public Policy Institute of California found that almost two-thirds of state residents support providing coverage to young adults who are not legally authorized to live in the country."

-- Two active-duty Marines were arrested for allegedly trying to smuggle three undocumented Mexican immigrants through California. Meagan Flynn reports: "Lance Cpls. Byron Darnell Law II and David Javier Salazar-Quintero, based in Camp Pendleton, Calif., were arraigned Monday in federal court on charges of transporting undocumented immigrants 'for financial gain,' accused of taking jobs from 'recruiters' and following instructions from unknown people in Mexico to make extra cash on the side. They are among several active-duty U.S. troops charged or convicted in recent years of helping immigrants cross the border in exchange for money, highlighting how smugglers have sought to offer the shield of a uniform or credentials to assist desperate immigrants on the journey north."

-- "A black principal, four white teens and the 'senior prank' that became a hate crime," by Jessica Contrera: "This was the last day of the year for the class of 2018 at Glenelg High School. There was going to be an awards ceremony, a picnic, that end-of-a-journey feeling that always made [Principal David Burton] so proud of his job. But as he was on his way to work at 6:25 a.m., the assistant principal had called, agitated and yelling about graffiti. 'It's everywhere,' he kept saying, so Burton had leaned on the gas and rushed the last few miles. … He turned a corner and saw something written in large capital letters on the sidewalk: 'BURTON IS A NIGGER.' He paused only for a moment, looking at the words, trying to comprehend that all of this was real. Later, school district officials, county administrators and prosecutors would have a name for what happened here. They would repeat it, condemn it and vow to prevent it from occurring again. Hate crime."

-- Elijah Al-Amin, a black teenager, was stabbed to death at a convenience store in Arizona by a white man, allegedly because he was playing rap music in his car. The man, Michael Adams, stabbed the 17-year-old two days after Adams was released from prison, where he had completed a sentence for assault and theft. -- The Chicago Defender, the legendary newspaper read by generations of black Americans, printed its final copy. The newspaper will cease its print editions after today but will continue its digital operation. (New York Times)

-- A graphic artist who went viral for calling out Google's lack of a doodle celebrating Juneteenth was contacted by the search giant about a job. Davian Chester created his own Google doodle to celebrate the holiday marking the end of slavery, which quickly spread across social media and attracted the company's interest. Chester said he is still in talks with Google about the job, but in the meantime, his hometown of Columbus, Ga., has put up a billboard of the doodle. (Allison Klein)

2020 WATCH:

-- Billionaire activist Tom Steyer formally entered the Democratic presidential primary with an announcement video outlining his pledges to reduce corporations' political influence and address climate change. Chelsea Janes reports: "In January, when he announced he would not run for president, Steyer said that rather than entering the race he would turn his attention fully to pressuring members of Congress to start impeachment proceedings against [Trump]. … On Tuesday, as he announced his presidential bid, Steyer did not mention impeachment or Trump, although the president was briefly seen in the video. Trump's former campaign chairman, Paul Manafort, was also seen in the video being led down a hallway in handcuffs. … Steyer will have one week to accumulate 65,000 donors to qualify for the second Democratic debate, which will take place at the end of the month."

-- Biden told a voter he'll "go further" than cutting incarceration by 50 percent. BuzzFeed News's Katherine Miller reports: "In a video shared ... by the ACLU, Biden tells a man, Keith Albert, who identifies himself as an ACLU voter, that he'd 'go further than' cutting incarceration by half. 'Would you commit to cutting incarceration by 50%?' Albert asks Biden. 'More than that. We can do it more than that,' he responds. Last month in Concord, New Hampshire, another self-identified ACLU voter asked if Biden would 'commit to cutting the prison population overall, and specifically the federal prison population, in half' — a slightly different wording."

-- CNN announced its rules for the next Democratic presidential debates. From CNN's Mark Preston: "The upcoming Democratic presidential debates will feature opening and closing statements and two hours of debate time each night … While candidates will not officially learn if they make the Detroit stage until July 17, Tuesday's call with the 20-plus Democratic campaigns was held to help them prepare for the debate should their respective candidates qualify, a CNN spokesperson said." The rules include:

- Colored lights will be used to help candidates manage their remaining response times.
- A candidate attacked by name by another candidate will be given 30 seconds to respond.

- There will be no show of hands or one-word questions.
- A candidate who constantly interrupts others will have their time reduced.
- Questions posed by moderators will appear on the screen for viewers.

-- The DNC announced that the third debate, which will be hosted by ABC News and Univision, will be held in Houston.

-- Democrats are increasingly focused on portraying Mitch McConnell as a villain in a bid to win back the Senate and energize liberals. [redacted] Costa reports: "That effort gained new momentum on Tuesday as Amy McGrath, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel and combat pilot, announced she would challenge McConnell (R-Ky.) and blamed him for turning Washington into 'something we despise' in a campaign video that drew millions of views. While McGrath faces a steep climb against McConnell in ruby-red Kentucky, which President Trump carried by 30 percentage points in 2016, she is expected to raise significant funds from national Democrats and provide the party with a relentless and high-profile opponent."

-- Though Sen. Pat [redacted] (R-Kan.) won't make an endorsement in the Republican primary race to replace him, he said former Kansas secretary of state Kris Kobach faces a "very difficult" path to the Senate. The Kansas City Star's Bryan Lowry reports: "'It seems to me if you have just lost a statewide race, that the chances of you winning another statewide race would be very difficult,' [redacted] told reporters. 'I have not talked to Kris about this. I did talk to him earlier, but that was all about allegedly being the head of DHS. But the votes weren't there.' … Kobach's campaign manager Steve Drake rejected [redacted]' analysis of the race and also hit back against the criticism from national Republicans. … Kobach's entry could ramp up efforts to recruit Secretary of State [redacted] Pompeo into the race."

-- The RNC is threatening to withhold support from candidates who refuse to use the party's newly established online fundraising tool, WinRed, as tensions over the future of the party's grass-roots fundraising efforts reach a breaking point. Politico's [redacted] Isenstadt reports: "The moves illustrate how Republican leaders are waging a determined campaign to make WinRed the sole provider of its small donor infrastructure — and to torpedo any competitors. On Monday, the RNC sent an eight-page cease-and-desist letter to Paul Dietzel, a Republican digital strategist who earlier this month launched Give.GOP, a fundraising platform that includes a directory through which donors can give to party candidates and organizations. In the letter, RNC chief counsel Justin Riemer writes that while Give.GOP has a page inviting donors to give to the RNC, the committee hasn't yet received any funds from the platform or received any outreach from it. Riemer also accuses Dietzel of using the committee's trademark and logo without its permission."

-- Sarah McBride, a transgender activist who made waves after speaking at the Democratic National Convention in 2016, is now running for Delaware state Senate. Deanna Paul reports: "If she wins the 2020 race to succeed Sen. Harris McDowell, who is retiring at the end of his term, McBride will be the state's first elected transgender senator. … Now serving as national press secretary for the Human Rights Campaign, the nation's largest LGTBQ lobbying group, she has continued to be a force for the movement through the Trump-Pence administration, which she called 'one of the most explicitly anti-LGBTQ administrations in history' during a 2018 interview."

THE NEW WORLD ORDER:

-- Mexican Finance Minister Carlos Urzúa abruptly resigned, dealing a major blow to President Andrés Manuel López Obrador's government. Mary Beth Sheridan reports: Urzúa quit after accusing López Obrador's government of making decisions "that were not grounded in evidence and of naming officials who were ignorant of economics. … López Obrador has sought to woo the business community by pledging a balanced budget and a stable peso, even as he has launched ambitious social programs to help youth and the poor. But the peso immediately slid after Urzúa announced his resignation on Twitter, falling more than 2 percent, to about 19.3 pesos to the dollar. It later recovered some ground after López Obrador named a U.S.-educated technocrat, Arturo Herrera, as Urzúa's replacement."

-- Iran's release after four years in prison of a Lebanese businessman was meant to be seen as an opening for U.S.-Iranian talks. But the gesture wasn't enough for Washington. Reuters's Lesley Wroughton, Jonathan Landay and Arshad Mohammed report: ""It was a missed opportunity," one U.S. source said of Nizar Zakka's June 11 release and the U.S. decision not to pursue talks. 'We should have explored whether there was something there.' A second source — who is familiar with Iran's thinking and spoke on condition of anonymity — said Iran freed Zakka as a signal it wanted to cool tensions that have fueled fears of a war, and described his release as 'a goodwill gesture.' … Iranian officials declined to discuss whether it was an overture, or what concessions Tehran wants from Washington."

-- The Pentagon's transition plan underscores an upheaval in leadership. Missy Ryan reports: "Mark Esper, who became acting defense secretary on June 24 after his predecessor, then-acting defense secretary Patrick Shanahan, abruptly stepped aside, is expected to hand over to a third acting secretary, Navy Secretary Richard V. Spencer, when the White House formally submits Esper's nomination to the Senate for confirmation. Under a federal law known as the Vacancies Act, Esper, who has been serving as Army secretary since 2017, is required to step aside while the Senate considers his nomination for the top Pentagon job. When he will do so is not clear, as the requirement will be activated only when the White House officially transmits his nomination to the Senate. Pentagon chief of staff [redacted] Chewning, speaking to reporters at the Pentagon, said the White House was expected to convey Esper's nomination 'shortly.'"

-- The Pentagon said it spent at least $1.2 million on Trump's Fourth of July celebrations. CBS News's Kathryn Watson reports: "That figure does not represent the full cost of the event to taxpayers, but it does include the cost of flying hours and transportation for tanks and fighting vehicle platforms. Funding for the demonstrations, a Pentagon spokesman says, came from the services' training budgets for flying hours, and additional funds were used for the transportation of equipment. The Pentagon noted it's spent comparable amounts, if not more, on other events. The Pentagon noted that San Francisco Fleet Week cost $1.8 million in 2017, and Los Angeles Fleet Week cost $1.6 million."

NEVER FORGET JAMAL KHASHOGGI:

-- After journalist Jamal Khashoggi was killed at the Saudi Consulate in Istanbul, a number of lobbying firms and think tanks in Washington began making a rare move: They publicly severed ties with Saudi Arabia. Months later, however, the country's efforts to continue influencing U.S. policy remain strong. Beth Reinhard, Jonathan O'Connell and Tom Hamburger report: "Since fall 2018, high-powered lobbyists and lawyers have reaped millions of dollars for assisting the kingdom as it works to develop nuclear power, buy American-made weapons and prolong U.S. assistance to the Saudi-led coalition waging war in Yemen, foreign lobbying records show. One Washington-based communications firm — whose parent company initially expressed concern when Khashoggi disappeared — recently reported collecting nearly $19 million for what it says was several years of work for the Saudi government. A New York-based public relations firm run by a former Clinton administration appointee signed on in February to represent a Saudi interest for as much as $120,000 a month, filings show. The firms representing the kingdom operate under wide political cover provided by Trump. …

"Saudi Arabia is one of the highest-spending countries seeking to influence U.S. policy, ranking ninth in an analysis by the Center for Responsive Politics that reviewed the flow of foreign money from 2017 to the present. Roughly 20 firms are registered to lobby for Saudi interests, compared with more than 25 before Khashoggi's death, foreign lobbying filings show. … At least five firms did end up cutting business ties with Saudi interests in the fall: Glover Park Group, BGR Group, Harbour Group, CGCN Group and Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher, filings show. Among the lobbying firms still representing Saudi interests are Hogan Lovells, which has been paid $1.6 million since fall; and McKeon Group, led by Howard 'Buck' McKeon, a former Republican chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, which has received $600,000. Two law firms are offering advice on the kingdom's efforts to build nuclear power plants: Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman, which got nearly $1.9 million between August 2018 and January; and King & Spalding, which received $946,000 in November."

person delegation visited in April and met with senior Saudi officials, including the public prosecutor and the minister of justice, according to Christophe Deloire, who spoke publicly about the visit for the first time. The delegation's members demanded a thorough investigation of the killing of Khashoggi and pressed for the 'unconditional and immediate release' of at least 30 journalists that Reporters without Borders says are unfairly imprisoned in the kingdom, Deloire said. The invitation was the first from the Saudi government to RSF and the level of access the delegation was given was extremely rare, he said."

-- The Saudi princess who has been accused of ordering her bodyguard to assault a workman in Paris has gone on trial in absentia. From the BBC: "Princess Hassa bint Salman - Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman's sister - faces charges of complicity to violence with a weapon and complicity to kidnap. Her bodyguard … is also on trial. … [Both] deny wrongdoing. … Egyptian workman Ashraf Eid told police that, in September 2016, he was working in the Saudi king's apartment on the exclusive Avenue Foch in Paris when he went to take pictures of the bathroom on his mobile phone so that he could remember where items were placed before he started. However, the princess suspected him of wanting to sell images he had taken of her in the mirror and called the guard, French reports say. … According to one French account, the workman accused the princess of saying: 'This dog must be killed, he doesn't deserve to live. You'll see how you speak to a princess, how you speak to the royal family.' Mr Eid told police the bodyguard beat him up, binding his hands and forcing him to kiss the princess's feet."

-- Nicki Minaj canceled a concert in Saudi Arabia after better "educating herself on the issues." Helena Andrews-Dyer reports: "Just one week after her performance at the Jeddah World Fest was announced, Minaj said in a statement that 'after careful consideration' she could no longer participate. 'While I want nothing more than to bring my show to fans in Saudi Arabia, after better educating myself on the issues, I believe it is important for me to make clear my support for the rights of women, the LGBTQ community and freedom of expression,' Minaj said in a statement Tuesday to the Associated Press."

THE BRAVE NEW WORLD, BROUGHT TO YOU BY BIG TECH:

-- Trump summoned Republican lawmakers, political strategists and social media stars to the White House to discuss the "opportunities" of the Web in a summit that critics said could empower online provocateurs. Tony Romm, Michael Scherer and Amy B Wang report: "The high-profile gathering follows months of attacks from Trump claiming that Facebook, Google and Twitter ... secretly censor right-leaning users, websites and other content online, a charge of political bias that the tech giants strongly deny.. … But Trump hasn't invited any of the major tech companies, people familiar with the White House plans say, opting instead to grant a powerful stage to people who have a track record of sending inflammatory tweets and videos and posting other troubling content that social media sites increasingly are under pressure to remove. Among the expected attendees are James O'Keefe, the founder of Project Veritas, which has released secretly recorded videos of subjects, including a Google executive, in an attempt to paint them as politically biased. Another invitee, Ben Garrison, has published cartoons that have drawn sharp rebukes from the Anti-Defamation League and the Southern Poverty Law Center for including hateful text and imagery."

-- Apple, Amazon, Facebook and Google executives will testify to Congress next week as part of the House's antitrust investigation. Tony Romm reports: "The hearing, scheduled for July 16 in front of the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee that deals with antitrust, will bring simmering Democratic and Republican frustrations with Silicon Valley into public view, potentially setting the stage for further scrutiny — or regulation — of an industry that has long insisted that its size doesn't harm rivals or consumers." (Amazon founder [redacted] Bezos owns The Post.)

-- Twitter will ban posts that dehumanize people based on their religion. Hamza Shaban reports: "The update builds on Twitter's existing policies that bar the promotion of violence, threats and harassment against people in protected groups. But the company has acknowledged that what many people consider abusive tweets may not actually violate Twitter's rules. New policies banning dehumanizing language are an attempt to close that gap, Twitter said. … Twitter won't automatically flag offending posts, but will review them when they are reported by users. The company said it will require that dehumanizing posts are removed from the platform, starting Tuesday."

-- Netflix has lost two of its most popular shows — "Friends" and "The Office" — as old media companies begin to flex their streaming muscles. CNBC's [redacted] Sherman reports: "Disney, AT&T's WarnerMedia, and Comcast's NBCUniversal are all launching direct-to-consumer streaming services by the first quarter of 2020. And they're all coming after Netflix. Sure, there will be enough consumer dollars to go around for Netflix to keep its massive subscriber base, 155 million globally, growing. But there's little doubt that part of the motivation of legacy media companies embracing subscription streaming services is to capture some of Netflix's valuation — or bring CEO Reed Hastings' behemoth back down to earth."

Al Gore offered his condolences to the family of Ross Perot, even though Perot endorsed George W. Bush in the 2000 election:

George W. Bush also reflected kindly upon Perot, his father's former political rival:

Many remembered Dana Carvey's impression of Perot upon learning of his passing:

Model Chrissy Teigen reacted to a court ruling that said Trump can't block his critics on Twitter:

GOOD READ FROM ELSEWHERE:

-- Politico, "Ross Perot — the father of Trump," by John F. Harris: "Ross Perot died early Tuesday morning at 89, an event that surely left many Americans with an embarrassed thought: Wait, what? ... I am pretty sure I thought he was already dead. The contrast between the quietude of Perot's last aging years and the blaring trumpets of his 20th-century business and political career is so stark it takes some effort now to recall how large this cocksure Texas bantam once loomed. … But for people who on occasion (perhaps several times a week) respond to the news in the Trump era by thinking to themselves, I can't believe this is happening, Perot's story is a useful reminder that norm-shattering, cult-of-personality politics is not an exclusively recent phenomenon."

"Strip club to host golf tournament at Trump resort in South Florida," from David A. Fahrenthold: "Trump's golf resort in Doral, Fla., is scheduled to host a golf tournament Saturday put on by a Miami-area strip club,

HOT ON THE RIGHT:

"Democrats have moved 'too far to the left,' says BET network founder Bob [redacted]," from CNBC: "America's political establishment is riven with partisanship that has become 'very wicked and very mean,' which will allow golfers to pay for a dancer to serve as their 'caddy girl' while they play at the president's club. The 'Shadow All Star Tournament' is organized by the Shadow Cabaret, a strip club in Hialeah, Fla. Emanuele Mancuso, Shadow Cabaret's marketing director, said in a telephone interview that this was the first time the club had held a tournament at Trump Doral. The Trump name and family crest are displayed prominently in the strip club's advertising materials, which offer golfers the 'caddy girl of your choice.' Mancuso said the strip club did not intend to send a political statement by choosing Trump's resort. Rather, he said, the choice was for luxury."

'The party in my opinion, for me personally, has moved too far to the left,' [redacted], the founder of cable network BET and RLJ Companies business network, [said] Tuesday. 'And for that reason, I don't have a particular candidate (I'm supporting) in the party at this time,' he said. … [redacted] described himself as a long-time centrist and Democrat. He publicly supported Hillary Clinton in the 2016 presidential election. However, he has since expressed admiration for some of [Trump's] policies, particularly those related to the economy."

DAYBOOK:

Trump will give a speech and sign an executive order on "Advancing American Kidney Health" at the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center. Pence will deliver remarks at a Trump Victory event in California before visiting the Vandenberg Air Force Base.

QUOTE OF THE DAY:

"I find myself once again in the same position as President Obama. We both opposed reparations, and we both are the descendants of slave-owners." — Mitch McConnell responding to a report about his ancestors owning slaves.

NEWS YOU CAN USE IF YOU LIVE IN D.C.:

-- It will be dry again today, but prepare for high humidity. The Capital Weather Gang forecasts: "Our brief respite from high humidity continues today as we extend our break from showers and storms as well. We do trend a touch hotter today, before the humidity and storm chances come roaring back tomorrow. A few showers or storms may linger Friday, with a hot but mostly dry weekend the way it looks now."

-- Residents assessed the damage left behind by the storm that rocked the city on Monday. Fredrick Kunkle and Cortlynn Stark report: "A day later, things returned to normal except for a few isolated spots, with officials saying most of the mayhem had been short-lived. But for some, the work was just beginning. Ayers Variety & Hardware was open, drawing enough power from a generator to make the cash register work. An employee escorted customers through the dimly lit store to help them find what they needed. … In Montgomery County, officials were making arrangements for permanent repairs to a giant sinkhole that opened on Belfast Road in the Woodrock neighborhood of Potomac. … In Arlington, 20th Street North and 18th Street remain closed as officials work to make repairs there. They are expected to be fixed by end of the week."

-- The D.C. Council stripped Jack Evans of his chairmanship on the Committee on Finance and Revenue and said it will hire a law firm to investigate him. Steve Thompson reports: "The council stopped short of stripping Evans of other committee assignments — with the embattled, longtime lawmaker casting a deciding vote. … Brianne K. Nadeau (D-Ward 1), who voted in favor of taking away all of Evans's committee assignments, said the lawmaker's situation has already left voters in his ward disenfranchised. … Evans spoke few words during Tuesday's discussions, looking tired and occasionally puffing his cheeks as he exhaled."

-- Phil Freelon, the architect who helped design the African American Museum, died at 66. Matt Schudel reports: "He had complications from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, sometimes known as Lou Gehrig's disease, said a son, Deen Freelon. Since 1990, Mr. Freelon led an architectural firm in Durham that specialized in designing public buildings, including other cultural centers devoted to African American life in Baltimore, Atlanta, Charlotte, San Francisco and Greensboro, N.C. He led a consortium of several architectural firms — formally known as the Freelon Adjaye Bond/SmithGroup — that won the design competition for the National Museum of African American History and Culture in 2009. Their proposal was chosen, in a unanimous vote, over submissions from such renowned architects as Richard Meier, I.M. Pei and Norman Foster."

Thanks. Yes, the TDY is related to them putting new procedures and policies in place to improve local processes related to the incident. The TDY staff are training local staff or are providing coverage/assistance while NYM staff put new procedures in place. Thanks in advance.

Hello Ray,

Yes, the MDC Brooklyn incident was covered by special project. However, this was to cover assistance throughout the duration of the incident along with chiller and repair costs. The Regional staff could not provide justification for additional expenses directly related to the Epstein incident. The only explanation provided was due to staff shortage, MCC NY was bringing in staff for staff assist. I explained to the Regional Comptroller that Bureau institutions are suffering from staff shortages nationwide and any expenses associated with those shortages are being absorbed at those locations or Regions. We did however provide utilization of the project code for the travel expenses of the after action team. I've advised all the Regional Comptrollers, due to priority spending directed by DOJ, such as FSA spending, we would re-evaluate our budget status during the first week of September to see if any additional funding can be provided. We will certainly help if we can. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Thanks,

[redacted] - See below. Is the special project not covering the TDY cost for MCC NYM? Was the TDY cost during the MDC BRO incident covered by the special project? Thanks in advance.

The Administration Division has provided us a guidance that we are not authorized to charge any of our TDY Expenses to the project 87F, Eptein Death at the national level. It was explained to us that the project was established for regional tracking purposes only and we at the regional level will have to absorb all TDY costs related to MCC New York.
So far, approximately 60 staff from various institutions for various dates as early as 8/18 through 9/28 are scheduled for TDY to New York.
The estimated costs for TDY expenses will be approximately $500.000.
Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks.

Good Afternoon,

After a review of the budget, Central Office is able to cover the TDY expenses for NYM. Your financial management staff should be receiving an e-mail shortly with the project and cost center to use for these expenses.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks. Yes, the TDY is related to them putting new procedures and policies in place to improve local processes related to the incident. The TDY staff are training local staff or are providing coverage/assistance while NYM staff put new procedures in place. Thanks in advance.

Hello Ray,

Yes, the MDC Brooklyn incident was covered by special project. However, this was to cover assistance throughout the duration of the incident along with chiller and repair costs. The Regional staff could not provide justification for additional expenses directly related to the Epstein incident. The only explanation provided was due to staff shortage, MCC NY was bringing in staff for staff assist. I explained to the Regional Comptroller that Bureau institutions are suffering from staff shortages nationwide and any expenses

Comptroller that Bureau institutions are suffering from staff shortages nationwide and any expenses associated with those shortages are being absorbed at those locations or Regions. We did however provide utilization of the project code for the travel expenses of the after action team. I've advised all the Regional Comptrollers, due to priority spending directed by DOJ, such as FSA spending, we would re-evaluate our budget status during the first week of September to see if any additional funding can be provided. We will certainly help if we can. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Thanks,

The Administration Division has provided us a guidance that we are not authorized to charge any of our TDY Expenses to the project 87F, Eptein Death at the national level. It was explained to us that the project was established for regional tracking purposes only and we at the regional level will have to absorb all TDY costs related to MCC New York.
So far, approximately 60 staff from various institutions for various dates as early as 8/18 through 9/28 are scheduled for TDY to New York.
The estimated costs for TDY expenses will be approximately $500.000.
Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks.

93-95% not too bad...way better than NY. Goal is 100 but seems like sensationalism in story. In any event, just touch base with warden to ensure policy being followed, especially concerning the high profile inmates.

We have another ICT Phase one class starting in September. As of last pay period we were close to 93 percent in custody. By Sept we should be close to 95 percent.

[redacted], see below link. [redacted] not helping again. Not sure what the staffing is like at MCC but probably should look into status and progress. Also may want to be sure proper procedures are happening. Would be really bad if have another Epstein episode.

Yes, I spoke with the RD and informed him inmate Elansky was seen in medical this afternoon. The RD indicated he responded to the Rabbi and informed him of the same. The RD indicated unless inmate Elansky had a major medical issue, which the assessment indicated nothing major that the assessment was sufficient and required no additional response to the Rabbi.

[redacted],

I am sorry to have to bring these issues to you in the last weeks of your leadership. But because there is no warden at MCC NY, and the following is an emergency we bring to your attention and you will know what to do.

Michael Elansky 90791-054 is fighting for his life, and it seems to be neglected in a most terrible manner.

He writes that he has complained to his unit counselor and to health. He has migraines for over two weeks, throwing up and diarrhea. All who see him, can see he is in distress. His hands and body shake with tremors and he feels he is becoming weaker every day. He has problems focusing because of all this, and no one seems to care. This is the same facility where staff was caught sleeping and forging the log, the night Epstein committed suicide. He needs to brace himself against the wall when he walks.

It is an emergency matter and lets hope for the best, as it has already deteriorated to the extreme.
Thank you.

Rabbi Shmuel Spritzer

Hi Bruce,

Thanks for the kind words. [redacted] and I know you and the rest of the defense bar have a job to do, as do we. That may put us at odds sometimes, but it doesn't mean we all can't respect each other.

No problem on Thursday; we'll pull Tartaglione down before the count and he can review his discovery until count clears.

Thanks,

Good afternoon,

Can I meet with Nick on Thursday, August 15th at 5:00 p.m?

By the way, I am imagine you have seen some of my comments repeating the complaints about MCC that I have been making for years. Please know that none of that was directed at you. You both have been professional, courteous and responsive to me, even in the face of my numerous complaints and emails. The press does not write about the good, but I have mentioned how much I admire the legal staff at MCC on several occasions.

I am writing as I have been asked to update everyone on the continuing problems at the facility.

Mr. Tartaglione has not has books swapped out since [redacted] was kind enough to do it himself on August 15th. His radio has needed batteries for several days. The guards simply refuse to provide him with the batteries and new books he believes are in his property. Several guards have been making comments to him such as "You're threatening our lives" and "Give the big mouth his try" and similar remarks aimed at intimidating him and conveying to him their displeasure with his complaints.

As for visiting I arrived on Sunday and waited nearly 50 minutes because there was not staff in the lobby to process legal visits. I was able to see my client by 9;10, but I couldn't stay through the count so I had to leave before 9:30. I know I did not make an appointment but the issue wasn't a free room, but adequate staffing in the lobby. Yesterday I was able to see my client at 5:00 as scheduled.

Ms. [redacted],
Attached please find the BOP visitation form and licensing credentials from the private investigator.
Please let me know what else you need from us. We recently received CJA permission for Mr. O'Brien to travel to NYC to visit our client with us at the MCC on Monday and Tuesday next week, so I appreciate your helping us to expedite this process.

I have a private investigator we have appointed under CJA coming to visit our client from out of town next week Monday and Tuesday. What do we need to do to get him permission to come in with us for a legal visit? Thank you.

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be presented on an indictment tomorrow. His attorney, Martin Weinberg, has represented him in the past, and represents him in connection with our case and has been in touch with us throughout the weekend. He went to MCC today to meet with him in advance of the presentment tomorrow, but was just told he is not allowed in because he is from out-of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to you—is it at all possible to address this issue so Mr. Weinberg can meet with his client this evening? I'm available anytime at [redacted] to discuss, if that's helpful, or Mr. Weinberg can also be reached directly at 617-901-3472 if that's easier (though if you reach out directly to him if you could please just let me know afterward I'd be grateful).

thanks very much,
[redacted].

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be presented on an indictment tomorrow. His attorney, Martin Weinberg, has represented him in the past, and represents him in connection with our case and has been in touch with us throughout the weekend. He went to MCC today to meet with him in advance of the presentment tomorrow, but was just told he is not allowed in because he is from out-of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to you—is it at all possible to address this issue so Mr. Weinberg can meet with his client this evening? I'm available anytime at [redacted] to discuss, if that's helpful, or Mr. Weinberg can also be reached directly at 617-901-3472 if that's easier (though if you reach out directly to him if you could please just let me know afterward I'd be grateful).

thanks very much,
[redacted].

One other thing that you may be able to address (although this is more minor than the other issues): how does the prison deal with prisoners who do not speak English when they need to see a [redacted]?

There is some interest in hearing what is going on with the Epstein suicide investigation, but I suspect that is something the Warden cannot discuss.

See you Wednesday.

Good morning Your Honor,

My apologies, but I was out of the office unexpectedly yesterday due to a family emergency.

Warden [redacted] and I will be in attendance at the CJAB next week. He indicates he will be addressing the issues that have delayed the attorney visiting study, to include those related to the union. He will also update the Court on the female unit at MCC. Please let us know if you need anything else.

Thank you,

[redacted] sorry to bother you with this:

Update: We got over 30 inquiries. My boss is drafting a very short answer that will probably say we don't comment on an inmate's health status or conditions of confinement for privacy reasons.

My boss had me call MCC NY just now to be sure they are not releasing varying statements to the media, we want the institution & me to use the same exact statement to all media (we'll give them the statement we come up with shortly and be sure they're fine with it) and they just told me you're acting will call me back shortly.

Last thing - I didn't realize he went to the hospital, I might ask your acting exec. if he's still at the hospital or how long there, etc., if that's true (news article say he went to a hospital).

hi [redacted],
hope you are well. We saw an article tonight on someting called Radaronline reporting that Jeffrey Epstein attempted to commit suicide at the MCC (unsuccessfully.)

Are you in a position to help me on that with some sort of confirmation or information. (Or to dispel its veracity?) thanks, Ben

I confirmed with his attorneys that he has one at home. Can medical staff have him fill out the paperwork needed to receive it here? Thanks!

The above inmate said he had his CPAP machine with him at the time of his arrest. He needs to have his CPAP machine for his medical condition. Is it in R and D or can we find out who has his CPAP machine?

Thanks.

| Attachments: | TEXT.htm, Certification of Identify Form.pdf |

Good morning Michael,

I spoke with folks here and confirmed we can proceed under our usual procedure for releasing medical/psych records to defense counsel. Accordingly, please send me a cover letter confirming you're defense counsel of record, the attached certification of identity, and a Rule 17 subpoena (no need to be so-ordered; a clerk's subpoena is fine). Normally we would require a HIPAA release as well, but privacy rights don't survive death in this context. Once I receive the certification, letter, and subpoena,, I will have the USAO's Civil Division authorize the records release as wall counsel pursuant to United States ex rel. Touhy v. Regan, 340 U.S. 462 (1951) and the associated regulations.

Please let me know if you have any questions/concerns.

Thank you,

Re: EPSTEIN, Jeffrey, Federal Register No. 76318-054
United States v. Jeffrey Epstein, 19-cr-00490-RMB

Dear Judge Berman:

I am writing in regards to your August 12, 2019 inquiry whether the investigations referenced in my August 10, 2019 letter will include the incident at MCC involving Mr. Epstein on or about July 23, 2019.

I can confirm that, although an internal investigation was completed regarding the July 23, 2019 incident, the current investigations by the FBI and OIG will include this incident as well. Accordingly, I cannot divulge any information about the prior investigation at this time.

Thank you for your time and attention to this matter. If you have any questions or concerns, please feel free to call me at [redacted].

Sincerely,

[redacted]
Warden
MCC New York

Hi there,

I'm writing a piece for the site Gothamist about conditions at MCC. See allegations below, compiled from defense attorneys , current prisoners and their loved ones. Please send comment ASAP if you would like to respond.

Regards
Aviva Stahl

— that some cells in the facility are covered in mold
— that some cells in the facility have separate spouts for hot and cold water, making it impossible for prisoners to take showers at a reasonable temperature — that prisoners at MCC are treated with disdain. They "be lucky if they were treated like dirt under somebody else's shoe, but they're not even treated that well," said one lawyer — that overcrowding, understaffing and underresourcing are grave problems at the facility ("whether its people who are suicidal, people who need medical care, people who need psychiatric care, people who need spiritual guidance or religious accommodation, people who need programming, so they don't just get warehoused there - all of that is lacking.")
— that in the spring of 2019, toilets on the women's floor at MCC flooded, and the women were forced to clean up the feces themselves

Clouds of economic uncertainty loom despite temporary reprieve from Trump on China tariffs

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: If President Trump wanted to stabilize the listing stock market, his Tuesday announcement that he will temporarily postpone the implementation of about half the tariffs on Chinese imports that he announced 12 days earlier did the trick. But only for the day. Companies whose supply chains depend on China, from Apple and Best Buy to Mattel and Nike, saw their share prices edge up.

The fundamentals have not changed. In fact, they continue to worsen. And stocks tumbled this morning when the markets opened. For the first time since 2007, the yields on short-term U.S. bonds eclipsed those of long-term bonds. This phenomenon, called the inverted yield curve, has preceded every recession in the past 50 years.

Bigger picture, the United States remains engaged in a trade war with China, the world's second-largest economy, with no end in sight. Trump's insistence that he still plans to impose all the previously announced duties on Dec. 15 forces corporate chieftains to prepare for more troubled waters ahead. Many analysts said the delay does nothing to mitigate the ominous clouds of uncertainty that hang over the economy. "Trade wars are good and easy to win," Trump said last year. That was wrong.

Beyond the inverted yield curve, economists are pointing to a litany of other early warning signs that indicate a recession looms, despite the Federal Reserve's recent decision to cut interest rates. There's already been a decline in business investment, and some companies are pulling back on hiring.

Yesterday, Trump came closer than he has before to acknowledging that his tariffs on Chinese imports are really taxes on American consumers. He's been falsely claiming that the Chinese are paying the full price of his tariffs. "We are doing this for the Christmas season, just in case some of the tariffs would have an impact on U.S.

case some of the tariffs would have an impact on U.S. consumers," the president told reporters, as he prepared to fly to a speech in western Pennsylvania.

It's no coincidence that the products that got a carve-out from the planned 10 percent tariff on $300 billion worth of imports are consumer goods such as cellphones, laptops, strollers and sneakers. Higher prices might have caused sticker shock over the holidays. The prior tariffs, which have gone into effect, mostly increased the price of component parts that companies use to assemble something else. These new tariffs would hit finished goods such as iPhones, which are assembled in China, making it more likely that the higher costs are passed on to consumers.

Trump wants to win reelection, and he's sensitive to the markets. The result has been a series of erratic policy announcements that often appear to be improvisational and that cause whiplash for the markets. It sometimes feels as if Trump is practicing the "madman theory" in trade negotiations. Is he being crazy? Or crazy like a fox? For example, how seriously are we to take it when Trump threatens, as he did yesterday, to pull out of the World Trade Organization?

"It's complete manipulation," said Kenny Polcari of Butcher Joseph Asset Management. "[Trump] threatens the market, by surprise, two weeks ago. The markets re-price. Then he says, 'I think we are going to delay those tariffs.' … The [algorithms] respond immediately and take the market higher," Polcari told my colleagues Taylor Telford and Thomas Heath. "Of course the market is going to rally!"

"We are all just one tweet away from significant volatility," RSM chief economist Joe Brusuelas wrote in a note to his clients after Trump's tariff postponement. "The idea that this is a major source of relief to the economy is not tethered to empirical reality."

"We were relieved. But does that stop the volatility and instability? No," said Jay Foreman, chief executive of the Florida-based toy company Basic Fun. Foreman told the Associated Press yesterday that he's still considering layoffs this fall to offset his higher costs and noted that, despite Trump's reprieve, tariffs remain a severe threat.

"The climbdown over the China tariffs does not mean a trade deal is now near, not least because China's authorities currently face a much bigger problem, namely, the challenge to their legitimacy in Hong Kong, and that will take precedence," wrote Pantheon Macroeconomics chief economist Ian Shepherdson in a note to investors that Tory Newmyer covered in this morning's Finance 202. "But we can fully understand markets' relief at the lifting of the threat of tariffs on consumer goods just ahead of the holiday shopping

-- U.S. businesses have begun taking down job listings because of the uncertainty caused by the trade war: "Win Cramer had big plans to hire several new employees this summer for his company, including a chief operating officer, but he took the job listings down after Trump tweeted that more tariffs would hit Chinese goods in September," our economics correspondent Heather Long reported yesterday. "'It's the most frustrating time I've ever had running a business, and I've been doing this for 20 years,' said Cramer, chief executive of JLab Audio, which makes wireless earbuds and headphones sold at Best Buy, Target and elsewhere.

"The United States had 7.3 million job openings in June, down from a peak of 7.6 million in November. … While the decline is modest, economists are concerned hiring could dry up quickly as companies see no end in sight to Trump's trade war and they look to cut costs. The reduction in job openings is also widespread across many industries, signaling how cautious companies are becoming. A decrease in job openings has tended to be a signal of economic trouble. … Job openings peaked in April 2007, for example, nine months before the start of the Great Recession. Job openings in many industries have declined since November, including the information sector, financial services, transportation and warehousing, and hotels and food service, suggesting wide concern about future growth. Actual hires also have slowed this year, with average monthly job gains falling to 165,000 a month, down from 223,000 a month last year."

-- "Uncertainty" is the buzzword that keeps coming up in notes from Wall Street institutions to their clients that seem to become gloomier with each passing day:

"Trade's simmer has begun to boil, business sentiment and capital spending have softened further, global growth remains weak and inflation expectations have fallen," Morgan Stanley's Ellen Zentner wrote on Monday. "Heightened market volatility and increased news flow on trade may soften consumer sentiment and spending."

Goldman Sachs said Sunday it does not expect a trade deal between the U.S. and China before the 2020 election. "Fears that the trade war will trigger a recession are growing," wrote Goldman's chief U.S. economist, Jan Hatzius, explaining why growth projections are being lowered. "Overall, we have increased our estimate of the growth impact of the trade war. The drivers of this modest change are that we now include an estimate of the sentiment and uncertainty effects ... Relatedly, the business sentiment effect of increased pessimism about the outlook from trade war news may lead firms to invest, hire, or produce less."

"We are worried," Bank of America Merrill Lynch chief economist Michelle Meyer wrote Friday. "We now have a number of early indicators starting to signal heightened risk of recession. Our official model has the probability of a recession over the next 12 months only pegged at about 20 percent, but our subjective call based on the slew of data and events leads us to believe it is closer to a 1-in-3 chance. … Three out of the five economic indicators (auto sales, industrial production, and aggregate hours worked) which track the business cycle closely are near levels consistent at the start of the previous recessions."

-- More dark mood music:

- Inflation in the United States was slightly higher last month than expected: The Labor Department announced yesterday that the consumer price index rose 0.3 percent in July. That's modest but was above analyst predictions.
- U.S. mortgage debt reached a record in the second quarter, exceeding its 2008 peak as the financial crisis unfolded. "Mortgage balances rose by $162 billion in the second quarter to $9.406 trillion, surpassing the high of $9.294 trillion in the third quarter of 2008, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said Tuesday," per the Wall Street Journal

Tuesday," per the Wall Street Journal.

- China's economy is faltering: "The jobless rate in Chinese cities again rebounded in July to its highest level since regular reporting on the data began, as employers turned cautious," today's Journal reports. "Other key economic readings for the month, including factory production, consumption and property investment, came in much lower than expected."
- Germany's economy shrank slightly last quarter. Europe's biggest economy suffered from falling exports, and the auto industry is struggling to adjust to new emissions standards, per the AP.
- The British economy also unexpectedly shrank, for the first time since 2012, because of uncertainties surrounding Brexit.

-- Finally, some good news: We're hiring! I'm looking for an ambitious reporter to help me write The Daily 202. This is a demanding job that requires a news junkie and a creative thinker who is skilled at connecting the dots about news developments in Washington, around the country and the world. The ideal candidate will have a track record of writing conceptual scoops in the political arena, examining key developments in the White House, Congress or on the campaign trail in a fresh and original light. That candidate should be able to identify key themes and story lines from the slew of news that breaks on a daily basis, and skillfully synthesize those events in a meaningful and revelatory way for readers. This position is based in our Washington newsroom. (Read the full job posting here.)

-- Trump appears to have backed away from what had been imminent plans to commute the sentence of former Illinois governor Rod Blagojevich in the face of massive Republican blowback, CNN reports: "Several Republican lawmakers called acting White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney and White House counsel Pat Cipollone. At least two of them, Reps. Darin LaHood and Mike Bost, made their case directly to the President on Thursday night, urging him not to go forward. … Another White House official said that while Blagojevich's pardon seemed imminent late last week, there had been no

seemed imminent late last week, there had been no movement on the matter since Trump spoke with the two congressmen. It appeared to be on ice, the official said, while offering the caveat that Trump could change his mind and decide to move forward.

"Multiple sources familiar with the calls said Trump and Mulvaney both did not seem aware of the details of Blagojevich's case, even though the president had decried the former governor as being treated 'unbelievably unfairly.' … Trump's son-in-law and senior adviser Jared Kushner had been funneling messages of support for Blagojevich's commutation to the president … Trump adviser and former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani also made it clear to Trump that Blagojevich's sentence was too harsh. Bernard Kerik, a former NYPD commissioner who served time in prison on a tax fraud conviction and has been advocating for Blagojevich, slammed the opposition."

-- Opinion columnist Elizabeth Bruenig went to her home state of Texas for a deep dive into why Trump seems poised to fare even better among evangelicals in 2020 than he did in 2016. Partly this is because they are culture warriors and want to get another ally on the Supreme Court, of course, but she concludes that it's also because "the backlash against them has cemented so much of what they already suspected about liberals' attitudes."

"Overall, American culture is hardly trending toward adherence to evangelical beliefs, with approval of same-sex marriage steadily rising among all religious groups (even evangelicals), religious affiliation quickly dropping, and support for legal abortion lingering at all-time highs," Bruenig writes in a thoughtful essay. "In some sense it seemed that Trump is able, by being less Christian than your average Christian, to protect Christians who fear incursions from a hostile dominant culture. But that paradox also supplies a handy solution to the question of whether Christians should direct their efforts to worldly politics or turn inward, shunning political life for spiritual pursuits. By voting for Trump — even over more identifiably Christian candidates — evangelicals seem to have found a way to outsource their fears and instead reserve a strictly spiritual space for themselves inside politics without placing evangelical politicians themselves in power. In that sense, they can be both active political agents and a semi-cloistered religious minority, both of the world and removed from it, advancing their values while retreating to their own societies."

-- For a separate story, religion reporter Julie Zauzmer interviewed more than 50 evangelical Christians in the battleground states of Florida, Pennsylvania and

Wisconsin: "In conversation, evangelical voters paint the portrait of the Trump they see: a president who acts like a bully but is fighting for them. A president who sees America like they do, a menacing place where white Christians feel mocked and threatened for their beliefs. A president who's against abortion and gay rights and who has the economy humming to boot. … The allegations that Trump sexually assaulted numerous women are not a moral concern, many Christians say. … Opponents decry his attitude toward people of color, his approach to immigrants detained at the border, his answers to violence in American cities, and on and on. But in Appleton, Wis., the Rev. Dennis Episcopo hasn't felt the need as a religious leader to denounce any of it in front of his congregation, which includes more than 5,000 attendees on a typical Sunday. The megachurch that he has led for 22 years is almost entirely white and conservative, like the lakeside region where it is located. Episcopo has not seen any behavior from Trump in the past three years that would prompt him to openly dissuade churchgoers from supporting this president. 'There could be something, where society really crosses the line on something, that I feel as a pastor I have to get up and say something,' he muses. 'But it hasn't happened yet.'"

-- Former Colorado governor John Hickenlooper (D) is considering ending his presidential bid to run for the Senate. From the New York Times: "Hickenlooper, who is mired at the bottom of public polling of the presidential race, hopped into Senator Michael Bennet's car on Friday night in hopped into Senator Michael Bennet's car on Friday night in [Iowa] to discuss his impending decision. [They drove around together for 20 minutes in Clear Lake before the Wing Ding dinner.] … Officials who have been in discussions with the Hickenlooper campaign said Tuesday that the former two-term governor is giving serious consideration to switching to the Senate race but stressed that a final decision has not yet been made. Short of a massive change in political momentum, Mr. Hickenlooper is certain to fail to qualify for the next round of presidential debates in September, an additional blow to a campaign struggling to attract attention and financial contributions. ...

"Recent days have brought unsubtle messages that high-ranking Democratic officials in Colorado and Washington believe Mr. Hickenlooper is in the wrong race. The Denver Post on Sunday published polling done on behalf of 'a national Democratic group involved in Senate races' that showed Mr. Hickenlooper holding a 51-point lead over two other Democrats in the state's 2020 Senate race. On Monday, the 314 Action Fund, a super PAC that backs candidates who are scientists, announced a 'Draft Hick for Senate' campaign along with a poll it commissioned showing Mr. Hickenlooper leading Senator Cory Gardner, a Colorado Republican seeking re-election, by 13 percentage points in a head-to-head matchup."

-- Beto O'Rourke, who returned to his hometown of El Paso after the mass shooting there, may resume his 2020 campaign as early as this week amid persistent calls for him to run for Senate instead. Supporters of the former congressman want him to challenge Sen. John Cornyn (R). (Politico)

-- Republican donors are being advised by allies of Mike Pompeo to hold off on contributing to any of the current Senate candidates in Kansas as the secretary of state weighs whether to run for the open seat of retiring Sen. Pat [redacted]. From Bloomberg News: "A Pompeo ally has been advising potential contributors to wait until after the secretary of state makes his decision ... The top U.S. diplomat and former CIA director, who served as a congressman in Kansas's 4th district from 2011-2017, has until June to enter the race."

-- Trump is trying to turn Joe Biden's gaffes into a major liability. Matt Viser reports: "Over the last few days, Biden has made a string of small missteps while campaigning during a crucial stretch in Iowa. … He has bungled oft-repeated lines, saying 'truth over facts' rather than truth over lies. … He spoke of meeting with Parkland students when he was vice president, even though the Florida school shooting occurred a year after he left office. … On their own, none of these mistakes significantly alter the race. ... Some say the gaffes pale in comparison to things Trump says. … That hasn't stopped Trump and his allies from seizing on Biden's comments. … On Friday, he said 'Joe is not playing with a full deck' and that 'something's going wrong with him.'"

2012 presidential campaign, writes Dan Balz: "He continues to lead in the polls, nationally and in early states. He has led those polls from the start of the year to today. Still, he is treated as being in a precarious position, a vulnerable candidate not at his best and a few mistakes away from a real fall. Just like Romney through much of 2011. Romney was the disrespected front-runner in the 2012 Republican field. He could be awkward as a candidate and paid a price for it in the coverage of his campaign. But as with Biden, he led in most — not all — surveys ahead of the primaries and caucuses."

-- A new survey finds support for abortion rights remains steady, despite a growing partisan divide. Ariana Eunjung Cha and Scott Clement report: "No more than a quarter of residents in any state supports a total ban despite the increasing political divide on the issue. The Public Religion Research Institute survey released Tuesday involves an extraordinarily large sample of 40,292 interviews measuring abortion attitudes throughout 2018, allowing it to produce nuanced results for individual states and for very small demographic groups. It found that Americans remain generally supportive of abortion rights, with 54 percent saying it should be legal in all or most cases and 40 percent saying it should be illegal."

A chaotic day in Hong Kong ends with specter of more violence to come

THE NEW WORLD ORDER:

-- The Hong Kong protest movement is facing a tipping point as demonstrators seek the sympathy of the international community. Gerry Shih and Timothy McLaughlin report: "After late-night mob scenes marred a demonstration that paralyzed this city's airport, protesters on Wednesday issued apologies seeking the international public's sympathy and forgiveness as they fought to regain control over a narrative that seemed to be tilting in Beijing's favor for the first time. The appeals, which included apologies to the police force, come as the struggle over public opinion reaches a climax. While Hong Kong's protest movement has become steadily radicalized and fractured, the Chinese government has sharply ramped up a propaganda effort in state media and on social networks to discredit and deflate a movement that to this point enjoyed wide support across Hong Kong society.

"Hong Kong's airport ground to a near-halt for a second day Tuesday after protesters assailing police brutality and government indifference occupied departure halls, sparking tense but largely peaceful confrontations with frustrated passengers, many of them stranded. The mood turned darker by nightfall after protesters seized two men — one a reporter for Chinese state media, another they claimed to be a Chinese government agent — and clashed with police and paramedics who tried to evacuate the pair. At one point, protesters surrounded and kicked a police van, sparking hand-to-hand clashes with riot police who fired pepper spray near the departure terminal.

"On Wednesday, police warned that protesters arrested

during the terminal fracas could face life in prison. Seven men aged 17 to 28 years old were detained, five for unlawful assembly and two for assaulting police officers and possession of offensive weapons, said Mak Chin Ho, assistant police commissioner. … Threats of such severe punishment fit with an approach by Beijing, and its supporters in the Hong Kong government, to dramatically raise the potential cost for taking part in demonstrations."

-- China is threatening to use military-style force in Hong Kong, hoping that threats alone will disperse protests, as students plan to continue protesting once universities resume classes next month. Anna Fifield reports: "That would take the protests uncomfortably close to celebrations planned on Oct. 1 to mark the 70th anniversary of the foundation of the People's Republic of China, which was established with the goal of unifying greater China under the leadership of the Communist Party. … That concern, combined with increasingly strident rhetoric from Chinese officials, has raised fears about the possibility of military intervention in Hong Kong. This week, state-affiliated media outlets tweeted ominous videos of Chinese tanks carrying out exercises in Shenzhen, the southern Chinese city that borders Hong Kong, while authorities in Beijing portrayed the protests as 'terrorism.' China already stands accused of sending in thugs from local gangs to try to deter the protesters in Hong Kong, and there are growing concerns that it will send in the People's Armed Police, a paramilitary force responsible for internal security and 'stability maintenance.' Or perhaps even the People's Liberation Army."

How an eye patch became a symbol of the Hong Kong protests

-- Bloody eye patches have become the latest symbol of the Hong Kong protests after a young woman was hit in the face with a projectile that many protesters believe was fired by police. Katie Mettler reports: "Authorities said at a news conference that there was no proof to back up that claim. From the tension, a new rallying symbol was born. 'Eye for an eye,' some protesters shouted as they continued their sit-in ... Demonstrators also spray-painted 'eye for an eye' throughout the airport in Chinese and in English and covered their faces with mock eye patches made of gauze. Some colored them red, to signify blood."

-- China asked the Trump administration to back off after U.S. lawmakers, including Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) and House Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy (R-Calif.), condemned the violence against pro-democracy activists. From Reuters: "The United States has denied Chinese suggestions that it has a hand in the unrest. But China's foreign ministry spokeswoman Hua Chunying said the lawmakers' comments have 'provided new and powerful evidence to the world.'"

-- Meanwhile, Trump said the "thing" in Hong Kong — which he called a "riot" last week — is "very tough" but stopped short of criticizing China. From the Times: "In comments to reporters and in a series of Times. In comments to reporters and in a series of afternoon tweets, Mr. Trump took no strong position on the demonstrations that have gripped Hong Kong for weeks and have drawn an increasingly brutal response from local security forces. He echoed none of the defenses of freedom and democracy coming from both Democrats and Republicans. … 'We'll see what happens. But I'm sure it'll work out,' he said. He added: 'I hope it works out for everybody, including China. I hope it works out peacefully. I hope nobody gets hurt. I hope nobody gets killed.' The president later tweeted that intelligence reports indicated that China's government 'is moving troops to the Border with Hong Kong.'"

Mitch McConnell walks to his Senate office earlier this year. (Salwan Georges/The Washington Post)

-- Follow the money: Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) had quarterbacked the effort on Capitol Hill to lift sanctions on Russia's largest aluminum producer, a company that soon afterward backed the creation of the first new aluminum-rolling mill in the U.S. in nearly four decades — built in McConnell's home state. Tom Hamburger and Rosalind S. Helderman report: "In January, as the Senate debated whether to permit the Trump administration to lift sanctions on Russia's largest aluminum producer, two men with millions of dollars riding on the outcome met for dinner at a restaurant in Zurich. On one side of the table sat the head of sales for Rusal, the Russian aluminum producer that would benefit most immediately from a favorable Senate vote. … On the other side sat Craig Bouchard, an American entrepreneur who had gained favor with officials in Kentucky … By the next day, McConnell had successfully blocked the bill, despite the defection of 11 Republicans.

"Within weeks, the U.S. government had formally lifted sanctions on Rusal, citing a deal with the company that reduced the ownership interest of its Kremlin-linked founder, Oleg Deripaska. And three months later, Rusal announced plans for an extraordinary partnership with Bouchard's company, providing $200 million in capital to buy a 40 percent stake in the new aluminum plant in Ashland, Ky. — a project heralded by Gov. Matt Bevin (R) 'as significant as any economic deal ever made in the history of Kentucky.' A spokesman for McConnell said the majority leader did not know that Bouchard had hopes of a deal with Rusal at the time McConnell led the Senate effort to end the sanctions. … Democratic senators have called for a government review of the deal, prompting a Rusal executive in Moscow last week to threaten to pull out of the investment."

-- Russian villagers were told to leave their town following a missile test explosion. Will Englund reports: "It took most of Tuesday for officials to realize how damaging this looked given the nuclear materials involved in the accident. Arkhangelsk Gov. Igor Orlov insisted it wasn't an evacuation but a 'routine measure.' … About 450 people are said to live in the village, which abuts a military testing range. … A resident of Nyonoksa told ArkhangelskOnline that the village has been evacuated before, presumably because of the hazards of tests or other military activity nearby. … Local officials conducted a study of soil, sand, river and seawater samples from several points in the region and reported no excess levels of radiation, according to media reports."

-- Russia said the explosion caused a 16-fold spike in radiation. From the BBC: "Readings for gamma radiation at six testing stations in Severodvinsk, a city of 180,000 people, ranged from 4 to 16 times the normal rate of 0.11 microsieverts per hour," Russia's weather sevice said.

-- Donald Trump Jr. visited Indonesia to tout his family's new resorts and defend his father. Stanley Widianto and Joshua Partlow report: "'We have turned down a lot of deals,' Trump Jr. said at a news conference in the capital city of Jakarta. 'We made a very conscious decision of the family not to do that right now.' The Trump Organization has promised it would make no new foreign deals during President Trump's time in office. Plans for the two Indonesia resorts predate the Trump presidency but appeared to have stalled in recent years. Trump Jr. called it 'nonsense' that the president's foreign policy might be swayed by his business interests. 'He wouldn't make decisions that affect a country based on a real estate deal,' Trump Jr. said of his father."

-- Pakistan moved to ban single-use plastic bags.

Pakistan moved to ban single-use plastic bags. Anyone in the capital region of 1.5 million who uses, sells or manufactures the bags will face a fine. Pamela Constable reports: "The ban is the latest project in Prime Minister Imran Khan's green initiative, which began last year with a campaign to plant 10 billion trees to fight deforestation. … The fines in Pakistan will also be steep — $31 for using a single bag, $63 for selling one and up to $31,000 for manufacturing them. The national per capita income is $1,200 per year. Shoppers are not likely to be aggressively pursued, but companies that make and supply the bags have been warned that they will be inspected to enforce the ban."

Trump wants 'full investigation' into Epstein's death

THE DOMESTIC AGENDA:

-- The Justice Department reassigned the warden of the federal detention center where sex offender Jeffrey Epstein died. Two staffers were placed on leave. From Devlin Barrett, Matt Zapotosky and Aaron C. Davis: "The move to transfer [redacted], who had only recently begun working as the MCC's warden, came a day after Attorney General William P. Barr decried 'serious irregularities' there and a 'failure' to keep Epstein secure. … Barr appointed [redacted], who has been running a federal prison in nearby Otisville, N.Y., as the facility's new acting warden. The MCC is run by the Bureau of Prisons, which is part of the Justice Department and falls under Barr's authority. … Epstein was being held in a special housing unit of the MCC called Nine South and should have been checked on by the staff every 30 minutes. But correctional officers had not done so for 'several' hours before he was found by staff as they delivered breakfast to inmates, a person familiar with the matter said …

"To those who have worked in or around the MCC, Epstein's death is viewed as a symptom of long-term problems there and, more broadly, within the Bureau of Prisons. [redacted] Hood, a former chief of internal affairs for the bureau, said the MCC has had longtime problems with overcrowding and understaffing. But in recent years, he said, the bureau has been afflicted by a lack of leadership, with a significant number of senior positions filled by temporary appointments. … Sometimes, incompetence in the building reaches alarming proportions, observers said. In May 2017, for instance, a bank robber named David Evangelista was accidentally released from the MCC, even after he told staff he still had years left on his sentence … Still, the MCC is considered one of the safest and most secure lockup in the federal system. When Joaquín Archivaldo Guzmán Loera, the drug kingpin better known as 'El Chapo,' was brought to New York, he was jailed there."

-- The two prison staff members who were guarding Epstein fell asleep and failed to check on him for three hours, per the Times, which adds that the staffers — both working overtime — falsely recorded in a log that they had checked on the financier every 30 minutes, as was required. The paper notes that such false entries in an official log could constitute a federal crime.

-- The news of Epstein's death was posted on 4chan more than half an hour before it became public, leading the New York City Fire Department to look into whether an employee shared the details improperly. From BuzzFeed News: "Almost 40 minutes before ABC News first reported Epstein's death on Twitter, someone posted still-unverified details on 4chan, the anonymous message board popular with far-right trolls and white nationalists. … After publishing the post, other 4chan users egged on the author. When they expressed doubt, the original poster added more information to the discussion thread, including a detailed breakdown of the procedures allegedly used to resuscitate Epstein, which suggest the poster may have been a first responder, medical worker, or otherwise privy to details about efforts to resuscitate the disgraced financier. ... After telling BuzzFeed News the post was 'under review,' an FDNY spokesperson said authorities 'determined this alleged information did not come from the Fire Department.'"

-- Trump defended his promotion of the baseless conspiracy theory connecting the Clintons to Epstein's death. John Wagner reports: Trump said he "retweeted a 'very highly respected conservative pundit' who is a 'big Trump fan.' On Saturday, Trump retweeted a message from conservative actor and comedian Terrence K. Williams that suggested former president Bill Clinton might have been involved in the death of Epstein, the politically connected financier who had been facing multiple charges of sex trafficking involving underage girls. 'He's a very highly respected conservative pundit,' Trump told reporters in New Jersey, referring to Williams. 'He's a big Trump fan. That was a retweet, that wasn't from me. That was from him, but he's a man with half a million followers, a lot of followers. And he's respected.'"

-- England's Prince Andrew is facing fresh scrutiny for his past friendship with Epstein. Adam Taylor and Karla Adam report: "Buckingham Palace has never explained the photograph. It shows a middle-aged Prince Andrew, Duke of York, smiling with his arm around the bare waist of [redacted], then 17, who claims she was later paid by Jeffrey Epstein for sexual encounters with the prince. In the background stands Ghislaine Maxwell, a British socialite who accuses ex-prince Epstein's girlfriend and madam. The who accusers say was Epstein's girlfriend and madam. The photo was reportedly taken at Maxwell's London home in 2001. … With Epstein now dead after a suspected suicide Saturday and Maxwell apparently outside the reach of investigators, hiding from the limelight she once embraced, the Duke of York may be the highest-profile member of Epstein's circle from the time of the allegations against him. On Friday, newly unsealed legal documents from a defamation suit [redacted] brought against Maxwell resurfaced old accusations and elaborated on the account of inappropriate behavior. In the documents, [redacted], now [redacted], says she was 'trafficked' to Andrew, with whom she claims to have had three sexual encounters."

-- David Boies, the Democratic lawyer who once worked for Al Gore but who has been criticized for the methods he used to defend Theranos, will once again confront Alan Dershowitz, the intellectual bulwark on O.J. Simpson's defense team, in a separate legal fight over Epstein's actions. From Tom Jackman, Deanna Paul and Manuel Roig-Franzia: "In this long-running melodrama, Boies and his partners at Boies Schiller Flexner represent one of Epstein's accusers, [redacted] [redacted] — who was a teenage locker-room attendant at President Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort when she met Epstein. [redacted] has alleged that Epstein demanded that she have sex with him repeatedly when she was underage and lent her for sex to his friends, including Dershowitz. … Dershowitz's effort to counter the accusations has been made all the more nettlesome because his long-ago representation of Epstein has come under greater scrutiny following Epstein's arrest last month. Dershowitz, an emeritus Harvard University law professor, is also fending off a defamation suit filed by [redacted], set for key oral arguments next month, in which Boies has become a vital player. Because Epstein's death will end his criminal case, the [redacted] defamation action against Dershowitz could be one of the dwindling number of cases that would allow for the full public airing of numerous accusations against Epstein that his alleged victims have long sought."

Trump 'tired' of taxpayers paying for immigrants

-- The "Send her back!" chant continues to reverberate in Greenville, N.C., where Trump held a rally weeks before the El Paso shootings. For some voters there, the chant echoes as a prelude to murder. Griff Witte reports: "Samar Badwan, a Greenville resident, watched that day as 8,000 neighbors and fellow citizens jammed a local basketball arena to serenade the president with chants of 'Send her back,' a response to Trump's insistence that a Muslim, Somali American congresswoman should 'go back' to the land of her birth. … Before that day, Badwan had never had to question whether her hijab was incompatible with her Southern drawl. She never had to fear that her North Carolina neighbors might hold her Palestinian heritage against her. She never had to think that in Greenville — a city she has been proud to call home for 30 years, raising three children along the way — her faith would mark her as an unwanted outsider. Then the president came to town."

-- A little girl begged for her father's release after he was captured during the ICE raids in Mississippi. A week later, he's still detained. From CNN: "Andres Gomez-Jorge is being held at the Adams County Correctional Facility in Natchez, Mississippi. His family spoke on the phone with him briefly Tuesday for the first time since his arrest. The call came hours after CNN published a story saying that the family didn't know his whereabouts and feared for his well-being."

-- U.S. citizens are lining up for jobs in rural Mississippi that have opened up because of the ICE raids, which resulted in the arrest of hundreds of immigrant workers. Jonnelle Marte reports: "In a state where the poultry industry is one of the biggest drivers of the economy, some of the job applicants said they hoped the opportunities at Koch Foods, one of the meatpacking plants targeted by the raids, would improve their finances in both substantial and incremental ways. They arrived seeking a steadier paycheck. A slightly higher wage. A more accommodating schedule. … Even as many of the job hunters pondered the ways the chicken-processing jobs might bring them more stability, many of the workers — who were required to bring two forms of identification to the job fair — said they sympathized with the [detained employees] … Their sentiments challenge the narratives that typically drive the immigration debate in the United States, pitting undocumented workers against Americans seeking opportunity."

-- D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser (D) said she will not accept a federal government plan to house unaccompanied migrant children in Washington. Fenit Nirappil reports: "Bowser was reacting to an application from Dynamic Service Solutions, a federal contractor, to open a temporary shelter for children in the District. The company has been advertising job listings for educators, caseworkers and medical staff members to work with 'unaccompanied alien' children in the nation's capital. … The proposed facility would house as many as 242 children, according to a person familiar with the contractor's application to the city. Some members of the D.C. Council said they were under the impression that the shelter would be located on private property in Takoma, a Northwest D.C. neighborhood near the Maryland border."

-- A House panel with jurisdiction over firearms is expected to return early from recess to vote on new gun-control measures. "But there's one problem: Democrats are privately sparring over what exactly to approve," Rachael Bade and Paul Kane report. "House Democrats universally agree on expanding background checks, legislation they easily passed in February. They've also coalesced around proposals restricting high-capacity magazines, instituting 'red flag' laws that keep guns from individuals showing warning signs of violence, and potentially even legislation on hate crimes — ideas the House Judiciary Committee is expected to consider the week of Labor Day, according to two people familiar with the plan, a week before the full House is officially scheduled to plan, a week before the full House is officially scheduled to return. But there's still disagreement on whether the House should advance legislation reinstating an assault weapons ban that expired 15 years ago."

-- Gun-control groups are trying to build on the momentum after El Paso and Dayton. Amy B Wang, Tom Hamburger, Josh Dawsey and Marissa J. Lang report: "'People are fed up. This keeps on happening,' Christian Heyne, vice president of policy for the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence. 'The response to this from a small few people in one body of our federal government of Congress is the same. That's unbelievably frustrating.' Simultaneously, the groups are emboldened by what they see as a vacuum created by turmoil within the National Rifle Association. (The NRA denies its influence is slipping and has been talking directly to the president and others in the White House.) Gun-control activists are also aware of — if not completely reassured by — Trump's comments that he would support expanded background checks."

-- FBI agents found 25 guns and 10,000 rounds of ammunition in an Ohio teen's bedroom after he threatened to assault a law enforcement officer. From WGN-TV: "According to court documents, the user posted a threat to assault federal law enforcement officers writing, 'shoot every agent on sight,' in a discussion about the Branch Davidian standoff in Waco in 1993."

-- "It's been 5 years since a police officer killed my son, Michael Brown. Nothing has changed." Lezley McSpadden, the chief executive and founder of the Michael O.D. Brown Foundation, writes in an op-ed for The Post: "For many young black and brown people, the police too often feel like an occupying force in their neighborhoods instead of a force for good. A new study of young adults from the GenForward Survey at the University of Chicago found that while most white young adults believe you can trust the police 'always' or 'often' to do what is right, less than a third of young African Americans believe the same. Similarly, nearly half of African Americans ages 18 to 36 say they 'always' or 'often' go out of their way to avoid contact with the police or other law enforcement, compared with slightly more than a quarter of white young adults."

-- The New York Times demoted its congressional editor after he made problematic comments on Twitter. Paul Farhi reports: "The editor, Jonathan Weisman, came under fire for tweets questioning whether Reps. Rashida Tlaib (D-Mich.) and Ilhan Omar (D-Minn.) actually represented the Midwest and whether Reps. Lloyd Doggett (D-Tex.) and John Lewis (D-Ga.) represented the Deep South, given that their districts are primarily urban and heavily minority. Weisman said he was questioning whether the districts truly reflected the broader politics of their regions, which are predominantly white and more rural. He deleted the tweets after they were roundly criticized as racist. He later asked author and Times contributor Roxane Gay for an 'enormous apology' in an email after she called him out for those tweets and for criticizing him for identifying another congresswoman as African American without another Congressional as African American without mentioning that her primary challenger is also African American. Gay posted Weisman's email to her and her assistant and criticized him for his 'audacity and entitlement' for contacting her and her publisher to demand the apology. A Times spokeswoman, Eileen Murphy, said Weisman had apologized to Executive Editor Dean Baquet for 'his recent serious lapses in judgment,' but that he has been demoted and will no longer edit the newspaper's coverage of Congress. The Times didn't specify what Weisman's duties will be. The paper also said he would no longer be active on social media."

Clouds of economic uncertainty loom despite temporary reprieve from Trump on China tariffs

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: If President Trump wanted to stabilize the listing stock market, his Tuesday announcement that he will temporarily postpone the implementation of about half the tariffs on Chinese imports that he announced 12 days earlier did the trick. But only for the day. Companies whose supply chains depend on China, from Apple and Best Buy to Mattel and Nike, saw their share prices edge up.

The fundamentals have not changed. In fact, they continue to worsen. And stocks tumbled this morning when the markets opened. For the first time since 2007, the yields on short-term U.S. bonds eclipsed those of long-term bonds. This phenomenon, called the inverted yield curve, has preceded every recession in the past 50 years.

Bigger picture, the United States remains engaged in a trade war with China, the world's second-largest economy, with no end in sight. Trump's insistence that he still plans to impose all the previously announced duties on Dec. 15 forces corporate chieftains to prepare for more troubled waters ahead. Many analysts said the delay does nothing to mitigate the ominous clouds of uncertainty that hang over the economy. "Trade wars are good and easy to win," Trump said last year. That was wrong.

Beyond the inverted yield curve, economists are pointing to a litany of other early warning signs that indicate a recession looms, despite the Federal Reserve's recent decision to cut interest rates. There's already been a decline in business investment, and some companies are pulling back on hiring.

Yesterday, Trump came closer than he has before to acknowledging that his tariffs on Chinese imports are really taxes on American consumers. He's been falsely claiming that the Chinese are paying the full price of his tariffs. "We are doing this for the Christmas season, just in case some of the tariffs would have an impact on U.S. consumers," the president told reporters, as he prepared to fly to a speech in western Pennsylvania.

It's no coincidence that the products that got a carve-out from the planned 10 percent tariff on $300 billion worth of imports are consumer goods such as cellphones, laptops, strollers and sneakers. Higher prices might have caused sticker shock over the holidays. The prior tariffs, which have gone into effect, mostly increased the price of component parts that companies use to assemble something else. These new tariffs would hit finished goods such as iPhones, which are assembled in China, making it more likely that the higher costs are passed on to consumers.

Trump wants to win reelection, and he's sensitive to the markets. The result has been a series of erratic policy announcements that often appear to be improvisational and that cause whiplash for the markets. It sometimes feels as if Trump is practicing the "madman theory" in trade negotiations. Is he being crazy? Or crazy like a fox? For example, how seriously are we to take it when Trump threatens, as he did yesterday, to pull out of the World Trade Organization?

"It's complete manipulation," said Kenny Polcari of Butcher Joseph Asset Management. "[Trump] threatens the market, by surprise, two weeks ago. The markets re-price. Then he says, 'I think we are going to delay those tariffs.' … The [algorithms] respond immediately and take the market higher," Polcari told my colleagues Taylor Telford and Thomas Heath. "Of course the market is going to rally!"

"We are all just one tweet away from significant volatility," RSM chief economist Joe Brusuelas wrote in a note to his clients after Trump's tariff postponement. "The idea that this is a major source of relief to the economy is not tethered to empirical reality."

"We were relieved. But does that stop the volatility and instability? No," said Jay Foreman, chief executive of the Florida-based toy company Basic Fun. Foreman told the Associated Press yesterday that he's still considering layoffs this fall to offset his higher costs and noted that, despite Trump's reprieve, tariffs remain a severe threat.

"The climbdown over the China tariffs does not mean a trade deal is now near, not least because China's authorities currently face a much bigger problem, namely, the challenge to their legitimacy in Hong Kong, and that will take precedence," wrote Pantheon Macroeconomics chief economist Ian Shepherdson in a note to investors that Tory Newmyer covered in this morning's Finance 202. "But we can fully understand markets' relief at the lifting of the threat of tariffs on consumer goods just ahead of the holiday shopping season."

-- U.S. businesses have begun taking down job listings because of the uncertainty caused by the trade war: "Win Cramer had big plans to hire several new employees this summer for his company, including a chief operating officer, but he took the job listings down after Trump tweeted that more tariffs would hit Chinese goods in September," our economics correspondent Heather Long reported yesterday. "'It's the most frustrating time I've ever had running a business, and I've been doing this for 20 years,' said Cramer, chief executive of JLab Audio, which makes wireless earbuds and headphones sold at Best Buy, Target and elsewhere.

"The United States had 7.3 million job openings in June, down from a peak of 7.6 million in November. … While the decline is modest, economists are concerned hiring could dry up quickly as companies see no end in sight to Trump's trade war and they look to cut costs. The reduction in job openings is also widespread across many industries, signaling how cautious companies are becoming. A decrease in job openings has tended to be a signal of economic trouble. … Job openings peaked in April 2007, for example, nine months before the start of the Great Recession. Job openings in many industries have declined since November, including the information sector, financial services, transportation and warehousing, and hotels and food service, suggesting wide concern about future growth. Actual hires also have slowed this year, with average monthly job gains falling to 165,000 a month, down from 223,000 a month last year."

from Wall Street institutions to their clients that seem to become gloomier with each passing day:

"Trade's simmer has begun to boil, business sentiment and capital spending have softened further, global growth remains weak and inflation expectations have fallen," Morgan Stanley's Ellen Zentner wrote on Monday. "Heightened market volatility and increased news flow on trade may soften consumer sentiment and spending."

Goldman Sachs said Sunday it does not expect a trade deal between the U.S. and China before the 2020 election. "Fears that the trade war will trigger a recession are growing," wrote Goldman's chief U.S. economist, Jan Hatzius, explaining why growth projections are being lowered. "Overall, we have increased our estimate of the growth impact of the trade war. The drivers of this modest change are that we now include an estimate of the sentiment and uncertainty effects ... Relatedly, the business sentiment effect of increased pessimism about the outlook from trade war news may lead firms to invest, hire, or produce less."

"We are worried," Bank of America Merrill Lynch chief economist Michelle Meyer wrote Friday. "We now have a number of early indicators starting to signal heightened risk of recession. Our official model has the probability of a recession over the next 12 months only pegged at about 20 percent, but our subjective call based on the slew of data and events leads us to believe it is closer to a 1-in-3 chance. … Three out of the five economic indicators (auto sales, industrial production, and aggregate hours worked) which track the business cycle closely are near levels consistent at the start of the previous recessions."

- Inflation in the United States was slightly higher last month than expected: The Labor Department announced yesterday that the consumer price index rose 0.3 percent in July. That's modest but was above analyst predictions.
- U.S. mortgage debt reached a record in the second quarter, exceeding its 2008 peak as the financial crisis unfolded. "Mortgage balances rose by $162 billion in the second quarter to $9.406 trillion, surpassing the high of $9.294 trillion in the third quarter of 2008, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York said Tuesday," per the Wall Street Journal.
- China's economy is faltering: "The jobless rate in Chinese cities again rebounded in July to its highest level since regular reporting on the data began, as employers turned cautious," today's Journal reports. "Other key economic readings for the month, including factory production, consumption and property investment, came in much lower than expected."
- Germany's economy shrank slightly last quarter. Europe's biggest economy suffered from falling exports, and the auto industry is struggling to adjust to new emissions standards, per the AP.
- The British economy also unexpectedly shrank, for the first time since 2012, because of uncertainties surrounding Brexit.

-- Finally, some good news: We're hiring! I'm looking for an ambitious reporter to help me write The Daily 202. This is a demanding job that requires a news junkie and a creative thinker who is skilled at connecting the dots about news developments in Washington, around the country and the world. The ideal candidate will have a track record of writing conceptual scoops in the political arena, examining key developments in the White House, Congress or on the campaign trail in a fresh and original light. That candidate should be able to identify key themes and story lines from the slew of news that breaks on a daily basis, and skillfully synthesize those events in a meaningful and revelatory way for readers. This position is based in our Washington newsroom. (Read the full job posting here.) Email me at James.Hohmann@washpost.com if you have questions or ideas.

WHILE YOU WERE SLEEPING:

Rod Blagojevich, with his wife, Patti, at his side, speaks to reporters in Chicago before reporting to federal prison in 2012. (M. Spencer Green/AP)

-- Trump appears to have backed away from what had been imminent plans to commute the sentence of former Illinois governor Rod Blagojevich in the face of massive Republican blowback, CNN reports: "Several Republican lawmakers called acting White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney and White House counsel Pat Cipollone. At least two of them, Reps. Darin LaHood and Mike Bost, made their case directly to the President on Thursday night, urging him not to go forward. … Another White House official said that while Blagojevich's pardon seemed imminent late last week, there had been no movement on the matter since Trump spoke with the two congressmen. It appeared to be on ice, the official said, while offering the caveat that Trump could change his mind and decide to move forward.

"Multiple sources familiar with the calls said Trump and Mulvaney both did not seem aware of the details of Blagojevich's case, even though the president had decried the former governor as being treated 'unbelievably unfairly.' … Trump's son-in-law and senior adviser Jared Kushner had been funneling messages of support for Blagojevich's commutation to the president … Trump adviser and former New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani also made it clear to Trump that Blagojevich's sentence was too harsh. Bernard Kerik, a former NYPD commissioner who served time in prison on a tax fraud conviction and has been advocating for Blagojevich, slammed the opposition."

2020 WATCH:

-- Opinion columnist Elizabeth Bruenig went to her home state of Texas for a deep dive into why Trump seems poised to fare even better among evangelicals in 2020 than he did in 2016. Partly this is because they are culture warriors and want to get another ally on the Supreme Court, of course, but she concludes that it's also because "the backlash against them has cemented so much of what they already suspected about liberals' attitudes."

"Overall, American culture is hardly trending toward adherence to evangelical beliefs, with approval of same-sex marriage steadily rising among all religious groups (even evangelicals), religious affiliation quickly dropping, and support for legal abortion lingering at all-time

highs," Bruenig writes in a thoughtful essay. "In some sense it seemed that Trump is able, by being less Christian than your average Christian, to protect Christians who fear incursions from a hostile dominant culture. But that paradox also supplies a handy solution to the question of whether Christians should direct their efforts to worldly politics or turn inward, shunning political life for spiritual pursuits. By voting for Trump — even over more identifiably Christian candidates — evangelicals seem to have found a way to outsource their fears and instead reserve a strictly spiritual space for themselves inside politics without placing evangelical politicians themselves in power. In that sense, they can be both active political agents and a semi-cloistered religious minority, both of the world and removed from it, advancing their values while retreating to their own societies."

-- For a separate story, religion reporter Julie Zauzmer interviewed more than 50 evangelical Christians in the battleground states of Florida, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin: "In conversation, evangelical voters paint the portrait of the Trump they see: a president who acts like a bully but is fighting for them. A president who sees America like they do, a menacing place where white Christians feel mocked and threatened for their beliefs. A president who's against abortion and gay rights and who has the economy humming to boot. … The allegations that Trump sexually assaulted numerous women are not a moral concern, many Christians say. … Opponents decry his attitude toward people of color, his approach to immigrants detained at the border, his answers to violence in American cities, and on and on. But in Appleton, Wis., the Rev. Dennis Episcopo hasn't felt the need as a religious leader to denounce any of it in front of his congregation, which includes more than 5,000 attendees on a typical Sunday. The megachurch that he has led for 22 years is almost entirely white and conservative, like the lakeside region where it is located.

Episcopo has not seen any behavior from Trump in the past three years that would prompt him to openly dissuade churchgoers from supporting this president. 'There could be something, where society really crosses the line on something, that I feel as a pastor I have to get up and say something,' he muses. 'But it hasn't happened yet.'"

-- Former Colorado governor John Hickenlooper (D) is considering ending his presidential bid to run for the Senate. From the New York Times: "Hickenlooper, who is mired at the bottom of public polling of the presidential race, hopped into Senator Michael Bennet's car on Friday night in [Iowa] to discuss his impending decision. [They drove around together for 20 minutes in Clear Lake before the Wing Ding dinner.] … Officials who have been in discussions with the Hickenlooper campaign said Tuesday that the former two-term governor is giving serious consideration to switching to the Senate race but stressed that a final decision has not yet been made. Short of a massive change in political momentum, Mr. Hickenlooper is certain to fail to qualify for the next round of presidential debates in September, an additional blow to a campaign struggling to attract attention and financial contributions. ...

"Recent days have brought unsubtle messages that high-ranking Democratic officials in Colorado and Washington believe Mr. Hickenlooper is in the wrong race. The Denver Post on Sunday published polling done on behalf of 'a national Democratic group involved in Senate races' that showed Mr. Hickenlooper holding a 51-point lead over two other Democrats in the state's 2020 Senate race. On Monday, the 314 Action Fund, a super PAC that backs candidates who are scientists, announced a 'Draft Hick for Senate' campaign along with a poll it commissioned showing Mr. Hickenlooper leading Senator Cory Gardner, a Colorado Republican seeking re-election, by 13 percentage points in a head-to-head matchup."

-- Beto O'Rourke, who returned to his hometown of El Paso after the mass shooting there, may resume his 2020 campaign as early as this week amid persistent calls for him to run for Senate instead. Supporters of the former congressman want him to challenge Sen. John Cornyn (R). (Politico)

-- Republican donors are being advised by allies of Mike Pompeo to hold off on contributing to any of the current Senate candidates in Kansas as the secretary of state weighs whether to run for the open seat of retiring Sen. Pat Roberts. From Bloomberg News: "A Pompeo ally has been advising potential contributors to wait until after the secretary of state makes his decision ... The top U.S. diplomat and former CIA director, who served as a congressman in Kansas's 4th district from 2011-2017, has until June to enter the race."

-- Trump is trying to turn Joe Biden's gaffes into a major liability. Matt Viser reports: "Over the last few days, Biden has made a string of small missteps while campaigning during a crucial stretch in Iowa. … He has bungled oft-repeated lines, saying 'truth over facts' rather than truth over lies. … He spoke of meeting with Parkland students when he was vice president, even though the Florida school shooting occurred a year after he left office. … On their own, none of these mistakes significantly alter the race. ... Some say the gaffes pale in comparison to things Trump says. … That hasn't stopped Trump and his allies from seizing on Biden's comments. … On Friday, he said 'Joe is not playing with a full deck' and that 'something's going wrong with him.'"

-- Biden can learn a few lessons from Mitt Romney's 2012 presidential campaign, writes Dan Balz: "He continues to lead in the polls, nationally and in early states. He has led those polls from the start of the year to today. Still, he is treated as being in a precarious position, a vulnerable candidate not at his best and a few mistakes away from a real fall. Just like Romney through much of 2011. Romney was the disrespected front-runner in the 2012 Republican field. He could be awkward as a candidate and paid a price for it in the coverage of his campaign. But as with Biden, he led in most — not all — surveys ahead of the primaries and caucuses."

-- A new survey finds support for abortion rights remains steady, despite a growing partisan divide. Ariana Eunjung Cha and Scott Clement report: "No more than a quarter of residents in any state supports a total ban despite the increasing political divide on the issue. The Public Religion Research Institute survey released Tuesday involves an extraordinarily large sample of 40,292 interviews measuring abortion attitudes throughout 2018, allowing it to produce nuanced results for individual states and for very small demographic groups. It found that Americans remain generally supportive of abortion rights, with 54 percent saying it should be legal in all or most cases and 40 percent saying it should be illegal."

THE NEW WORLD ORDER:

-- The Hong Kong protest movement is facing a tipping point as demonstrators seek the sympathy of the international community. Gerry Shih and Timothy McLaughlin report: "After late-night mob scenes marred a demonstration that paralyzed this city's airport, protesters on Wednesday issued apologies seeking the international public's sympathy and forgiveness as they fought to regain control over a narrative that seemed to be tilting in Beijing's favor for the first time. The appeals, which included apologies to the police force, come as the struggle over public opinion reaches a climax. While Hong Kong's protest movement has become steadily radicalized and fractured, the Chinese government has sharply ramped up a propaganda effort in state media and on social networks to discredit and deflate a movement that to this point enjoyed wide support across Hong Kong society.

"Hong Kong's airport ground to a near-halt for a second day Tuesday after protesters assailing police brutality and government indifference occupied departure halls, sparking tense but largely peaceful confrontations with frustrated passengers, many of them stranded. The mood turned darker by nightfall after protesters seized two men — one a reporter for Chinese state media, another they claimed to be a Chinese government agent — and clashed with police and paramedics who tried to evacuate the pair. At one point, protesters surrounded and kicked a police van, sparking hand-to-hand clashes with riot police who fired pepper spray near the departure terminal.

"On Wednesday, police warned that protesters arrested during the terminal fracas could face life in prison. Seven men aged 17 to 28 years old were detained, five for unlawful assembly and two for assaulting police officers and possession of offensive weapons, said Mak Chin Ho, assistant police commissioner. … Threats of such severe punishment fit with an approach by Beijing, and its supporters in the Hong Kong government, to dramatically raise the potential cost for taking part in demonstrations."

-- China is threatening to use military-style force in Hong Kong, hoping that threats alone will disperse protests, as students plan to continue protesting once universities resume classes next month. Anna Fifield reports: "That would take the protests uncomfortably close to celebrations planned on Oct. 1 to mark the 70th anniversary of the foundation of the People's Republic of China, which was established with the goal of unifying greater China under the leadership of the Communist Party. … That concern, combined with increasingly strident rhetoric from Chinese officials, has raised fears about the possibility of military intervention in Hong Kong. This week, state-affiliated media outlets tweeted ominous videos of Chinese tanks carrying out exercises in Shenzhen, the southern Chinese city that borders Hong Kong, while authorities in Beijing portrayed the protests as 'terrorism.' China already stands accused of sending in thugs from local gangs to try to deter the protesters in Hong Kong, and there are growing concerns that it will send in the People's Armed Police, a paramilitary force responsible for internal security and 'stability maintenance.' Or perhaps even the People's Liberation Army."

-- Bloody eye patches have become the latest symbol of the Hong Kong protests after a young woman was hit in the face with a projectile that many protesters believe was fired by police. Katie Mettler reports: "Authorities said at a news conference that there was no proof to back up that claim. From the tension, a new rallying symbol was born. 'Eye for an eye,' some protesters shouted as they continued their sit-in ... Demonstrators also spray-painted 'eye for an eye' throughout the airport in Chinese and in English and covered their faces with mock eye patches made of gauze. Some colored them red, to signify blood."

-- China asked the Trump administration to back off after U.S. lawmakers, including Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) and House Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy (R-Calif.), condemned the violence against pro-democracy activists. From Reuters: "The United States has denied Chinese suggestions that it has a hand in the unrest. But China's foreign ministry spokeswoman Hua Chunying said the lawmakers' comments have 'provided new and powerful evidence to the world.'"

-- Meanwhile, Trump said the "thing" in Hong Kong — which he called a "riot" last week — is "very tough" but stopped short of criticizing China. From the Times: "In comments to reporters and in a series of afternoon tweets, Mr. Trump took no strong position on the demonstrations that have gripped Hong Kong for weeks and have drawn an increasingly brutal response from local security forces. He echoed none of the defenses of freedom and democracy coming from both Democrats and Republicans. … 'We'll see what happens. But I'm sure it'll work out,' he said. He added: 'I hope it works out for everybody, including China. I hope it works out peacefully. I hope nobody gets hurt. I hope nobody gets killed.' The president later tweeted that intelligence reports indicated that China's government 'is moving troops to the Border with Hong Kong.'"

-- Follow the money: Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) had quarterbacked the effort on Capitol Hill to lift sanctions on Russia's largest aluminum producer, a company that soon afterward backed the creation of the first new aluminum-rolling mill in the U.S. in nearly four decades — built in McConnell's home state. Tom Hamburger and Rosalind S. Helderman report: "In January, as the Senate debated whether to permit the Trump administration to lift sanctions on Russia's largest aluminum producer, two men with millions of dollars riding on the outcome met for dinner at a restaurant in Zurich. On one side of the table sat the head of sales for Rusal, the Russian aluminum producer that would benefit most immediately from a favorable Senate vote. … On the other side sat Craig Bouchard, an American entrepreneur who had gained favor with officials in Kentucky … By the next day, McConnell had successfully blocked the bill, despite the defection of 11 Republicans.

"Within weeks, the U.S. government had formally lifted sanctions on Rusal, citing a deal with the company that reduced the ownership interest of its Kremlin-linked founder, Oleg Deripaska. And three months later, Rusal announced plans for an extraordinary partnership with Bouchard's company, providing $200 million in capital to buy a 40 percent stake in the new aluminum plant in Ashland, Ky. — a project heralded by Gov. Matt Bevin (R) 'as significant as any economic deal ever made in the history of Kentucky.' A spokesman for McConnell said the majority leader did not know that Bouchard had hopes of a deal with Rusal at the time McConnell led the Senate effort to end the sanctions. … Democratic senators have called for a government review of the deal, prompting a Rusal executive in Moscow last week to threaten to pull out of the investment."

-- Russian villagers were told to leave their town following a missile test explosion. Will Englund reports: "It took most of Tuesday for officials to realize how damaging this looked given the nuclear materials involved in the accident. Arkhangelsk Gov. Igor Orlov insisted it wasn't an evacuation but a 'routine measure.' … About 450 people are said to live in the village, which abuts a military testing range. … A resident of Nyonoksa told ArkhangelskOnline that the village has been evacuated before, presumably because of the hazards of tests or other military activity nearby. … Local officials conducted a study of soil, sand, river and seawater samples from several points in the region and reported no excess levels of radiation, according to media reports."

-- Russia said the explosion caused a 16-fold spike in radiation. From the BBC: "Readings for gamma radiation at six testing stations in Severodvinsk, a city of 180,000 people, ranged from 4 to 16 times the normal rate of 0.11 microsieverts per hour," Russia's weather sevice said.

-- Donald Trump Jr. visited Indonesia to tout his family's new resorts and defend his father. Stanley Widianto and Joshua Partlow report: "'We have turned down a lot of deals,' Trump Jr. said at a news conference in the capital city of Jakarta. 'We made a very conscious decision of the family not to do that right now.' The Trump Organization has promised it would make no new foreign deals during President Trump's time in office. Plans for the two Indonesia resorts predate the Trump presidency but appeared to have stalled in recent years. Trump Jr. called it 'nonsense' that the president's foreign policy might be swayed by his business interests. 'He wouldn't make decisions that affect a country based on a real estate deal,' Trump Jr. said of his father."

-- Pakistan moved to ban single-use plastic bags. Anyone in the capital region of 1.5 million who uses, sells or manufactures the bags will face a fine. Pamela Constable reports: "The ban is the latest project in Prime Minister Imran Khan's green initiative, which began last year with a campaign to plant 10 billion trees to fight deforestation. … The fines in Pakistan will also be steep — $31 for using a single bag, $63 for selling one and up to $31,000 for manufacturing them. The national per capita income is $1,200 per year. Shoppers are not likely to be aggressively pursued, but companies that make and supply the bags have been warned that they will be inspected to enforce the ban."

-- In a bid to retain power, Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro is cracking down on his own military. From the Times: "Top military leaders have repeatedly declared their allegiance to the Maduro administration. But over the past two years, as the oil-rich economy crumbled and a majority of Venezuelans were left without sufficient food and medicine, factions within the security forces have staged at least five attempts to overthrow or assassinate the president. The government claims to have foiled at least a dozen more plots in that period … Mr. Maduro's Socialist Party is resorting to this siege mentality to justify ubiquitous surveillance, arbitrary detentions and the torture of perceived enemies, including those inside Venezuela's 160,000-strong armed forces."

THE DOMESTIC AGENDA:

-- The Justice Department reassigned the warden of the federal detention center where sex offender Jeffrey Epstein died. Two staffers were placed on leave. From Devlin Barrett, Matt Zapotosky and Aaron C. Davis: "The move to transfer [redacted], who had only recently begun working as the MCC's warden, came a day after Attorney General William P. Barr decried 'serious irregularities' there and a 'failure' to keep Epstein secure. … Barr appointed [redacted], who has been running a federal prison in nearby Otisville, N.Y., as the facility's new acting warden. The MCC is run by the Bureau of Prisons, which is part of the Justice Department and falls under Barr's authority. … Epstein was being held in a special housing unit of the MCC called Nine South and should have been checked on by the staff every 30 minutes. But correctional officers had not done so for 'several' hours before he was found by staff as they delivered breakfast to inmates, a person familiar with the matter said …

"To those who have worked in or around the MCC, Epstein's death is viewed as a symptom of long-term problems there and, more broadly, within the Bureau of Prisons. [redacted] Hood, a former chief of internal affairs for the bureau, said the MCC has had longtime problems with overcrowding and understaffing. But in recent years, he said, the bureau has been afflicted by a lack of leadership, with a significant number of senior positions filled by temporary appointments. … Sometimes, incompetence in the building reaches alarming proportions, observers said. In May 2017, for instance, a bank robber named David Evangelista was accidentally released from the MCC, even after he told staff he still had years left on his sentence …Still, the MCC is considered one of the safest and most secure lockup in the federal system. When Joaquín Archivaldo Guzmán Loera, the drug kingpin better known as 'El Chapo,' was brought to New York, he was jailed there."

-- The two prison staff members who were guarding Epstein fell asleep and failed to check on him for three hours, per the Times, which adds that the staffers — both working overtime — falsely recorded in a log that they had checked on the financier every 30 minutes, as was required. The paper notes that such false entries in an official log could constitute a federal crime.

-- The news of Epstein's death was posted on 4chan more than half an hour before it became public, leading the New York City Fire Department to look into whether an employee shared the details improperly. From BuzzFeed News: "Almost 40 minutes before ABC News first reported Epstein's death on Twitter, someone posted still-unverified details on 4chan, the anonymous message board popular with far-right trolls and white nationalists. … After publishing the post, other 4chan users egged on the author. When they expressed doubt, the original poster added more information to the discussion thread, including a detailed breakdown of the procedures allegedly used to resuscitate Epstein, which suggest the poster may have been a first responder, medical worker, or otherwise privy to details about efforts to resuscitate the disgraced financier. ... After telling BuzzFeed News the post was 'under review,' an FDNY spokesperson said authorities 'determined this alleged information did not come from the Fire Department.'"

-- Trump defended his promotion of the baseless conspiracy theory connecting the Clintons to Epstein's death. John Wagner reports: Trump said he "retweeted a 'very highly respected conservative pundit' who is a 'big Trump fan.' On Saturday, Trump retweeted a message from conservative actor and comedian Terrence K. Williams that suggested former president Bill Clinton might have been involved in the death of Epstein, the politically connected financier who had been facing multiple charges of sex trafficking involving underage girls. 'He's a very highly respected conservative pundit,' Trump told reporters in New Jersey, referring to Williams. 'He's a big Trump fan. That was a retweet, that wasn't from me. That was from him, but he's a man with half a million followers, a lot of followers. And he's respected.'"

-- England's Prince Andrew is facing fresh scrutiny for his past friendship with Epstein. Adam Taylor and Karla Adam report: "Buckingham Palace has never explained the photograph. It shows a middle-aged Prince Andrew, Duke of York, smiling with his arm around the bare waist of [redacted], then 17, who claims she was later paid by Jeffrey Epstein for sexual encounters with the prince. In the background stands Ghislaine Maxwell, a British socialite who accusers say was Epstein's girlfriend and madam. The photo was reportedly taken at Maxwell's London home in 2001. … With Epstein now dead after a suspected suicide Saturday and Maxwell apparently outside the reach of investigators, hiding from the limelight she once embraced, the Duke of York may be the highest-profile member of Epstein's circle from the time of the allegations against him. On Friday, newly unsealed legal documents from a defamation suit [redacted] brought against Maxwell resurfaced old accusations and elaborated on the account of inappropriate behavior. In the documents, [redacted], now [redacted], says she was 'trafficked' to Andrew, with whom she claims to have had three sexual encounters."

attendant at President Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort when she met Epstein. [redacted] has alleged that Epstein demanded that she have sex with him repeatedly when she was underage and lent her for sex to his friends, including Dershowitz. … Dershowitz's effort to counter the accusations has been made all the more nettlesome because his long-ago representation of Epstein has come under greater scrutiny following Epstein's arrest last month. Dershowitz, an emeritus Harvard University law professor, is also fending off a defamation suit filed by [redacted], set for key oral arguments next month, in which Boies has become a vital player. Because Epstein's death will end his criminal case, the [redacted] defamation action against Dershowitz could be one of the dwindling number of cases that would allow for the full public airing of numerous accusations against Epstein that his alleged victims have long sought."

Trump 'tired' of taxpayers paying for immigrants

-- The "Send her back!" chant continues to reverberate in Greenville, N.C., where Trump held a rally weeks before the El Paso shootings. For some voters there, the chant echoes as a prelude to murder. Griff Witte reports: "Samar Badwan, a Greenville resident, watched that day as 8,000 neighbors and fellow citizens jammed a local basketball arena to serenade the president with chants of 'Send her back,' a response to Trump's insistence that a Muslim, Somali American congresswoman should 'go back' to the land of her birth. … Before that day, Badwan had never had to question whether her hijab was incompatible with her Southern drawl. She never had to fear that her North Carolina neighbors might hold her Palestinian heritage against her. She never had to think that in Greenville — a city she has been proud to call home for 30 years, raising three children along the way — her faith would mark her as an unwanted outsider. Then the president came to town."

-- A little girl begged for her father's release after he was captured during the ICE raids in Mississippi. A week later, he's still detained. From CNN: "Andres Gomez-Jorge is being held at the Adams County Correctional Facility in Natchez, Mississippi. His family spoke on the phone with him briefly Tuesday for the first time since his arrest. The call came hours after CNN published a story saying that the family didn't know his whereabouts and feared for his well-being."

-- U.S. citizens are lining up for jobs in rural Mississippi that have opened up because of the ICE raids, which resulted in the arrest of hundreds of immigrant workers. Jonnelle Marte reports: "In a state where the poultry industry is one of the biggest drivers of the economy, some of the job applicants said they hoped the opportunities at Koch Foods, one of the meatpacking plants targeted by the raids, would improve their finances in both substantial and incremental ways. They arrived seeking a steadier paycheck. A slightly higher wage. A more accommodating schedule. … Even as many of the job hunters pondered the ways the chicken-processing jobs might bring them more stability, many of the workers — who were required to bring two forms of identification to the job fair — said they sympathized with the [detained employees] … Their sentiments challenge the narratives that typically drive the immigration debate in the United States, pitting undocumented workers against Americans seeking opportunity."

-- D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser (D) said she will not accept a federal government plan to house unaccompanied migrant children in Washington. Fenit Nirappil reports: "Bowser was reacting to an application from Dynamic Service Solutions, a federal contractor, to open a temporary shelter for children in the District. The company has been advertising job listings for educators, caseworkers and medical staff members to work with 'unaccompanied alien' children in the nation's capital. … The proposed facility would house as many as 242 children, according to a person familiar with the contractor's application to the city. Some members of the D.C. Council said they were under the impression that the shelter would be located on private property in Takoma, a Northwest D.C. neighborhood near the Maryland border."

-- A House panel with jurisdiction over firearms is expected to return early from recess to vote on new gun-control measures. "But there's one problem: Democrats are privately sparring over what exactly to approve," Rachael Bade and Paul Kane report. "House Democrats universally agree on expanding background checks, legislation they easily passed in February. They've also coalesced around proposals restricting high-capacity magazines, instituting 'red flag' laws that keep guns from individuals showing warning signs of violence, and potentially even legislation on hate crimes — ideas the House Judiciary Committee is expected to consider the week of Labor Day, according to two people familiar with the plan, a week before the full House is officially scheduled to return. But there's still disagreement on whether the House should advance legislation reinstating an assault weapons ban that expired 15 years ago."

-- Gun-control groups are trying to build on the momentum after El Paso and Dayton. Amy B Wang, Tom Hamburger, Josh Dawsey and Marissa J. Lang report: "'People are fed up. This keeps on happening,' Christian Heyne, vice president of policy for the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence. 'The response to this from a small few people in one body of our federal government of Congress is the same. That's unbelievably frustrating.' Simultaneously, the groups are emboldened by what they see as a vacuum created by turmoil within the National Rifle Association. (The NRA denies its influence is slipping and has been talking directly to the president and others in the White House.) Gun-control activists are also aware of — if not completely reassured by — Trump's comments that he would support expanded background checks."

-- FBI agents found 25 guns and 10,000 rounds of ammunition in an Ohio teen's bedroom after he threatened to assault a law enforcement officer. From WGN-TV: "According to court documents, the user posted a threat to assault federal law enforcement officers writing, 'shoot every agent on sight,' in a discussion about the Branch Davidian standoff in Waco in 1993."

-- "It's been 5 years since a police officer killed my son, Michael Brown. Nothing has changed." Lezley McSpadden, the chief executive and founder of the Michael O.D. Brown Foundation, writes in an op-ed for The Post: "For many young black and brown people, the police too often feel like an occupying force in their neighborhoods instead of a force for good. A new study of young adults from the GenForward Survey at the University of Chicago found that while most white young adults believe you can trust the police 'always' or 'often' to do what is right, less than a third of young African Americans believe the same. Similarly, nearly half of African Americans ages 18 to 36 say they 'always' or 'often' go out of their way to avoid contact with the police or other law enforcement, compared with slightly more than a quarter of white young adults."

-- The New York Times demoted its congressional editor after he made problematic comments on Twitter. Paul Farhi reports: "The editor, Jonathan Weisman, came under fire for tweets questioning whether Reps. Rashida Tlaib (D-Mich.) and Ilhan Omar (D-Minn.) actually represented the Midwest and whether Reps. Lloyd Doggett (D-Tex.) and John Lewis (D-Ga.) represented the Deep South, given that their districts are primarily urban and heavily minority. Weisman said he was questioning whether the districts truly reflected the broader politics of their regions, which are predominantly white and more rural. He deleted the tweets after they were roundly criticized as racist. He later asked author and Times contributor Roxane Gay for an 'enormous apology' in an email after she called him out for those tweets and for criticizing him for identifying another congresswoman as African American without mentioning that her primary challenger is also African American. Gay posted Weisman's email to her and her assistant and criticized him for his 'audacity and entitlement' for contacting her and her publisher to demand the apology. A Times spokeswoman, Eileen Murphy, said Weisman had apologized to Executive Editor Dean Baquet for 'his recent serious lapses in judgment,' but that he has been demoted and will no longer edit the newspaper's coverage of Congress. The Times didn't specify what Weisman's duties will be. The paper also said he would no longer be active on social media."

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Unfortunately, this is not a recent problem. Long delays, unexpected closures of the facility and lockdowns have all occurred frequently since Mr. Tartaglione was first arrested, over 3 years ago and have significantly hampered our ability to communicate with our client, who is facing the death penalty.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

These obstacles to meeting with our client are systemic and do not appear to be correctable without significant changes in how the BOP operates the faculty. The rooms for visiting have computers that are frequently broken, there are not enough rooms to accommodate the number of lawyers attempting to see their clients (several hours of delays are routine for any lawyer who doesn't arrive before 8:00), the staff frequently delays the opening of legal visiting but never extends the closing time, once in a room, a lawyer can expect to wait for their client to be produced from 10-15 minutes to hours and of course at times the facility simply closes and refuses visits all together.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

> The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were lucky in that we

mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Alda and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Psych Reconst Response - Epstein #76318-054.pdf

U.S. Department of Justice
Federal Bureau of Prisons

Reentry Services Division

Washington, DC 20534

DEC 27 2019

MEMORANDUM FOR [redacted], REGIONAL DIRECTOR
NORTHEAST REGION

FROM: [redacted] Assistant Director
Reentry Services Division

SUBJECT: Institution Response
Inmate Epstein, Jeffrey (76318-054)

I have reviewed the Institution Response dated November 19, 2019, to the Psychological Reconstruction of an inmate suicide involving Jeffrey Epstein (76318-054).

Some of the corrective actions and plans for implementation outlined in the response are unclear or insufficient. Please review the feedback provided and revise your response accordingly. An updated Institution Response is due to me within thirty (30) days of your receipt of this memorandum.

If you have questions or concerns, please feel free to contact me at [redacted]. I appreciate your assistance with this matter.

CC: [redacted] Warden, MCC New York

Institution Response Feedback
MCC New York
Epstein, Jeffrey (Reg. No. 76318-054)

Issue 1: Single Celling - Corrective Measure Accepted
The local guidelines provide a reasonable system of control to monitor the single-celling of inmates in the Special Housing Unit.

National guidelines for single celling in the Special Housing Unit have been incorporated into national policy and will soon be released. Please reference these generally with a plan to incorporate.

Issue 2: 30 Minute Rounds
The substance of the two hour Captain video review and six hour IDO video review is unclear. Please clarify the requirement for the Captain and IDO. Additionally, please identify the documentation used to maintain accountability of the reviews.

Issue 3: Cellmate Assignments
Documentation exists reflecting the role of the local Psychology Services department in communicating the importance of Mr. Epstein's status as a sex offender with specific needs to the Associate Warden. This includes consultation with the Psychology Services Branch in Central Office. The communication chain and decision making of Executive Staff lacks transparency as there is no documentation of the process or staff members present when decisions were made about the housing of Mr. Epstein. After the fact explanations may not accurately reflect what occurred.

Psychology Services was not adequately represented in the decision making of Executive Staff. Please establish a plan to increase the input of a psychologist in placement decisions for vulnerable inmates.

Issue 4: Documentation Accuracy
Professional responsibility requires taking into account multiple descriptions of an incident as noted in your response. However, when discrepancies exist these should be compiled and noted in documentation to decrease the likelihood of conflicting conclusions.

As noted in the reconstruction report, an incident report must be written within 24 hours of having the information that an inmate likely violated BOP rules. An incident report was written for Mr. Epstein prior to a determination of whether he engaged in self-directed violence or was assaulted on July 23, 2019. Staff had ample time to wait for the outcome of the SIS investigation of this incident. The incident report presumed self-directed violence, although SIS was not able to determine whether this incident was self-directed violence or an assault. Generating the incident report for self-directed violence is evidence of a local bias about the July 23, 2019 incident that still exists amongst some staff at MCC New York. Preconceived notions challenge the ability to remain open about alternative explanations, and subsequent systemic changes may be needed.

Please develop and provide local training for all staff that at a minimum reviews the time frame for writing incident reports and offers guidance when there is not clear evidence of an infraction. Include an outline of the training and evidence of staff who attended the training.

Typographical Errors - Corrective Measure Accepted

Medical Intake Screening - Response Accepted

Psychology Observation - Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 5: Telephone Calls
As noted in the response, there is a lack of documentation to substantiate that a lieutenant facilitated two telephone calls to Mr. Epstein. However, this does not address the report of two telephone calls being provided. This response implies that the reporting of two staff members is inaccurate.

The response neglects the documented telephone call to Mr. Epstein's deceased mother.

Issue 6: Direct Observation
Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 7: Follow-Up
Please provide documentation for the follow up training provided to staff detailing the content of the training and to whom it was provided.

Issue 8: Inmate Accountability and Assignment Accuracy
Periodic and unannounced checks are now conducted in SHU to determine pp30 assignments and actual inmate placement match. Please provide an operational definition of periodic. Please do the same for routine, as it relates Executive Staff bed book counts in all units. Where will the periodic and routine reviews be documented and will they include the identity (e.g., name and title) of staff who complete them?

Issue 9: Attorney Log Books
Please provide a copy of the log book audit.

Issue 13: Sex Offense Risk Factors
Psychologists are subject matter experts in sex offender risk factors and they play a crucial role in sharing this knowledge through traditional settings such as ICT, AT, and institutional meetings. However, Executive Staff play a pivotal role in establishing and addressing institutional culture and promoting and participating in training. A lack of a broad understanding of sex offender specific risk factors requires an intentional training approach led by Executive Staff. They must be out front talking about inmates with a sex offense, expressing an understanding of sex offender dynamics, modeling agency condoned expectations for the understanding and treatment of inmates with a sex offenses, and assisting with institutional trainings. These practices encourage a broader acceptance by line staff.

The Supreme Court on Friday refused to let the Justice Department immediately resume federal executions, denying the government's request to bypass a lower-court ruling that the department likely exceeded its powers by adopting a new lethal injection protocol.

Supreme Court Derails Plans to Resume Federal Executions

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court on Friday derailed Trump administration plans to resume executing federal prisoners next week, refusing to overrule lower-court orders allowing the condemned men to pursue claims that the Justice Department execution protocol violates the Federal Death Penalty Act.

The unsigned order sent the case back to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, where the Justice Department is appealing a district-court decision blocking executions while the issues are litigated. "We expect that the Court of Appeals will render its decision with appropriate dispatch," the order said.

No justice filed a dissent, but three conservative justices issued a statement suggesting they gave little weight to the inmates' argument.

"Nevertheless, in light of what is at stake, it would be preferable for the District Court's decision to be reviewed on the merits by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit before the executions are carried out," Justice Samuel Alito wrote, joined by Justices Neil Gorsuch and Brett Kavanaugh.

"While we are disappointed with the ruling, we will argue the case on its merits in the D.C. Circuit and, if necessary, the Supreme Court. The Department of Justice is committed to upholding the rule of law and to carrying forward sentences imposed by our justice system," department spokeswoman Kerri Kupec said.

"Three courts have now agreed that the federal government's new execution protocol must be fully adjudicated before it can be used to carry out executions," said Shawn Nolan, a federal defender representing one of the condemned men. "The courts have made clear that the government cannot rush executions in order to evade judicial review of the legality and constitutionality of its new execution procedure."

The Supreme Court's order was the latest setback for the administration's drive to reactivate federal executions at the federal prison in Terre Haute, Ind., after a 16-year hiatus. On Thursday, a federal judge in Terre Haute blocked the government from executing Daniel Lewis Lee, who was scheduled to die on Monday for murdering an Arkansas gun dealer and his family.

Judge J.P. Hanlon found that federal prosecutors misled jurors to believe Mr. Lee had committed a prior murder, a factor that could have been pivotal in convincing the jury to vote for death. He stayed the execution so further review could proceed.

On Friday, the Justice Department appealed that decision to the Seventh Circuit in Chicago, arguing that Mr. Lee waited too long to bring his claim and that whether he had been charged with the prior murder or not was irrelevant.

Friday's Supreme Court order lets stand, for now, a November decision by a federal-district judge in Washington, D.C., staying the executions of Mr. Lee and three other inmates Attorney General William Barr had selected to die at Terre Haute in December and January. Judge Tanya Chutkan found that government plans to execute its prisoners by the same pentobarbital method likely violated the Federal Death Penalty Act, which requires that federal prisoners be put to death according to the laws of the state in which they were convicted.

A fifth prisoner's execution, scheduled for Dec. 11, received a stay from the Ninth Circuit, in San Francisco, so he could pursue claims of juror bias. A hearing on that issue is scheduled for Dec. 13 before a federal judge in Phoenix.

In Terre Haute, Judge Hanlon observed that the trial judge in 1999 found that Mr. Lee's co-defendant, Chevie Kehoe, was more culpable for the killings. After the jury sentenced Mr. Kehoe to life imprisonment without parole, the U.S. attorney notified the court that she wouldn't seek the death penalty against Mr. Lee.

That decision, however, was overruled by Eric Holder, then deputy attorney general, who convened the Justice Department's death-penalty committee while Attorney General Janet Reno was at a White House meeting, court opinions say.

At the penalty phase, federal prosecutors told jurors that Mr. Lee "has another murder under his belt," referring to a 1990 Oklahoma killing of Joey Wavra when Mr. Lee was 17. In that case, a co-defendant was convicted of the murder, but Mr. Lee made a plea bargain with state prosecutors for robbery.

"I would suggest to you both legally and morally" Mr. Lee had "the blood of Joey Wavra" on his hands, the prosecutor told the Arkansas jury. The plea bargain was a "gift" that Mr. Lee squandered by killing again, the government argued.

In fact, Judge Hanlon wrote, the Oklahoma state judge had found no probable cause to charge Mr. Lee with murder in the Wavra case.

"Mr. Lee has presented substantial grounds for claims that his death sentence is unconstitutional," wrote Judge Hanlon, a former federal prosecutor appointed last year by President Trump. He cited Supreme Court precedents that require the government to provide exculpatory information to the defense and prevent it from introducing evidence it knows is false.

Hello Ray,

Yes, the MDC Brooklyn incident was covered by special project. However, this was to cover assistance throughout the duration of the incident along with chiller and repair costs. The Regional staff could not provide justification for additional expenses directly related to the Epstein incident. The only explanation provided was due to staff shortage, MCC NY was bringing in staff for staff assist. I explained to the Regional Comptroller that Bureau institutions are suffering from staff shortages nationwide and any expenses associated with those shortages are being absorbed at those locations or Regions. We did however provide utilization of the project code for the travel expenses of the after action team. I've advised all the Regional Comptrollers, due to priority spending directed by DOJ, such as FSA spending, we would re-evaluate our budget status during the first week of September to see if any additional funding can be provided. We will certainly help if we can. Please let me know if you have any additional questions.

Thanks,

The Administration Division has provided us a guidance that we are not authorized to charge any of our TDY Expenses to the project 87F, Eptein Death at the national level. It was explained to us that the project was established for regional tracking purposes only and we at the regional level will have to absorb all TDY costs related to MCC New York.
So far, approximately 60 staff from various institutions for various dates as early as 8/18 through 9/28 are scheduled for TDY to New York.
The estimated costs for TDY expenses will be approximately $500.000.

[redacted],

As part of our obligations to prepare for the penalty phase (should there be one) of Mr. Tartaglione's trial, we would like to view the cells (including SHU ) and common areas where he has been held. It's possible that we will want to take some photographs, but initially we just want to look at the areas where he has been housed.

They were checking on three things:
1) confirming no investigation into Tartaglione re Epstein (confirmed)
2) getting video of the 7/23/19 suicide attempt (Pina took care of it)
3) checking with SIS whether they still have the rope from that attempt (still pending)

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to [redacted]. His [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to [redacted]. His [redacted].

The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

----------X

Government.

Defendant.

----------X

19 Cr 490

The Court will conduct a brief hearing on Tuesday, August 27, 2019 at 10:30 a.m. in connection with the nolle prosequi order proposed to the Court on August 19, 2019 by the United States Attorney.

The Court believes that where, as here, a defendant has died before any judgment has been entered against him, the public may still have an informational interest in the process by which the prosecutor seeks dismissal of an indictment.

At the hearing, Counsel for the Government and for the deceased Defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, will be heard. Counsel for the victims and the victims will also be heard, if they wish to be.

The hearing will be held in Courtroom 17B.

Good morning all,

Per the below list of complaints please look into the following:

Facilities - can you look into the alleged leak in his cell, no. Z01-106?

Safety - can you let me know the last time 9 South had pest control?

SIS - can you follow up with FBI on his incident report? Can you also look into whether the alleged rodent on his bed might have been his cellmate accusing him of being an snitch?

SHU - can you swap out his books? Can you check on the lights in his cell? Was his paper discovery located? Is he claiming he is still missing any?

Thanks all,

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to [redacted]. His [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

These obstacles to meeting with our client are systemic and do not appear to be correctable without significant changes in how the BOP operates the faculty. The rooms for visiting have computers that are frequently broken, there are not enough rooms to accommodate the number of lawyers attempting to see their clients (several hours of delays are routine for any lawyer who doesn't arrive before 8:00), the staff frequently delays the opening of legal visiting but never extends the closing time, once in a room, a lawyer can expect to wait for their client to be produced from 10-15 minutes to hours and of course at times the facility simply closes and refuses visits all together.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Alda and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Thanks. Gonna be interesting to see how media plays out moving forward. I didn't speak to the reporters today like I did with KJ. I expect a good story in the future from KJ. He was very impressed. Don't know what today's reporters thought.

Washington, DC 20534

NORTHEAST REGION

FROM: [redacted]ssistant Director
Reentry Services Division

SUBJECT: Institution Response
Inmate Epstein, Jeffrey (76318-054)

I have reviewed the Institution Response dated November 19, 2019, to the Psychological Reconstruction of an inmate suicide involving Jeffrey Epstein (76318-054).

Some of the corrective actions and plans for implementation outlined in the response are unclear or insufficient. Please review the feedback provided and revise your response accordingly. An updated Institution Response is due to me within thirty (30) days of your receipt of this memorandum.

If you have questions or concerns, please feel free to contact me at [redacted]. I appreciate your assistance with this matter.

Institution Response Feedback
MCC New York

Issue 1: Single Celling - Corrective Measure Accepted
The local guidelines provide a reasonable system of control to monitor the single-celling of inmates in the Special Housing Unit.

National guidelines for single celling in the Special Housing Unit have been incorporated into national policy and will soon be released. Please reference these generally with a plan to incorporate.

Issue 2: 30 Minute Rounds
The substance of the two hour Captain video review and six hour IDO video review is unclear. Please clarify the requirement for the Captain and IDO. Additionally, please identify the documentation used to maintain accountability of the reviews.

Issue 3: Cellmate Assignments
Documentation exists reflecting the role of the local Psychology Services department in communicating the importance of Mr. Epstein's status as a sex offender with specific needs to the Associate Warden. This includes consultation with the Psychology Services Branch in Central Office. The communication chain and decision making of Executive Staff lacks transparency as there is no documentation of the process or staff members present when decisions were made about the housing of Mr. Epstein. After the fact explanations may not accurately reflect what occurred.

Psychology Services was not adequately represented in the decision making of Executive Staff. Please establish a plan to increase the input of a psychologist in placement decisions for vulnerable inmates.

Issue 4: Documentation Accuracy
Professional responsibility requires taking into account multiple descriptions of an incident as noted in your response. However, when discrepancies exist these should be compiled and noted in documentation to decrease the likelihood of conflicting conclusions.

As noted in the reconstruction report, an incident report must be written within 24 hours of having the information that an inmate likely violated BOP rules. An incident report was written for Mr. Epstein prior to a determination of whether he engaged in self-directed violence or was assaulted on July 23, 2019. Staff had ample time to wait for the outcome of the SIS investigation of this incident. The incident report presumed self-directed violence, although SIS was not able to determine whether this incident was self-directed violence or an assault. Generating the incident report for self-directed violence is evidence of a local bias about the July 23, 2019 incident that still exists amongst some staff at MCC New York. Preconceived notions challenge the ability to remain open about alternative explanations, and subsequent systemic changes may be needed.

Please develop and provide local training for all staff that at a minimum reviews the time frame for writing incident reports and offers guidance when there is not clear evidence of an infraction. Include an outline of the training and evidence of staff who attended the training.

Typographical Errors - Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 5: Telephone Calls
As noted in the response, there is a lack of documentation to substantiate that a lieutenant facilitated two telephone calls to Mr. Epstein. However, this does not address the report of two telephone calls being provided. This response implies that the reporting of two staff members is inaccurate.

The response neglects the documented telephone call to Mr. Epstein's deceased mother.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 7: Follow-Up
Please provide documentation for the follow up training provided to staff detailing the content of the training and to whom it was provided.

Issue 8: Inmate Accountability and Assignment Accuracy
Periodic and unannounced checks are now conducted in SHU to determine pp30 assignments and actual inmate placement match. Please provide an operational definition of periodic. Please do the same for routine, as it relates Executive Staff bed book counts in all units. Where will the periodic and routine reviews be documented and will they include the identity (e.g., name and title) of staff who complete them?

Issue 9: Attorney Log Books
Please provide a copy of the log book audit.

Issue 10: Automatic External Defibrillators
The response states the reconstruction team reviewed an old and outdated list from January 8, 2018. It is important to note this list was provided to the reconstruction team by institution staff. Provision of inaccurate documentation may reflect systemic issues related to collecting, maintaining, and sharing relevant documentation.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 11: Post Orders & SHU Training
Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 12: Staffing

Issue 13: Sex Offense Risk Factors
Psychologists are subject matter experts in sex offender risk factors and they play a crucial role in sharing this knowledge through traditional settings such as ICT, AT, and institutional meetings. However, Executive Staff play a pivotal role in establishing and addressing institutional culture and promoting and participating in training. A lack of a broad understanding of sex offender specific risk factors requires an intentional training approach led by Executive Staff. They must be out front talking about inmates with a sex offense, expressing an understanding of sex offender dynamics, modeling agency condoned expectations for the understanding and treatment of inmates with a sex offenses, and assisting with institutional trainings. These practices encourage a broader acceptance by line staff.

Good morning all,

Per the below list of complaints please look into the following:

Facilities - can you look into the alleged leak in his cell, no. Z01-106?

Safety - can you let me know the last time 9 South had pest control?

SIS - can you follow up with FBI on his incident report? Can you also look into whether the alleged rodent on his bed might have been his cellmate accusing him of being an snitch?

SHU - can you swap out his books? Can you check on the lights in his cell? Was his paper discovery located? Is he claiming he is still missing any?

Thanks all,

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in

he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Subject: Re: Tartaglione conditions/visits

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning all,

Per the below list of complaints please look into the following:

Facilities - can you look into the alleged leak in his cell, no. Z01-106?

Safety - can you let me know the last time 9 South had pest control?

SIS - can you follow up with FBI on his incident report? Can you also look into whether the alleged rodent on his bed might have been his cellmate accusing him of being an snitch?

SHU - can you swap out his books? Can you check on the lights in his cell? Was his paper discovery located? Is he claiming he is still missing any?

Thanks all,

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in

he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Subject: Re: Tartaglione conditions/visits

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

DEC 27 2019

NORTHEAST REGION

FROM: [redacted]ssistant Director
Reentry Services Division

SUBJECT: Institution Response
Inmate Epstein, Jeffrey (76318-054)

I have reviewed the Institution Response dated November 19, 2019, to the Psychological Reconstruction of an inmate suicide involving Jeffrey Epstein (76318-054).

Some of the corrective actions and plans for implementation outlined in the response are unclear or insufficient. Please review the feedback provided and revise your response accordingly. An updated Institution Response is due to me within thirty (30) days of your receipt of this memorandum.

If you have questions or concerns, please feel free to contact me at (202) 514-8585. I appreciate your assistance with this matter.

CC: [redacted]. [redacted], Warden, MCC New York

Institution Response Feedback
MCC New York

Issue 1: Single Celling - Corrective Measure Accepted
The local guidelines provide a reasonable system of control to monitor the single-celling of inmates in the Special Housing Unit.

National guidelines for single celling in the Special Housing Unit have been incorporated into national policy and will soon be released. Please reference these generally with a plan to incorporate.

Issue 2: 30 Minute Rounds
The substance of the two hour Captain video review and six hour IDO video review is unclear. Please clarify the requirement for the Captain and IDO. Additionally, please identify the documentation used to maintain accountability of the reviews.

Issue 3: Cellmate Assignments
Documentation exists reflecting the role of the local Psychology Services department in communicating the importance of Mr. Epstein's status as a sex offender with specific needs to the Associate Warden. This includes consultation with the Psychology Services Branch in Central Office. The communication chain and decision making of Executive Staff lacks transparency as there is no documentation of the process or staff members present when decisions were made about the housing of Mr. Epstein. After the fact explanations may not accurately reflect what occurred.

Psychology Services was not adequately represented in the decision making of Executive Staff. Please establish a plan to increase the input of a psychologist in placement decisions for vulnerable inmates.

Issue 4: Documentation Accuracy
Professional responsibility requires taking into account multiple descriptions of an incident as noted in your response. However, when discrepancies exist these should be compiled and noted in documentation to decrease the likelihood of conflicting conclusions.

As noted in the reconstruction report, an incident report must be written within 24 hours of having the information that an inmate likely violated BOP rules. An incident report was written for Mr. Epstein prior to a determination of whether he engaged in self-directed violence or was assaulted on July 23, 2019. Staff had ample time to wait for the outcome of the SIS investigation of this incident. The incident report presumed self-directed violence, although SIS was not able to determine whether this incident was self-directed violence or an assault. Generating the incident report for self-directed violence is evidence of a local bias about the July 23, 2019 incident that still exists amongst some staff at MCC New York. Preconceived notions challenge the ability to remain open about alternative explanations, and subsequent systemic changes may be needed.

Please develop and provide local training for all staff that at a minimum reviews the time frame for writing incident reports and offers guidance when there is not clear evidence of an infraction. Include an outline of the training and evidence of staff who attended the training.

Typographical Errors - Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 5: Telephone Calls
As noted in the response, there is a lack of documentation to substantiate that a lieutenant facilitated two telephone calls to Mr. Epstein. However, this does not address the report of two telephone calls being provided. This response implies that the reporting of two staff members is inaccurate.

The response neglects the documented telephone call to Mr. Epstein's deceased mother.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 7: Follow-Up
Please provide documentation for the follow up training provided to staff detailing the content of the training and to whom it was provided.

Issue 8: Inmate Accountability and Assignment Accuracy
Periodic and unannounced checks are now conducted in SHU to determine pp30 assignments and actual inmate placement match. Please provide an operational definition of periodic. Please do the same for routine, as it relates Executive Staff bed book counts in all units. Where will the periodic and routine reviews be documented and will they include the identity (e.g., name and title) of staff who complete them?

Issue 9: Attorney Log Books
Please provide a copy of the log book audit.

Issue 10: Automatic External Defibrillators
The response states the reconstruction team reviewed an old and outdated list from January 8, 2018. It is important to note this list was provided to the reconstruction team by institution staff. Provision of inaccurate documentation may reflect systemic issues related to collecting, maintaining, and sharing relevant documentation.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 12: Staffing

Issue 13: Sex Offense Risk Factors
Psychologists are subject matter experts in sex offender risk factors and they play a crucial role in sharing this knowledge through traditional settings such as ICT, AT, and institutional meetings. However, Executive Staff play a pivotal role in establishing and addressing institutional culture and promoting and participating in training. A lack of a broad understanding of sex offender specific risk factors requires an intentional training approach led by Executive Staff. They must be out front talking about inmates with a sex offense, expressing an understanding of sex offender dynamics, modeling agency condoned expectations for the understanding and treatment of inmates with a sex offenses, and assisting with institutional trainings. These practices encourage a broader acceptance by line staff.

Hi Bruce,

Mr. Tartaglione was meeting with another member of your defense team earlier today. The plan was to have him remain in attorney conference after that meeting so he could review his discovery through the count. (It would also ensure he would already be down there when you arrived.) Without going into details, we're doing a special, more detailed count today at 4:00 PM for security procedures. I called attorney conference to make sure your client was still there, but they advised me that they had to send him back upstairs for this particular count.

I will likely still be here when count clears so I'll try to assist in getting him down to attorney conference as quickly as possible, but I wanted to let you know that you may unfortunately have a wait tonight. If you want to reschedule for tomorrow evening, let me know and I'll make sure things go smoother.

Thanks,

Good afternoon,

Can I meet with Nick on Thursday, August 15th at 5:00 p.m?

By the way, I am imagine you have seen some of my comments repeating the complaints about MCC that I have been making for years. Please know that none of that was directed at you. You both have been professional, courteous and responsive to me, even in the face of my numerous complaints and emails. The press does not write about the good, but I have mentioned how much I admire the legal staff at MCC on several occasions.

I am writing as I have been asked to update everyone on the continuing problems at the facility.

Subject: MCC conditions

I am writing as I have been asked to update everyone on the continuing problems at the facility.

Mr. Tartaglione has not has books swapped out since [redacted] was kind enough to do it himself on August 15th. His radio has needed batteries for several days. The guards simply refuse to provide him with the batteries and new books he believes are in his property. Several guards have been making comments to him such as "You're threatening our lives" and "Give the big mouth his try" and similar remarks aimed at intimidating him and conveying to him their displeasure with his complaints.

As for visiting I arrived on Sunday and waited nearly 50 minutes because there was not staff in the lobby to process legal visits. I was able to see my client by 9;10, but I couldn't stay through the count so I had to leave before 9:30. I know I did not make an appointment but the issue wasn't a free room, but adequate staffing in the lobby. Yesterday I was able to see my client at 5:00 as scheduled.

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be presented on an indictment tomorrow. His attorney, Martin Weinberg, has represented him in the past, and represents him in connection with our case and has been in touch with us throughout the weekend. He went to MCC today to meet with him in advance of the presentment tomorrow, but was just told he is not allowed in because he is from out-of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to you—is it at all possible to address this issue so Mr. Weinberg can meet with his client this evening? I'm available anytime at [redacted] to discuss, if that's helpful, or Mr. Weinberg can also be reached directly at 617-901-3472 if that's easier (though if you reach out directly to him if you could please just let me know afterward I'd be grateful).

thanks very much,
[redacted].

Good afternoon,

As I think you all know Nick has been placed in SHU based on an allegation that he was in possession of a cell phone. If true, I understand that some appropriate and proportional sanction may be in order.

Leaving that aside I want to address the conditions in his cell. The toilet is leaking and the floor is wet. As of Wednesday, he hasn't received his personal property, including his books. He has been sitting in the cell with literally nothing to read, listen to or watch. Can we please make an effort to get him reading material, his radio and the accompanying batteries.

Most troubling is that he tells me that the legal work he had out when he was removed from the cell has not been returned to him. This included documents prepared for him by my office which contained substantial and sensitive work product that falls squarely within the attorney client privilege. Nick made notes on some of these documents to prepare for our next meeting. When I saw him Wednesday, he had some of his legal paperwork but not the documents he was working with when he was taken from the cell. I am very concerned that these documents have been seized by the staff at MCC. Can you please take steps to see to that all of this material be returned to him immediately.

Lastly, I am hoping we can find time early next week to discuss the conditions of Nick's confinement going forward.

Good afternoon,

As I think you all know Nick has been placed in SHU based on an allegation that he was in possession of a cell phone. If true, I understand that some appropriate and proportional sanction may be in order.

Leaving that aside I want to address the conditions in his cell. The toilet is leaking and the floor is wet. As of Wednesday, he hasn't received his personal property, including his books. He has been sitting in the cell with literally nothing to read, listen to or watch. Can we please make an effort to get him reading material, his radio and the accompanying batteries.

Most troubling is that he tells me that the legal work he had out when he was removed from the cell has not been returned to him. This included documents prepared for him by my office which contained substantial and sensitive work product that falls squarely within the attorney client privilege. Nick made notes on some of these documents to prepare for our next meeting. When I saw him Wednesday, he had some of his legal paperwork but not the documents he was working with when he was taken from the cell. I am very concerned that these documents have been seized by the staff at MCC. Can you please take steps to see to that all of this material be returned to him immediately.

Lastly, I am hoping we can find time early next week to discuss the conditions of Nick's confinement going forward.

As part of our obligations to prepare for the penalty phase (should there be one) of Mr. Tartaglione's trial, we would like to view the cells (including SHU ) and common areas where he has been held. It's possible that we will want to take some photographs, but initially we just want to look at the areas where he has been housed.

They were checking on three things:
1) confirming no investigation into Tartaglione re Epstein (confirmed)
2) getting video of the 7/23/19 suicide attempt (Pina took care of it)
3) checking with SIS whether they still have the rope from that attempt (still pending)

District Of Corrections: Does D.C. Really Have The Highest Incarceration Rate In The Country?
WAMU
https://wamu.org/story/19/09/10/district-of-corrections-does-d-c-really-have-the-highest-incarceration-rate-in-the-country/
For a brief moment last week, D.C. was at opposite ends of a debate. One on side, criminal-justice reform advocates were saying that D.C. imprisons more people per capita than any of the 50 states. But the U.S. Attorney for D.C., which prosecutes all violent crime in the city, said just the opposite, pointing to data allegedly showing that the city actually sends fewer people to prison than any of the states.

Does a Kansas Inmate Have a Right to Opioid Addiction Drugs? A Judge Will Decide

NY Times

September 11, 2019

The American Civil Liberties Union is suing a federal prison in Kansas to force it to provide an inmate with buprenorphine, an opioid addiction medication, saying the man would "inevitably suffer and possibly die" without it.

Officials at the Leavenworth federal penitentiary are not providing the inmate, Leaman Crews, with the buprenorphine he needs to stay sober, Lauren Bonds, legal director of the A.C.L.U. of Kansas, said on Tuesday. Instead, she said, they are medicating him with codeine, an opioid, to keep him from going through a painful withdrawal, and Tylenol.

Judge Carlos Murguia of Federal District Court for the District of Kansas will decide after an emergency hearing Wednesday afternoon whether prison officials are obligated to provide Mr. Crews with buprenorphine.

Before reporting to the Leavenworth prison last Wednesday to serve a three-year sentence for embezzlement, Mr. Crews, 45, had been in recovery for 14 months with the aid of the medication, according to Ms. Bonds.

"It is a rare feat for that long a period," she said, referring to using buprenorphine during recovery to treat addiction. "It was kind of a success story."

The Federal Bureau of Prisons did not respond on Tuesday to questions about why buprenorphine is not available to inmates in recovery, but is permitted for inmates in detox.

The office of the United States attorney for the District of Kansas is reviewing the A.C.L.U. complaint, according to Jim Cross, a spokesman.

The prison bureau, which incarcerates nearly 180,000 people, estimates that close to 40 percent of its inmates enter the federal prison system with a substance abuse problem, according to a letter a bipartisan group of eight senators sent to the Government Accountability Office last year. For federal inmates, methadone and — much less frequently — buprenorphine are usually prescribed for detoxing, as opposed to hedging cravings and maintaining sobriety.

Pregnant women, however, are allowed to take medications that suppress opioid cravings for more than just detoxing, according to the prison bureau. By prescribing codeine to inmates, Ms. Bonds said, the federal prison system is supporting the cycle of addiction and increasing the chance inmates have of overdosing once they are released from custody.

"We do know that in Leavenworth they offer buprenorphine for inmates in certain situations, usually to help people detox, as opposed to maintaining sobriety," Ms. Bonds said.

By providing Mr. Crews with codeine, the prison was "making his opioid addiction worse," Michael V. Pantalon, a senior research scientist in the Yale School of Medicine's department of emergency medicine, said.

"He will have codeine to reinforce his opioid addiction rather than the medications that would treat it," Dr. Pantalon said. "I can understand why there is a lawsuit," he added.

According to the complaint, filed on Friday in the Federal District Court, federal prisons do not provide buprenorphine to inmates even when, as with Mr. Crews, the inmate had been prescribed the medication before being in custody.

Studies show that the success rate for staying sober is much greater when buprenorphine is made available to the person struggling with addiction for at least a year, according to Dr. Pantalon.

"People who stay on it for one consecutive year or longer do far, far better and stay abstinent for longer," he said.

"It is a chronic disease, so it needs chronic treatment just like people with asthma or hypertension," he added. "We don't ask people with hypertension, 'When are you coming off the hypertension medication?'"

Most professionals who treat addiction recommend a combination of therapy and medication.

"This is a brain disorder; it is not just an addiction of the body," Dr. Karan Baucom, director of the Baucom Institute, a treatment facility in Overland Park, Kan., said on Tuesday. "The brain has been reconfigured by the drug itself; it structurally changes the brain's response."

The cycle of opioid addiction is fueled by the body's natural response to avoiding pain, Dr. Baucom explained. If someone in recovery does not have buprenorphine or methadone available, she said, they can get "so sick that they have to use the narcotic to recover from the symptom." Most people addicted to opioids get to a point where they are only using opioids to keep from getting sick, she added.

Opioid abusers have less than a 30 percent chance to stay sober without the proper medication, Dr. Baucom said.

The chances that an inmate will survive a relapse after being released from custody plummets, while the chances that he or she will overdose skyrockets.

"It is not life or death, like you take him off and he dies," Dr. Pantalon said. "It is life or death mainly when he comes out," he added.

Of course, some inmates can find opioids in prison in the codeine they are prescribed. And illegal drugs can make their way into prison as well, Ms. Bonds noted.

"I think there is a risk of relapse, and not just when he is released," she said.

[redacted],

As part of our obligations to prepare for the penalty phase (should there be one) of Mr. Tartaglione's trial, we would like to view the cells (including SHU ) and common areas where he has been held. It's possible that we will want to take some photographs, but initially we just want to look at the areas where he has been housed.

Hi [redacted],

We may need wall counsel again in the Tartaglione matter in relation to the below site visit request. [redacted] so excellently helped us last time in our appearance on the conditions of confinement issue, so I cc'ed her as well.

Thank you and I wish you and yours a Happy Thanksgiving.

As part of our obligations to prepare for the penalty phase (should there be one) of Mr. Tartaglione's trial, we would like to view the cells (including SHU ) and common areas where he has been held. It's possible that we will want to take some photographs, but initially we just want to look at the areas where he has been housed.

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be pres of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to

thanks very much,

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has

read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to [redacted]. His [redacted].

I understand that the cell phone justifies some sanction, but the troubling conditions in the cell should be rectified. Lastly, I hope the guard who told Nick about his punishment is mistaken.

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to [redacted]. His [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning all,

Per the below list of complaints please look into the following:

Facilities - can you look into the alleged leak in his cell, no. Z01-106?

Safety - can you let me know the last time 9 South had pest control?

SIS - can you follow up with FBI on his incident report? Can you also look into whether the alleged rodent on his bed might have been his cellmate accusing him of being an snitch?

SHU - can you swap out his books? Can you check on the lights in his cell? Was his paper discovery located? Is he claiming he is still missing any?

Thanks all,

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in

he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. [redacted].

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Subject: Re: Tartaglione conditions/visits

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Psych Reconst Response - Epstein #76318-054.pdf

U.S. Department of Justice

Reentry Services Division

Washington, DC 20534

DEC 27 2019

MEMORANDUM FOR J. [redacted], REGIONAL DIRECTOR
NORTHEAST REGION

FROM: Hugh J. [redacted], Assistant Director
Reentry Services Division

SUBJECT: Institution Response
Inmate Epstein, Jeffrey (76318-054)

I have reviewed the Institution Response dated November 19, 2019, to the Psychological Reconstruction of an inmate suicide involving Jeffrey Epstein (76318-054).

Some of the corrective actions and plans for implementation outlined in the response are unclear or insufficient. Please review the feedback provided and revise your response accordingly. An updated Institution Response is due to me within thirty (30) days of your receipt of this memorandum.

If you have questions or concerns, please feel free to contact me at [redacted]. I appreciate your assistance with this matter.

Institution Response Feedback
MCC New York
Epstein, Jeffrey (Reg. No. 76318-054)

Issue 1: Single Celling - Corrective Measure Accepted
The local guidelines provide a reasonable system of control to monitor the single-celling of inmates in the Special Housing Unit.

National guidelines for single celling in the Special Housing Unit have been incorporated into national policy and will soon be released. Please reference these generally with a plan to incorporate.

Issue 2: 30 Minute Rounds
The substance of the two hour Captain video review and six hour IDO video review is unclear. Please clarify the requirement for the Captain and IDO. Additionally, please identify the documentation used to maintain accountability of the reviews.

Issue 3: Cellmate Assignments
Documentation exists reflecting the role of the local Psychology Services department in communicating the importance of Mr. Epstein's status as a sex offender with specific needs to the Associate Warden. This includes consultation with the Psychology Services Branch in Central Office. The communication chain and decision making of Executive Staff lacks transparency as there is no documentation of the process or staff members present when decisions were made about the housing of Mr. Epstein. After the fact explanations may not accurately reflect what occurred.

Psychology Services was not adequately represented in the decision making of Executive Staff. Please establish a plan to increase the input of a psychologist in placement decisions for vulnerable inmates.

Issue 4: Documentation Accuracy
Professional responsibility requires taking into account multiple descriptions of an incident as noted in your response. However, when discrepancies exist these should be compiled and noted in documentation to decrease the likelihood of conflicting conclusions.

As noted in the reconstruction report, an incident report must be written within 24 hours of having the information that an inmate likely violated BOP rules. An incident report was written for Mr. Epstein prior to a determination of whether he engaged in self-directed violence or was assaulted on July 23, 2019. Staff had ample time to wait for the outcome of the SIS investigation of this incident. The incident report presumed self-directed violence, although SIS was not able to determine whether this incident was self-directed violence or an assault. Generating the incident report for self-directed violence is evidence of a local bias about the July 23, 2019 incident that still exists amongst some staff at MCC New York. Preconceived notions challenge the ability to remain open about alternative explanations, and subsequent systemic changes may be needed.

Please develop and provide local training for all staff that at a minimum reviews the time frame for writing incident reports and offers guidance when there is not clear evidence of an infraction. Include an outline of the training and evidence of staff who attended the training.

Typographical Errors - Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 5: Telephone Calls
As noted in the response, there is a lack of documentation to substantiate that a lieutenant facilitated two telephone calls to Mr. Epstein. However, this does not address the report of two telephone calls being provided. This response implies that the reporting of two staff members is inaccurate.

The response neglects the documented telephone call to Mr. Epstein's deceased mother.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 7: Follow-Up
Please provide documentation for the follow up training provided to staff detailing the content of the training and to whom it was provided.

Issue 8: Inmate Accountability and Assignment Accuracy
Periodic and unannounced checks are now conducted in SHU to determine pp30 assignments and actual inmate placement match. Please provide an operational definition of periodic. Please do the same for routine, as it relates Executive Staff bed book counts in all units. Where will the periodic and routine reviews be documented and will they include the identity (e.g., name and title) of staff who complete them?

Issue 9: Attorney Log Books
Please provide a copy of the log book audit.

Issue 10: Automatic External Defibrillators
The response states the reconstruction team reviewed an old and outdated list from January 8, 2018. It is important to note this list was provided to the reconstruction team by institution staff. Provision of inaccurate documentation may reflect systemic issues related to collecting, maintaining, and sharing relevant documentation.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 12: Staffing
Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 13: Sex Offense Risk Factors
Psychologists are subject matter experts in sex offender risk factors and they play a crucial role in sharing this knowledge through traditional settings such as ICT, AT, and institutional meetings. However, Executive Staff play a pivotal role in establishing and addressing institutional culture and promoting and participating in training. A lack of a broad understanding of sex offender specific risk factors requires an intentional training approach led by Executive Staff. They must be out front talking about inmates with a sex offense, expressing an understanding of sex offender dynamics, modeling agency condoned expectations for the understanding and treatment of inmates with a sex offenses, and assisting with institutional trainings. These practices encourage a broader acceptance by line staff.

Psych Reconst Response - Epstein #76318-054.pdf

Reentry Services Division

Washington, DC 20534

DEC 27 2019

MEMORANDUM FOR J. [redacted], REGIONAL DIRECTOR
NORTHEAST REGION

FROM: Hugh J. [redacted], Assistant Director
Reentry Services Division

SUBJECT: Institution Response
Inmate Epstein, Jeffrey (76318-054)

I have reviewed the Institution Response dated November 19, 2019, to the Psychological Reconstruction of an inmate suicide involving Jeffrey Epstein (76318-054).

Some of the corrective actions and plans for implementation outlined in the response are unclear or insufficient. Please review the feedback provided and revise your response accordingly. An updated Institution Response is due to me within thirty (30) days of your receipt of this memorandum.

If you have questions or concerns, please feel free to contact me at [redacted]. I appreciate your assistance with this matter.

Institution Response Feedback
MCC New York
Epstein, Jeffrey (Reg. No. 76318-054)

Issue 1: Single Celling - Corrective Measure Accepted
The local guidelines provide a reasonable system of control to monitor the single-celling of inmates in the Special Housing Unit.

National guidelines for single celling in the Special Housing Unit have been incorporated into national policy and will soon be released. Please reference these generally with a plan to incorporate.

Issue 2: 30 Minute Rounds
The substance of the two hour Captain video review and six hour IDO video review is unclear. Please clarify the requirement for the Captain and IDO. Additionally, please identify the documentation used to maintain accountability of the reviews.

Issue 3: Cellmate Assignments
Documentation exists reflecting the role of the local Psychology Services department in communicating the importance of Mr. Epstein's status as a sex offender with specific needs to the Associate Warden. This includes consultation with the Psychology Services Branch in Central Office. The communication chain and decision making of Executive Staff lacks transparency as there is no documentation of the process or staff members present when decisions were made about the housing of Mr. Epstein. After the fact explanations may not accurately reflect what occurred.

Psychology Services was not adequately represented in the decision making of Executive Staff. Please establish a plan to increase the input of a psychologist in placement decisions for vulnerable inmates.

Issue 4: Documentation Accuracy
Professional responsibility requires taking into account multiple descriptions of an incident as noted in your response. However, when discrepancies exist these should be compiled and noted in documentation to decrease the likelihood of conflicting conclusions.

As noted in the reconstruction report, an incident report must be written within 24 hours of having the information that an inmate likely violated BOP rules. An incident report was written for Mr. Epstein prior to a determination of whether he engaged in self-directed violence or was assaulted on July 23, 2019. Staff had ample time to wait for the outcome of the SIS investigation of this incident. The incident report presumed self-directed violence, although SIS was not able to determine whether this incident was self-directed violence or an assault. Generating the incident report for self-directed violence is evidence of a local bias about the July 23, 2019 incident that still exists amongst some staff at MCC New York. Preconceived notions challenge the ability to remain open about alternative explanations, and subsequent systemic changes may be needed.

Please develop and provide local training for all staff that at a minimum reviews the time frame for writing incident reports and offers guidance when there is not clear evidence of an infraction. Include an outline of the training and evidence of staff who attended the training.

Typographical Errors - Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 5: Telephone Calls
As noted in the response, there is a lack of documentation to substantiate that a lieutenant facilitated two telephone calls to Mr. Epstein. However, this does not address the report of two telephone calls being provided. This response implies that the reporting of two staff members is inaccurate.

The response neglects the documented telephone call to Mr. Epstein's deceased mother.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 7: Follow-Up
Please provide documentation for the follow up training provided to staff detailing the content of the training and to whom it was provided.

Issue 8: Inmate Accountability and Assignment Accuracy
Periodic and unannounced checks are now conducted in SHU to determine pp30 assignments and actual inmate placement match. Please provide an operational definition of periodic. Please do the same for routine, as it relates Executive Staff bed book counts in all units. Where will the periodic and routine reviews be documented and will they include the identity (e.g., name and title) of staff who complete them?

Issue 9: Attorney Log Books
Please provide a copy of the log book audit.

Issue 10: Automatic External Defibrillators
The response states the reconstruction team reviewed an old and outdated list from January 8, 2018. It is important to note this list was provided to the reconstruction team by institution staff. Provision of inaccurate documentation may reflect systemic issues related to collecting, maintaining, and sharing relevant documentation.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 12: Staffing
Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 13: Sex Offense Risk Factors
Psychologists are subject matter experts in sex offender risk factors and they play a crucial role in sharing this knowledge through traditional settings such as ICT, AT, and institutional meetings. However, Executive Staff play a pivotal role in establishing and addressing institutional culture and promoting and participating in training. A lack of a broad understanding of sex offender specific risk factors requires an intentional training approach led by Executive Staff. They must be out front talking about inmates with a sex offense, expressing an understanding of sex offender dynamics, modeling agency condoned expectations for the understanding and treatment of inmates with a sex offenses, and assisting with institutional trainings. These practices encourage a broader acceptance by line staff.

Good morning all,

Per the below list of complaints please look into the following:

Facilities - can you look into the alleged leak in his cell, no. Z01-106?

Safety - can you let me know the last time 9 South had pest control?

SIS - can you follow up with FBI on his incident report? Can you also look into whether the alleged rodent on his bed might have been his cellmate accusing him of being an snitch?

SHU - can you swap out his books? Can you check on the lights in his cell? Was his paper discovery located? Is he claiming he is still missing any?

Thanks all,

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in

he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to treat his increased depression and anxiety. His mental health is diminishing rapidly.

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Subject: Re: Tartaglione conditions/visits

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

[redacted], [redacted],

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be pres of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to

thanks very much,

Pedro Rene Gonzalez had been sitting in Miami's Federal Detention Center (FDC Miami) awaiting trial on weapons charges since December 18, 2018. Despite languishing in jail for eight months, Gonzalez never made it to trial: The Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP) today confirmed to New Times that Gonzalez was found unresponsive in his cell late Saturday evening and ultimately pronounced dead the following day. The BOP has labeled his death a suicide.

The Philadelphia rapper Meek Mill, who has become a symbol of criminal justice reform, as well as an outspoken advocate, pleaded guilty on Tuesday to a misdemeanor gun charge stemming from a 2007 arrest, ending a legal saga that has sent him to prison multiple times during more than a decade of probation and appeals.

DCist

Advocates fear that if the Bureau of Prisons fails to resolve a complicated contract dispute, the city could be left without a men's halfway house for federal inmates. The saga over D.C.'s only halfway house for men manages to touch on many of the third rails of D.C. politics: zoning and land use issues, federal control of the justice system, and the power of developers to shape the city.

[redacted] is right - the BOP Director really pushed this to the top of the list with her testimony. Some ideas about how we can move this forward would really help us. It seems our priority list has switched to the following:

- clearinghouse process
- RFI (getting it out for comment)
- FPI evaluation proposal
- needs assessment (as we have a "breather" as RSD implements the info we heard on the VTC today).

Hi [redacted] and [redacted],

I know we talked about the need to push this item to the top of the list already, but I wanted to share an email I just got from a religious stakeholder group (a different one than we discussed earlier.

Dr. Sawyer testified today in the Senate that the BOP is already advising faith-based groups as to the criteria needed to for us to enter our programs into the evaluation that's going to be done as part of Title 1 of the FSA to determine the evidence based factors to reducing recidivism of those programs. We are of course a faith-based group with a longstanding relationship with BOP and with programs, and as noted in the emails below we have asked about this but I do not believe Aleph has of yet received such advice. Can we please be advised as well of this criteria and guidance?

The Director also mentioned about "mentors" coming in as part of the FSA and we were wondering if you can provide information about that as well as to how that is available to potential Aleph mentors?

Based on this, I think we need to move as quickly as possible toward setting up some submission criteria - that is to say that while it may take a little while to determine exactly how to evaluate the submissions, maybe we can fast track the creation of a list of documents to submit and portal in which to submit them. Thoughts??

Thanks,

Thank you. You don't have to apologize because I am sure you did everything you could. We will follow your suggestions but recall that once we enter the facility, we lose our phones.

I don't understand, however, how the facility doesn't have to process lawyers coming in to visit clients during hours the facility is "open" for visits. Delays on the weekend mean we have to stay through the count or cut our meeting short.

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

breaking Mr. Tartaglione's ability to defend the charges and prepare for trial.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Thank you. You don't have to apologize because I am sure you did everything you could. We will follow your suggestions but recall that once we enter the facility, we lose our phones.

I don't understand, however, how the facility doesn't have to process lawyers coming in to visit clients during hours the facility is "open" for visits. Delays on the weekend mean we have to stay through the count or cut our meeting short.

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.
This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to treat his increased depression and anxiety. His mental health is diminishing rapidly.

I understand that the cell phone justifies some sanction, but the troubling conditions in the cell should be rectified. Lastly, I hope the guard who told Nick about his punishment is mistaken.

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to treat his increased depression and anxiety. His mental health is diminishing rapidly.

I understand that the cell phone justifies some sanction, but the troubling conditions in the cell should be rectified. Lastly, I hope the guard who told Nick about his punishment is mistaken.

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Can you please have him seen for his request for psychiatric medication? I understand he has not expressed any psychological concerns in the past, but he is facing the death penalty and is currently in SHU facing disciplinary charges. Thanks!

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to treat his increased depression and anxiety. His mental health is diminishing rapidly.

I understand that the cell phone justifies some sanction, but the troubling conditions in the cell should be rectified. Lastly, I hope the guard who told Nick about his punishment is mistaken.

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,
[redacted]

[redacted],

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

These obstacles to meeting with our client are systemic and do not appear to be correctable without significant changes in how the BOP operates the faculty. The rooms for visiting have computers that are frequently broken, there are not enough rooms to accommodate the number of lawyers attempting to see their clients (several hours of delays are routine for any lawyer who doesn't arrive before 8:00), the staff frequently delays the opening of legal visiting but never extends the closing time, once in a room, a lawyer can expect to wait for their client to be produced from 10-15 minutes to hours and of course at times the facility simply closes and refuses visits all together.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning,

I was able to see Nick last night. Thank you for arranging a room for him. He reports that he has not had his hearing yet and the conditions in his cell remain the same. He was told by a guard that he is going to be denied visits, phone calls and commissary for a year, in addition to being held in SHU for 90 days. Water is constantly leaking into the cell, which he now shares with another inmate. He still has not received the updated discovery hard drive. He has only been given three short books which he read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has

read several times, despite having new books sent to him (we have the receipts indicating that MCC has received them). He does not have the paper discovery he had prior to being placed in SHU. Recently, he found a dead rodent in his bed. Apparently he accidently smothered it while sleeping. The lights in the cell are frequently off during the day and on at night. Nick has asked to be given medication to treat his increased depression and anxiety. His mental health is diminishing rapidly.

Bruce,

My apologies for the delay yesterday. The institution was short-staffed, and they were actively finding personnel to process you in the lobby and to oversee the attorney conference room area. If you experience any delays on the weekends, please ask to speak to the Duty Officer and/or the Operations Lieutenant as they were aware of the visit and could have expedited your admission to the facility. They also could have called me at home to resolve any issues. Likewise, if you are visiting during the week and we have made arrangements to expedite your visits, please contact [redacted] and me if there are any delays so we can facilitate matters immediately. Please also let us know when you meet in an attorney conference room that has a non-working computer so that we can have Computer Services fix it expeditiously. We continue to work to address Mr. Tartaglione's complaints, so please let us know if there are outstanding issues that have not yet been appropriately addressed.

Thank you,

While I do appreciate your effort, for reasons that aren't entirely clear to me, the personal seem unable to allow Nick reasonable access to his lawyers.

Today, I arrived at the faculty at 7:56. I was told "not until 8:00" by the guard in the booth. At 8:00 I was told "we will let you know. We are waiting for relief." I waited outside for 35 minutes.

Because the BOP has chosen to monitor emails and phone calls between Lawyers and their clients, we are forced to meet with Nick to discuss every aspect of the case, even relatively benign things that typically could be handled with a quick call or a short email.

As you know, I have been writing about these problems, speaking to you and bringing the issues to the attention of Judge Karas over the course of the years of Nick's Pretrial detention.

On a personal note, this was a particularly frustrating day because I again took time away from my family on a Sunday to drive into NYC with anticipation that would be able to leave at 9:30. Today's trip, as you know, was necessary because Ms. Leisenring and I arrived on Thursday at 7:55 but were not permitted to see our client until 9:30.

The USA's office has advised that the Marshal's have refused our request to transfer Mr. Tartaglione to Nassau County and despite my inquiry about other options, have not offered any alternative.

The conditions under which Mr. Tartaglione Are being held continue to be problematic, to say the least. There is again water in his cell and the other issues, which I have written about a number of times but won't detail again here, persist.

I am open to any solution

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Good morning all,

Per the below list of complaints please look into the following:

Facilities - can you look into the alleged leak in his cell, no. Z01-106?

Safety - can you let me know the last time 9 South had pest control?

SIS - can you follow up with FBI on his incident report? Can you also look into whether the alleged rodent on his bed might have been his cellmate accusing him of being an snitch?

SHU - can you swap out his books? Can you check on the lights in his cell? Was his paper discovery located? Is he claiming he is still missing any?

Thanks all,

Good afternoon Bruce,

We apologize for the delays you experienced yesterday. We have spoken to the SHU Lieutenant and have received assurances he will have staff bring him to attorney conference in advance of your future meetings to allow him to review discovery until you get there. He will extend the same courtesy to the other members of your defense team with appropriate advance notice.

The SHU Lieutenant is meeting with Mr. Tartaglione today to discuss his personal property, including but not limited to his books and legal work, as well as recreation and law library access. Policy ordinarily limits inmates to having only 5 books in their possession, in both general population and in SHU. The SHU Lieutenant reviewed his books and advised he can maintain five in his cell and seventeen in reserve in his stored personal property, but that the other one hundred and fifty-one books would have to be mailed home. Mr. Tartaglione will be informed of this and given the opportunity to choose which books to keep. The SHU Lieutenant reports that Mr. Tartaglione was provided his legal work other than the hard drives that are currently in the Education Department, which will be brought to SHU to be maintained there for his review while housed there. If there is any legal work still missing, please advise so it can be located.

Regarding recreation, I am told he has not responded in the affirmative when recreation is offered in the morning, but the SHU Lieutenant will remind him of those procedures. Likewise, the SHU Lieutenant will go over law library request procedures which involve him submitted written requests to use the SHU law library.

I will update you as soon as I get more information.

Thank you,

Good morning,

First, thank you for the time you have devoted to both speaking to us about these issues and the work you have put in trying to alleviate the problems. Unfortunately, despite your efforts the problems with the conditions Nick endures and the difficulty in visiting him persist.

Aida and I met with Nick yesterday, for only about 20-30 minutes. Although we arrived at the facility at 7:55 and although [redacted] was kind enough to set up a room for us, Nick was not brought down until almost 9:30. We were allowed upstairs at about 8:15, just when the guard for the room had just arrived . This is a frequent problem. It seems that room is often not staffed on time. So, when lawyers arrive at 8:00 they get a room, but have to wait until that guard arrives. This is particularly troubling on the weekends when there is a 10:00 count and you have to either stay until 11:00 or get out by 9:30. Yesterday the officer in the room told us it would "be a while" before inmates from SHU would be brought down. Indeed it was "a while" as we sat for over an hour. We left just before 10:00 and were both late for our next appointment, mine a hearing in state court. We were not able to cover the ground we needed to with Nick and now have to return in the next few days when I fear the process will repeat itself.

This week several members of the defense team have waited hours to see Nick. On Monday our investigator waited 2 hours and on Tuesday one of our mitigations specialists also waited 2 hours. Aida and I were Lucky in that we only waited about 75 minutes. We simply cannot effectively represent our client with these kind of delays.

I believe we delivered a hard drive to the USA's office over a week ago. Nick tells us that he has not yet received it. Further, when he was moved to cell without water on the floor, the little discovery he did have, was "lost." He has never been given the document I previously mentioned, work product created by our office on which he made notes. It was out on his bed when he the cell phone was seized.

Nick still hasn't been given any of the books he had nor has he received the books recently mailed to him and received by the facility. He now has a cell mate, someone to talk to, which has improved his emotional state, but he should have reading material and access to his discovery and legal work.

Again, I know that Nick is in SHU because of the cell phone, but he is still entitled to humane conditions, reading material and reasonable access to his legal team.

Counterpunching like Trump, Biden attacked most of his rivals on the debate stage. He looked weak.

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: Joe Biden didn't just defend himself in Detroit on Wednesday night. He went after Kamala Harris, Cory Booker, Julián Castro, Kirsten Gillibrand and even Bill de Blasio.

The media coverage of the second night of the second Democratic debate has focused on the hits leveled against Biden. But these were all expected. Going after the candidate leading in the polls is de rigueur. More striking, and historically unusual, was how hard Biden fired back at anyone and everyone who criticized him.

Coming out swinging the way he did will probably reassure panicky donors and bed-wetting establishmentarians, thereby stabilizing his struggling campaign. But it also diminishes his stature. Yes, Biden leads in the polls. But calling him the front-runner feels like an exaggeration. Last night demonstrated that, unable to stay above the fray the way he hoped he could, Biden is now in the mosh pit with everyone else.

After faltering during the first debate in Miami – and facing not-so-quiet whispers about his age – Biden seemed determined to show that he's the kind of street brawler who can take the fight directly to President Trump. At times, however, his performance was reminiscent of Trump's response to Hillary Clinton during a 2016 debate: "No puppet. No puppet. You're the puppet!" The Biden debate strategy can best be summed up with the playground taunt: I know what you are, but what am I?

That's certainly how Biden sounded when he accused both African American senators onstage – each the child of civil rights activists – of being weak on civil rights.

In Biden's telling, Booker stood idly by as mayor of Newark while police officers under his command engaged in stop-and-frisk policies that targeted black men. "You went out and you hired Rudy Giuliani's guy," Biden said. "You had 75 percent of those stops reviewed as illegal. You found yourself in a situation where three times as many African American kids were caught in that chain. … The Justice Department came after you for engaging in behavior that was inappropriate, and then, in fact, nothing happened the entire time you were mayor."

Booker: 'You're dipping into the Kool-Aid and you don't even know the flavor'

Standing next to Biden, Booker noted that the local leader of the American Civil Liberties Union praised him for putting forth a national model in police accountability. "If you want to compare records — and, frankly, I'm shocked that you do — I'm happy to do that," he said. "Mr. Vice President, there's a saying in my community. You're dipping into the Kool-Aid and you don't even know the flavor. You need to come to the city of Newark and see the reforms that we put in place."

Still sore over the way she lacerated him last time for working with segregationist senators to oppose busing in the 1970s, Biden tried to turn the tables by focusing on Harris's record as a prosecutor. "When Senator Harris was attorney general for eight years in the state of California, there were two of the most segregated school districts in the country in Los Angeles and in San Francisco. And she did nothing," he said. "I didn't see a single solitary time she brought a case against them to desegregate them. Secondly, she also was in a situation where she had a police department when she was there that was abusing people's rights."

Biden essentially accused Harris of prosecutorial

Biden essentially accused Harris of prosecutorial misconduct, claiming that she withheld exculpatory evidence from “defense attorneys like me.” “Along came a federal judge who said, ‘Enough!’ And he freed 1,000 of these people,” Biden continued. “If you doubt me, Google ‘1,000 prisoners freed, Kamala Harris.’”

Harris responded, “That is simply not true.” She added that she spent her time as California’s chief law enforcement office “cleaning up the bills you passed” in the Senate.

Referring to himself as a defense attorney is a stretch: Biden was a part-time public defender for about a year in the late 1960s. He spent the lion’s share of the half-century that followed as one of the Democratic Party’s most outspoken tough-on-crime acolytes.

Gillibrand attacks Biden's record on working women

Gillibrand, the senator from New York, questioned Biden over an op-ed he wrote in 1981 with the headline “Congress Is Subsidizing Deterioration of Family.” In it, the then-senator argued that couples with higher income shouldn’t get tax credits for child care because, if they can afford it, one parent should stay home. “That was a long time ago,” Biden responded.

Then he highlighted Gillibrand’s past praise for his record on women’s issues. “You came to Syracuse University with me and said it was ‘wonderful’ that I'm ‘passionate’ about … making sure women are treated equally,” he said. “I don't know what's happened, except that you’re now running for

When de Blasio asked Biden whether he ever advised Barack Obama to deport fewer undocumented immigrants during their eight years in the White House, Biden suggested – apparently apropos of nothing – that the New York mayor cannot be trusted to hold someone's confidences. "I keep my recommendation to him in private," he told de Blasio. "Unlike you, I can expect you would go ahead and say whatever was said privately with him. That is not what I do."

But Biden had no qualms during the immigration discussion about disclosing that Castro, who was Obama's secretary of housing and urban development, did not bring up the issue during Cabinet meetings. "I never heard him talk about any of this when he was secretary," Biden said. "The fact of the matter is, if you cross the border illegally, you should be able to be sent back. It's a crime."

Castro replied: "It looks like one of us has learned the lessons of the past, and one of us hasn't."

Biden wielded the former president like a shield. "Everybody's talking about how terrible I am on all these issues," he said. "Barack Obama knew exactly who I was. … He had 10 lawyers do a background check on everything about me on civil rights and civil liberties, and he chose me, and he said it was the best decision he made."

This argument makes sense. A CNN poll last year found that 66 percent of Americans had a favorable view of Obama, including 97 percent of Democrats. But when Biden distanced himself from the Obama administration's record of deporting millions of undocumented immigrants, Booker called him out for trying to have it both ways. "You invoke President Obama more than anybody in this campaign," he said. "You can't do it when it's convenient and then dodge it when it's not."

Democrats spent the second debate arguing about math

Criticizing his opponents who support Medicare-for-all, Biden accused them of trying to destroy Obamacare and peddling "a bunch of malarkey." That's long been one of his favorite fallback words. He said the plan – initially championed by Sen. Bernie Sanders and embraced to varying degrees by a handful of the other candidates – will raise taxes on the middle class by trillions and increase out-of-pocket health-care costs. Referring to de Blasio and Harris, he said: "I don't know what math you do in New York. I don't know what math you do in California."

In most of these instances, it appeared that Biden was trying to muddy the water enough so that these exchanges would get described as a draw. Taken together, they underscore just how many big issues he's vulnerable on in the modern political environment. In other ways, the exchanges showed, stylistically, how much he's a throwback to another time.

Biden began the line of attack on Castro by referring to his opponent as "Julián." Then he corrected himself. "Excuse opponent as "Julian." Then he corrected himself. "Excuse me," he said, "the secretary." (That gave me a flashback to when Sarah Palin asked Biden if she could call him "Joe" at the start of their debate in 2008.)

Biden accidentally referred to Booker as "the president" during his attack over stop-and-frisk, but he was playful about it. "Excuse me," he quipped, "the future president." (Booker loved it.) "Go easy on me, kid," the 76-year-old joked to Harris, 54, as she came onstage and shook his hand.

Elizabeth Warren was not onstage, but Biden even took a little dig at the senator from Massachusetts, as well. Jake Tapper read aloud the quote from the night before about how Democrats won't win in 2020 "with small ideas and spinelessness." Biden replied by touting his role in the auto industry bailout. "I suspect that's why the mayor [of Detroit] endorsed me," he said, "and not the senator."

Washington Gov. Jay Inslee, who has made climate change the centerpiece of his campaign, said Biden's environmental proposals aren't sufficiently ambitious. "Middle-ground solutions like what the vice president has proposed are not going to save us," said Inslee. "There is no middle ground about my plan," Biden replied.

"I've heard you say that we need a realistic plan," said Inslee.

Biden took umbrage. "No, I didn't say that," he replied.

Let that sink in. It was as if "realistic" has somehow become a pejorative. Biden's reflexive denial that he ever called his plan "realistic" speaks volumes about the leftward lurch of the party since Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez toppled Rep. Joe Crowley (D-N.Y.) in a primary last summer. Moments like this are why so many Democratic pooh-bahs are fretting privately that Trump's chances of getting reelected go up with each debate. Ultimately, more than anything else, the allergy toward "realistic" approaches might be what dooms Biden's third try for the presidency.

Fact-checking the second Democratic debate | The Fact Checker

HOW IT'S PLAYING:

-- Wednesday's debate turned on character as much as ideology, which chief correspondent Dan Balz interprets as a foreboding turn for Democrats: "By the end of the evening, the candidates had done as much to make a case against one another as against the president, without offering much in the way of an aspirational message or connecting directly with the voters they will need to win the presidential election. The reality is that little changed as a result of the debate. The absence of clear winners and the absence of the emergence of a candidate with a hopeful message for a broader audience produced a status quo ending. … Harris delivered a more uneven performance than in Miami. Booker, by his aggressiveness toward Biden, made his bid to move up in a race where he has struggled. … Sen. Michael F. Bennet (D-Colo.) lamented that the Democrats were wasting time litigating the past and ignoring both the urgent problems of today and the threats posed by the Trump administration. His voice went largely unheard by the others on the stage."

-- As several Democrats rushed to criticize Biden, they grew increasingly comfortable with criticizing Obama's legacy by proxy. Matt Viser, Toluse Olorunnipa and Amy B Wang report: "The Obama administration's record on deportations, criminal justice, trade and health care was challenged implicitly and explicitly by several candidates. Even Biden stepped away from the former president on one issue, saying he no longer supports the Trans-Pacific Partnership." That's quite a flip-flop. Biden was a prominent salesman for the deal three years ago. Notably, Obama is staying neutral and has declined to endorse his former No. 2.

-- More team coverage:

- Biden spoke the most this round, clocking in at 21.2 minutes, almost four minutes more than Tuesday night's longest speaker, Warren. Harris trailed behind Biden, speaking for 17.7 minutes. Booker came in third with 12.8 minutes. Gillibrand spoke for 11.6 minutes; Inslee, 10.7; Bennet and Tulsi Gabbard, 10.6; Castro, 10.5; de Blasio, 9.7; and tech entrepreneur Andrew Yang came in last, speaking for only 8.7 minutes.
- The Fact Checker team scrutinized 13 statements made during the debate.
- Annie Linskey, David Fahrenthold, Sean Sullivan and

Annie Linskey, David Fahrenthold, Sean Sullivan and Holly Bailey: "8 key moments from night 2."

- [redacted] Stein and Yasmeen Abutaleb: "Biden and Harris muddle through confusing health policy in debate."

- Philip Bump: "More electability than foreign policy: The second debate's topics, by the numbers."
- Eugene Scott: "Five years after Eric Garner's death, he was a major topic at the Democratic debate."

-- What pundits are saying about who won and lost:

- The Fix's Aaron Blake names Sanders and Warren as the winners of the debate's second round, despite not being onstage, because "their performances were even better in contrast." Castro and Yang were also winners in Blake's book. Harris and Biden were the losers.
- CNN's Chris Cillizza thinks Booker, Gabbard, Castro and Biden had a great night, while Harris and Gillibrand stayed behind.
- Vox's Matthew Yglesias thinks Booker and Biden won.
- Politico's Elena Schneider doesn't think there's a clear winner in a "10-car pileup," but she did come up with some superlatives: Biden was the hottest target, and Booker had the best zinger.
- Fox News's Doug Schoen thinks Biden and Gabbard won while Gillibrand and Inslee left defeated.
- The Detroit Free Press says Harris did the best job in an otherwise murky debate.

- The BBC's Anthony Zurcher named Biden the debate's clear winner and Harris the clear loser.

Democratic candidates try to sharpen their message inside the spin room

-- Other takes this morning from across the media ecosystem:

- Politico's John F. Harris: "Biden was not that bad… and not that good."
- The New York Times's Matt Flegenheimer and Katie Glueck: "Biden Did Fine, and That Might Have Been Enough."
- Reuters's James Oliphant: "Biden steadies ship while setting up impending clash with Warren."
- The Times's Gail Collins: "Let's have another debate with just Warren versus Biden. And maybe we'll throw in Booker and Sanders."
- The Atlantic's David A. Graham: "Biden isn't the only one trying to have it both ways on Obama."
- The New Yorker's Benjamin Wallace-Wells: "Biden Defends the Party's Past."
- USA Today's N'dea Yancey-Bragg: "A Kool-Aid clapback: Cory Booker gets spicy."
- Slate's Henry Grabar: "Julián Castro Made the Best Case for Impeachment Yet."
- The New Republic's Heather Souvaine Horn: "Let's get into a fight about foreign policy."

-- From The Post's opinion page:

- “I’m grateful for every single woman running for president. Even Marianne Williamson,” writes Alyssa Rosenberg. “I wouldn’t vote for every woman running for president in the Democratic primary. But I’m grateful for the presence of every single one of them. Equality isn’t a single perfect human woman winning the presidency: it’s a bunch of flawed women being considered genuinely plausible contenders for the post.”
- “Booker broke through. Biden struck back. Harris got put in the hot seat,” writes E.J. Dionne Jr.
- “Biden performed better in the second debate. CNN didn’t,” writes Jennifer Rubin. “Unfortunately, CNN seemed to learn nothing from its horrendous reviews for Tuesday night. The same time-wasting, overproduced 25 minutes of blather at the onset, the same rigid enforcement of time constraints on candidates, the same lack of attention to foreign policy and the same crudely provocative style of questions reinforced the conclusion that not only CNN but also all of the broadcast news outlets and the DNC need to rethink the format of these events.”
- “Biden was brilliantly and gloriously adequate,” raves Dana Milbank. “He wasn’t the most eloquent or stylish debater on the stage. He struggled to find words at times, he seemed over-rehearsed, he seemed not to grasp how texting works … he cut himself off when his allotted time expired and, at times, he seemed stunned by the ferocity of the barrage — which, in fairness, was stunning."

Rising tensions between the U.S. and Iran, explained | The Fact Checker

-- The Trump administration imposed sanctions on Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, a dramatic step bound to further escalate tensions with Tehran. Carol Morello and Karen DeYoung report: "A senior administration official said Zarif had acted more as a 'propaganda minister' than a diplomat. The announcement came as Trump's national security adviser said that nuclear-related sanctions on Iran would again be waived, despite the opposition of some of the administration's most hard-line officials. National Security Adviser John Bolton and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo had advocated ending the waiver, which allows Russia, China and Europe to participate in Iran's civil nuclear program, as permitted under the 2015 agreement from which the administration withdrew last year. Five current waivers were due to expire Thursday, and the Treasury Department expressed concern about collateral effects of ending them on other signatories of the deal. In a statement about the sanctions on Zarif, Pompeo said the foreign minister was 'complicit' in Iran's support of terrorists, torture and other malign activity around the world."

-- A North Korean soldier defected by making a midnight dash to freedom across the heavily fortified demilitarized zone. David Crawshaw reports: "The man crossed into South Korea late on Wednesday and was spotted moving south along the Imjin River about 11:38 p.m.

spotted moving south along the Imjin River about 11:00 p.m.

... It is relatively rare for North Koreans to attempt to cross directly to the South. Doing so involves traversing the DMZ, a heavily defended strip of no man's land running across the peninsula that is dotted with military guard posts, land mines, barbed wire and other barriers."

-- Hamza bin Laden, the son of the al-Qaeda founder, died. From the Times: "Details of the strike that killed him were scarce, including when and where. The United States government played a role in the operation, but it was not clear how … Though Mr. bin Laden carried a prominent name and lineage, the news of his death represented more of a symbolic victory for the American government than the removal of a threat. … Other key members of the organization remain alive, including Saif al-Adel and Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah, who are wanted by the F.B.I. in the bombings of two United States embassies in East Africa in 1998. They are thought to be in Iran."

THE DOMESTIC AGENDA:

-- The Fed cut the benchmark interest rate for the first time in more than a decade, lowering it by a quarter-point to just under 2.25 percent. Heather Long reports: The goal is to bolster the country's economy "amid early signs of a global slowdown. However, the central bank also inadvertently caused confusion about what it plans to do next, disquieting the stock market. Fed Chair Jerome H.

Powell said the Fed was going to do whatever it takes to 'sustain the expansion,' but he stopped short of committing to a series of rate reductions as Wall Street and President Trump have demanded. 'Let me be clear. What I said was, it's not the beginning of a long series of rate cuts,' Powell said." These comments caused a sharp drop in the markets and, by the end of the trading day, the Dow Jones industrial average had lost 1.2 percent.

-- If the economy is in good shape, why is the Fed cutting rates in the first place? Long writes: "Lowering interest rates, the Fed's main way to boost the economy, is typically used in dire times, which it's difficult to argue the United States is experiencing right now. Instead, top Fed officials are defending this as an 'insurance cut' that's akin to an immunization shot in the arm. They want to counteract the negative effects of Trump's trade war and prevent the United States from catching the same cold that Europe, China and elsewhere seem to have. … It's a tricky calculus. … Realistically, one cut won't do much. The reason the stock market has rallied sharply in recent weeks is an expectation that this is the first of several cuts. ... If the Fed does not do three cuts this year, the market could pull back, making financial conditions 'tight' again, even though the Fed is cutting rates to try to loosen conditions."

-- Gary Cohn, Trump's former chief economic adviser, said that the president's tariffs are backfiring and hurting the U.S. economy. "I think the Chinese economy was going to slow down with or without a trade war," he told the BBC.

war," he told the BBC.

-- China's central bank opted overnight not to follow the Fed in cutting rates. From Reuters: "Though China's central bank does not always follow the Fed's moves in lockstep, some analysts had thought a token People's Bank of China cut, likely in one of its short-term rates, was a possibility. … While heading off a sharper economic slowdown remains Beijing's top priority, officials fear easing too aggressively could fuel debt and financial risks, according to government advisers involved in internal policy discussions."

-- The White House told officials to maintain a measured response to anti-government protests in Hong Kong over fears that any public statements would derail U.S. efforts to finalize a trade deal with China. From the Wall Street Journal: "'It was made clear down the chain that we need to be measured on Hong Kong,' one administration official said, noting that the guidance came from 'the top' over concern that fragile talks with China might be jeopardized by any outward show of support for the protests. The actions reflect the administration's foreign-policy moves that prioritize Mr. Trump's interest in safeguarding relationships where he sees opportunity for economic or political gain, sometimes going against the will of allies and even lawmakers within his own Republican Party."

war crimes case against Navy SEAL Edward Gallagher, who was acquitted of charges that he murdered a wounded Islamic State fighter in Iraq. Colby Itkowitz reports: "Trump had intervened on Gallagher's behalf, having him removed from solitary confinement in March while awaiting trial. As the military news site Task & Purpose reported Tuesday, members of the prosecution team were quietly presented with Navy Achievement Medals on July 10 for their work on the case. In tweets Wednesday, Trump said the decorations were 'ridiculously given.' 'Not only did they lose the case,' Trump wrote on Twitter, 'they had difficulty with respect to information that may have been obtained from opposing lawyers and for giving immunity in a totally incompetent fashion.'"

-- The Gilroy Garlic Festival shooting is the latest vivid example of how strict gun laws in the states can be neutralized by lax laws in a neighboring state. The gunman who killed three and wounded 12 legally purchased a weapon in Nevada that he could not have gotten in California. "New York and New Jersey, for example, also have gun laws that rank among the tightest in the country. But the flow of firearms up Interstate 95 keeps both states supplied with weapons to such a staggering extent that the trafficking network is known as the 'Iron Pipeline.'" the Times notes. "To advocates of stricter gun laws, the messy patchwork of state laws that contributed to the tragedy in Gilroy is one more reason that federal gun-law changes are needed."

-- A group of doctors urged Congress to investigate the deaths of six migrant children and detention centers at the border in fear that "poor conditions" at U.S. facilities are increasing the spread of deadly diseases. Robert Moore reports: "The doctors, who wrote to Congress on Thursday, said autopsy reports show that at least three of the children — ages 2, 6 and 16 — died in part as a result of having the flu, a far-higher incidence of such deaths than across the general population. Child flu deaths are rare, the doctors said, and should be preventable. ... The letter, dated Thursday, alleges that the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Health and Human Services — which supervises longer-term custody of unaccompanied migrant minors — might not be following best practices in regard to screening, treatment, isolation and prevention of the flu."

-- The House Oversight Committee is seeking documents related to the secret U.S. Customs and Border Protection Facebook groups in which former employees ridiculed migrants and shared racist and sexist memes. Felicia Sonmez reports: "In a letter Wednesday to acting customs and border protection commissioner Mark Morgan, [Elijah] Cummings voiced alarm that some of the agents involved in the Facebook groups may still be on the job. … [The chairman] requested that CBP provide all documents related to the matter by Aug. 14."

-- A woman whose 1-year-old daughter died weeks

after being released from a Texas immigration detention center sued the private prison company that runs the facility. From the AP: "Lawyers for Yazmin Juárez are demanding $40 million from CoreCivic in the complaint filed in federal court in San Antonio. It's the third legal claim they have filed related to the death of Yazmin's daughter, Mariee, in May last year. … In a statement, CoreCivic spokeswoman Amanda Gilchrist said the company 'had deep sympathy for the family and the tragic loss of their child,' and that ICE was responsible for hiring and overseeing medical staff."

-- Eight Republicans have announced their retirement plans this year, reflecting the party's transformation in the Trump era. From [redacted] Kane: "Most of those GOP retirements, so far, come from safely red seats … These retirements by influential Republicans suggest that there is increasing doubt about whether they can defy history and become the first caucus to flip the House majority during a presidential election since 1952. … The unspoken fear among Republicans is that more retirements could be on the way, particularly over this long recess as members of Congress spend time with their families, travel their district or make official overseas trips."

-- The Federal Trade Commission warned that so many people are seeking cash payments from Equifax following its 2017 data breach that there may not be enough money for everyone who applies to claim the $125 check. From CNN Business: "The FTC is trying to persuade Americans to pick a different option: take Equifax's offer of free credit monitoring instead. 'Millions of people' have logged onto a claims website set up by the federal government, the FTC said, following a multi-million-dollar settlement with Equifax announced last Monday. The site has been live for a week. Under the deal, consumers can file for Equifax's free credit monitoring or to receive a check for up to $125, which is meant to reimburse the cost of getting credit monitoring from elsewhere."

PERSONNEL IS POLICY:

-- Trump's pick for managing federal lands does not believe the government should have any. Steven Mufson reports: "Trump's Interior Secretary David Bernhardt signed an order making the Wyoming native William Perry Pendley the acting director of the Bureau of Land Management. Pendley, former president of the Mountain States Legal Foundation, was a senior official in Ronald Reagan's administration. … In the three decades since serving under Reagan, Pendley has sued the Interior Department on behalf of an oil and gas prospector, sought to undermine protections of endangered species such as the grizzly bear, and pressed to radically reduce the size of federal lands to make way for development. 'The Founding Fathers intended all lands owned by the federal government to be sold,' he wrote approvingly in a National Review magazine article in 2016. He said 'westerners know that only getting title to much of the land in the West will bring real change.' …

"Pendley's ties to the most conservative networks run deep. Pendley's Mountain States Legal Foundation, founded in 1977 and initially run by Reagan's controversial first Interior Secretary James G. Watt, has received backing from ultraconservative groups and individuals such as the Koch-linked Donors Trust and beer tycoon Joseph Coors. Pendley will once again be overseeing a coal leasing program he was found to have mismanaged … More recently in a September 2017 article in the National Review magazine, Pendley attacked then-Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke for failing to do enough to reduce the size of the country's national monuments."

-- Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson showed up in Baltimore to defend the president's negative descriptions of the city, saying there are "a lot of good things in Baltimore, but there are a lot of bad things too." Ovetta Wiggins reports: "It's sort of like a patient who has cancer: You can dress them up and put a nice suit on and try to ignore it, but that cancer is going to have a devastating effect," he said while standing outside Hollins House, a federally funded housing complex for senior citizens in the congressional district of Rep. Elijah E. Cummings (D-Md.). "You have to be willing to address that issue if you are ever going to solve it." No state or city officials appeared at Carson's event, which was originally scheduled to be held on a church lot across an apartment complex. The event was hastily moved to an alley behind the complex after a member of the church said no one had asked permission to hold an event on the property.

-- The Senate Armed Services Committee voted to advance Trump's pick to be the military's second-highest officer, despite an Army colonel's allegations that he sexually assaulted her. Karoun Demirjian reports: "The vote was 20 to 7, reflecting bipartisan support for Gen. John E. Hyten … The vote also reflected bipartisan opposition, after Sen. Joni Ernst (R-Iowa) decided to vote against recommending Hyten's confirmation because of 'his inability to address toxic leadership and exercise sound judgment while serving as STRATCOM Commander,' according to her spokeswoman. … Hyten appeared before the committee for his confirmation hearing Tuesday, where he flatly denied Col. Kathryn Spletstoser's charges … On Wednesday, she responded to what she called the committee's 'gut-wrenching' decision to recommend Hyten for confirmation in a statement imploring the panel to let her speak publicly in a hearing before them."

-- The Senate confirmed Kelly Knight Craft as the next U.N. ambassador in a party-line vote. Demirjian reports: "Craft struggled to allay Democrats' concerns about her family's significant investments in the fossil fuel industry, though notably she separated herself from the president on climate change. During her confirmation hearing in June, Craft declared that she believes fossil fuels and human behavior contribute to the planet's shifting weather phenomena. 'Let there be no doubt,' she said. She also pushed back against Democrats' accusations that she had spent too much time away from her post in Ottawa, Canada's capital. … During her confirmation hearing, she defended Trump's decision to reduce payments to the U.N. and pull out of bodies like the U.N. Human Rights Council."

-- The administration's intelligence watchdog said he will not investigate how the White House handled security clearances for Ivanka Trump, Jared Kushner and other employees unless the president directs him to. From NBC News: "Michael Atkinson, the inspector general of the intelligence community, meaning the chief internal watchdog for the nation's intelligence agencies, wrote to [Democratic] senators that he would be happy to conduct such an investigation, but could only do it if President Trump asks him."

-- A former congressional staffer who fought to discredit the Russia investigation got a senior White House national security job. From the Daily Beast: "Kash Patel, who helmed the efforts of former House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes to scrutinize the court-authorized surveillance of a Trump associate has taken on the role of Senior Director of the Counterterrorism Directorate of the National Security Council (NSC), according to two sources familiar with the move. … Patel drew national attention in early 2018, when Nunes oversaw the production and release of a memo on surveillance of Trump campaign advisor Carter Page. … Patel also sparred with Rod Rosenstein during his time supervising the Russia probe."

-- Two former top staffers to Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell lobbied for an aluminum mill project in Kentucky backed by a close ally of Vladimir Putin. From Politico: "The disclosure comes as Democrats are pushing the Trump administration to review Rusal's $200 million investment in the Kentucky project — concerned that the mill will supply the Defense Department — and as McConnell weathers criticism for helping block a congressional effort to stop the investment. The Russian firm was only able to make the investment after it won sanctions relief from penalties the Treasury Department initially imposed in April 2018 on Rusal and other companies owned by Oleg Deripaska, a Russian oligarch and Kremlin ally accused of facilitating Moscow's nefarious activities. ... It's unclear whether the former staffers — Hunter Bates, a former McConnell chief of staff, and Brendan Dunn, who advised the Kentucky Republican on tax, trade and financial services matters before heading to K Street last year — directly lobbied McConnell's office over the aluminum mill project. Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld, the law and lobbying firm where Bates and Dunn work, and McConnell's office declined to comment on whether they had done so.

-- The Kremlin announced that Trump called Putin to offer U.S. help with fighting Siberian wildfires. From Reuters: "The Kremlin said the two leaders had spoken by phone at Washington's initiative, hours after Putin ordered the Russian army to help firefighters battle the wildfires. The fires have spread to around 3 million hectares of mostly remote forest, an area almost the size of Belgium, according to the Federal Forestry Agency, wafting smoke across Siberia and prompting several regions to declare states of emergency. … 'President Putin expressed his sincere gratitude for such an attentive attitude and for the offer of help and support,' [the Kremlin said]. Putin told Trump that Moscow would take him up on his offer if necessary, the Kremlin said, adding: 'The Russian president took this step from the U.S. president as a sign that in the future we can restore full-scale ties between our two countries.'" We know about this call because the Kremlin announced it. The White House did not. This is another norm that's been violated in the Trump era.

-- Follow the money: Rep. Richard Neal (D-Mass.), chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, explains in a Post op-ed why his committee needs to review the president's tax returns: "I'd rather hold a roundtable in president's tax returns. "I'd rather hold a roundtable in Pittsfield, Mass., or cross-examine Medicare administrators than pick fights on cable news. Those arguments tend to drive people into their corners, shrinking opportunities to accomplish real results. I'm an institutionalist. I respect Congress, for all its imperfections. As chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, I am responsible for congressional oversight of the Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue Service's administration of the federal tax code. The tax code gives the committee chairman the power to request taxpayer information from the IRS. The committee has exercised this power at various times in the past and has never been denied by the IRS or the Treasury Department. In early April, I requested the president's tax returns to fulfill a legitimate congressional oversight responsibility: Our voluntary tax-compliance system hinges on the public's faith that our tax laws are administered fairly and without favor to those in power. The president is unique: No other American has the power to sign bills into law and direct an entire branch of government. That power, and the extent to which the IRS can audit and enforce federal tax laws against a current or future president, merits closer legislative scrutiny."

THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- Jeffrey Epstein, the financier accused of trafficking girls as young as 14 for sex, hoped to seed the human race with his DNA by impregnating dozens of women at his New Mexico ranch. From the New York Times: "On multiple occasions starting in the early 2000s, Mr. Epstein told scientists and businessmen about his ambitions to use his New Mexico ranch as a base where women would be inseminated with his sperm and would give birth to his babies. ... Epstein over the years confided to scientists and others about his scheme, according to four people familiar with his thinking, although there is no evidence that it ever came to fruition. … [His] vision reflected his longstanding fascination with what has become known as transhumanism: the science of improving the human population through technologies like genetic engineering and artificial intelligence."

Epstein used his connections and [redacted] to build relationships with an array of prominent scientists, including the physicist who discovered the quark and theoretical physicist Stephen Hawking: "The lure for some of the scientists was Mr. Epstein's money. … Some of the scientists said that the prospect of financing blinded them to the seriousness of his sexual transgressions, and even led them to give credence to some of Mr. Epstein's half-baked scientific musings. … Mr. Epstein was willing to finance research that others viewed as bizarre. He told one scientist that he was bankrolling efforts to identify a mysterious particle that might trigger the feeling that someone is watching you. … Alan M. Dershowitz, a professor emeritus of law at Harvard, recalled that at a lunch Mr. Epstein hosted in Cambridge, Mass., he steered the conversation toward the question of how humans could be improved genetically. Mr. Dershowitz said he was appalled, given the Nazis' use of eugenics to justify their genocidal effort to purify the Aryan race. Yet the lunches persisted."

-- Epstein and Trump partied together and swam in the same social pool for the better part of two decades starting in the late 1980s before suddenly becoming rivals over the rights to a Palm Beach, Fla., property in 2004. Beth Reinhard, Rosalind S. Helderman and Marc Fisher report: "Photos and articles captured the men together over the years, the future president of the United States and the future convicted sex offender. … 'They were tight,' said one person who observed them together and spoke on the condition of anonymity to avoid retribution. 'They were each other's wingmen.' … In November 2004, Trump … declared himself intent on winning 'the finest piece of land in Florida and probably the U.S.,' an estate that had been seized as part of the bankruptcy of nursing home magnate Abe Gosman. … In contrast to Trump, Epstein seemed interested in living at the place. … As the competition heated up, Trump and Epstein began talking each other down to the trustee." Trump ultimately won the property, which he sold four years later for more than twice the price he bought it for. But ever since, his relationship with Epstein has been fractured. ...

"Trump also appears to have been helpful to Epstein's accusers. Brad Edwards, an attorney for some of the alleged victims, said in an interview last year that when he was seeking information from Epstein's acquaintances in 2009, Trump was 'the only person who picked up the phone and said: 'Let's just talk. I'll give you as much time as you want. I'll tell you what you need to know.'"

-- Epstein's sex trafficking trial could last a month or more, his defense attorney said. Prosecutors want the trial to begin in June 2020, while Epstein's defense wants it to start after Labor Day of next year. (Renae Merle and Matt Zapotosky)

-- Princess Haya Bint Hussein, one of the six wives of Dubai's ruler, Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Maktoum, is seeking protection from him. She's not the first woman in his family to do so. Ruby Mellen reports: "Haya's case has fixed a fresh spotlight on previous allegations of cruelty against Maktoum from female members of his family. Two of his daughters from another wife have attempted to flee the kingdom, saying they sought freedom from the family's repressive rule. They were both captured and brought back to Dubai. But their cases have sparked international concern. 'When you see female members of the royal family literally fleeing the country and seeking asylum, it should indicate the even greater extent to which average women in the UAE are denied basic rights,' said Radha Stirling, the chief executive of British-based advocacy group Detained in Dubai."

secret for decades as he ascended in the country's political ranks. She hasn't heard from him for years, but she still waits for his call. Annie Gowen reports: "The wife, Jashodaben Chimanlal Modi, is a retired teacher who lives in a small town in Modi's home state of Gujarat. Although she had not heard from her husband in years, she says she still hopes to join him one day in the capital as his spouse. 'If he calls me, I will go,' she said in an interview. 'I hear all his speeches on TV. I feel very good when I hear him speak. I want him to fulfill all his promises to the people. That's my prayer to God.' … [Modi] and his wife were promised to each other as young adolescents in keeping with the traditions of their community. They were then married in a small ceremony when she was 17 and he was 18. …

"Narendra Modi left shortly thereafter to wander in the Himalayas with little more than a change of clothing in his rucksack … [He] never returned to his wife but never divorced her, even as he became the high-profile chief minister of Gujarat and, last year, India's premier. He never publicly spoke of his wife, and journalists who sniffed around on the topic as Modi's fame grew were privately discouraged from doing so. … After he became prime minister, she was assigned an official security detail. But it has not been a happy experience. … She subsists on a small pension from her time as a teacher. She keeps a small photo of her husband tucked in her prayer book and spends long hours in solitude."

Biden becomes debate night target as candidates go on the attack

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: Joe Biden didn't just defend himself in Detroit on Wednesday night. He went after Kamala Harris, Cory Booker, Julián Castro, Kirsten Gillibrand and even Bill de Blasio.

The media coverage of the second night of the second Democratic debate has focused on the hits leveled against Biden. But these were all expected. Going after the candidate leading in the polls is de rigueur. More striking, and historically unusual, was how hard Biden fired back at anyone and everyone who criticized him.

Coming out swinging the way he did will probably reassure panicky donors and bed-wetting establishmentarians, thereby stabilizing his struggling campaign. But it also diminishes his stature. Yes, Biden leads in the polls. But calling him the front-runner feels like an exaggeration. Last night demonstrated that, unable to stay above the fray the way he hoped he could, Biden is now in the mosh pit with everyone else.

After faltering during the first debate in Miami – and facing not-so-quiet whispers about his age – Biden seemed determined to show that he's the kind of street brawler who can take the fight directly to President Trump. At times, however, his performance was reminiscent of Trump's response to Hillary Clinton during a 2016 debate: "No puppet. No puppet. You're the puppet!" The Biden debate strategy can best be summed up with the playground taunt: I know what you are, but what am I?

That's certainly how Biden sounded when he accused both African American senators onstage – each the child of civil rights activists – of being weak on civil rights.

In Biden's telling, Booker stood idly by as mayor of Newark while police officers under his command engaged in stop-and-frisk policies that targeted black men. "You went out and you hired Rudy Giuliani's guy," Biden said. "You had 75 percent of those stops reviewed as illegal. You found yourself in a situation where three times as many African American kids were caught in that chain. … The Justice Department came after you for engaging in behavior that was inappropriate, and then, in fact, nothing happened the entire time you were mayor."

Booker: 'You're dipping into the Kool-Aid and you don't even know the flavor'

Standing next to Biden, Booker noted that the local leader of the American Civil Liberties Union praised him for putting forth a national model in police accountability. "If you want to compare records — and, frankly, I'm shocked that you do — I'm happy to do that," he said. "Mr.

Vice President, there's a saying in my community. You're dipping into the Kool-Aid and you don't even know the flavor. You need to come to the city of Newark and see the reforms that we put in place."

Still sore over the way she lacerated him last time for working with segregationist senators to oppose busing in the 1970s, Biden tried to turn the tables by focusing on Harris's record as a prosecutor. "When Senator Harris was attorney general for eight years in the state of California, there were two of the most segregated school districts in the country in Los Angeles and in San Francisco. And she did nothing," he said. "I didn't see a single solitary time she brought a case against them to desegregate them. Secondly, she also was in a situation where she had a police department when she was there that was abusing people's rights."

Biden essentially accused Harris of prosecutorial misconduct, claiming that she withheld exculpatory evidence from "defense attorneys like me." "Along came a federal judge who said, 'Enough!' And he freed 1,000 of these people," Biden continued. "If you doubt me, Google '1,000 prisoners freed, Kamala Harris.'"

Harris responded, "That is simply not true." She added that she spent her time as California's chief law enforcement office "cleaning up the bills you passed" in the Senate.

Referring to himself as a defense attorney is a stretch: Biden was a part-time public defender for about a year in the late 1960s. He spent the lion's share of the half-century that followed as one of the Democratic Party's most outspoken tough-on-crime acolytes.

Gillibrand attacks Biden's record on working women

Gillibrand, the senator from New York, questioned Biden over an op-ed he wrote in 1981 with the headline “Congress Is Subsidizing Deterioration of Family.” In it, the then-senator argued that couples with higher income shouldn’t get tax credits for child care because, if they can afford it, one parent should stay home. “That was a long time ago,” Biden responded.

Then he highlighted Gillibrand’s past praise for his record on women’s issues. “You came to Syracuse University with me and said it was ‘wonderful’ that I'm ‘passionate’ about … making sure women are treated equally,” he said. “I don't know what's happened, except that you’re now running for president.”

When de Blasio asked Biden whether he ever advised Barack Obama to deport fewer undocumented immigrants during their eight years in the White House, Biden suggested – apparently apropos of nothing – that the New York mayor cannot be trusted to hold someone’s confidences. “I keep my recommendation to him in private,” he told de Blasio. “Unlike you, I can expect you would go ahead and say whatever was said privately with him. That is not what I do.”

But Biden had no qualms during the immigration discussion about disclosing that Castro, who was Obama’s secretary of housing and urban development, did not bring up the issue during Cabinet meetings. “I never heard him talk about any of this when he was secretary,” Biden said. “The fact of the matter is, if you cross the border illegally, you should be able to be sent back. It’s a crime.”

Biden wielded the former president like a shield. “Everybody’s talking about how terrible I am on all these issues,” he said. “Barack Obama knew exactly who I was. … He had 10 lawyers do a background check on everything about me on civil rights and civil liberties, and he chose me, and he said it was the best decision he made."

This argument makes sense. A CNN poll last year found that 66 percent of Americans had a favorable view of Obama, including 97 percent of Democrats. But when Biden distanced himself from the Obama administration's record of deporting millions of undocumented immigrants, Booker called him out for trying to have it both ways. "You invoke President Obama more than anybody in this campaign," he said. "You can't do it when it's convenient and then dodge it when it's not."

Democrats spent the second debate arguing about math

Criticizing his opponents who support Medicare-for-all, Biden accused them of trying to destroy Obamacare and peddling "a bunch of malarkey." That's long been one of his favorite fallback words. He said the plan – initially championed by Sen. Bernie Sanders and embraced to varying degrees by a handful of the other candidates – will raise taxes on the middle class by trillions and increase out-of-pocket health-care costs. Referring to de Blasio and Harris, he said: "I don't know what math you do in New York. I don't know what math you do in California."

In most of these instances, it appeared that Biden was trying to muddy the water enough so that these exchanges would get described as a draw. Taken together, they underscore just how many big issues he's vulnerable on in the modern political environment. In other ways, the exchanges showed, stylistically, how much he's a throwback to another time.

Biden began the line of attack on Castro by referring to his opponent as "Julián." Then he corrected himself. "Excuse me," he said, "the secretary." (That gave me a flashback to when Sarah Palin asked Biden

if she could call him “Joe” at the start of their debate in 2008.)

Biden accidentally referred to Booker as “the president” during his attack over stop-and-frisk, but he was playful about it. “Excuse me,” he quipped, “the future president.” (Booker loved it.) “Go easy on me, kid,” the 76-year-old joked to Harris, 54, as she came onstage and shook his hand.

Elizabeth Warren was not onstage, but Biden even took a little dig at the senator from Massachusetts, as well. Jake Tapper read aloud the quote from the night before about how Democrats won’t win in 2020 “with small ideas and spinelessness.” Biden replied by touting his role in the auto industry bailout. “I suspect that’s why the mayor [of Detroit] endorsed me,” he said, “and not the senator.”

Washington Gov. Jay Inslee, who has made climate change the centerpiece of his campaign, said Biden’s environmental proposals aren’t sufficiently ambitious. “Middle-ground solutions like what the vice president has proposed are not going to save us,” said Inslee. “There is no middle ground about my plan,” Biden replied.

“I’ve heard you say that we need a realistic plan,” said Inslee.

Biden took umbrage. “No, I didn’t say that,” he replied.

Let that sink in. It was as if “realistic” has somehow become a pejorative. Biden’s reflexive denial that he ever called his plan “realistic” speaks volumes about the leftward lurch of the party since Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez toppled Rep. Joe Crowley (D-N.Y.) in a primary last summer. Moments like this are why so many Democratic pooh-bahs are fretting privately that Trump’s chances of getting reelected go up with each debate. Ultimately, more than anything else, the allergy toward “realistic” approaches might be what dooms Biden’s third try for the presidency.

HOW IT'S PLAYING:

-- Wednesday's debate turned on character as much as ideology, which chief correspondent Dan Balz interprets as a foreboding turn for Democrats: "By the end of the evening, the candidates had done as much to make a case against one another as against the president, without offering much in the way of an aspirational message or connecting directly with the voters they will need to win the presidential election. The reality is that little changed as a result of the debate. The absence of clear winners and the absence of the emergence of a candidate with a hopeful message for a broader audience produced a status quo ending. … Harris delivered a more uneven performance than in Miami. Booker, by his aggressiveness toward Biden, made his bid to move up in a race where he has struggled. … Sen. Michael F. Bennet (D-Colo.) lamented that the Democrats were wasting time litigating the past and ignoring both the urgent problems of today and the threats posed by the Trump administration. His voice went largely unheard by the others on the stage."

-- As several Democrats rushed to criticize Biden, they grew increasingly comfortable with criticizing Obama's legacy by proxy. Matt Viser, Toluse Olorunnipa and Amy B Wang report: "The Obama administration's record on deportations, criminal justice, trade and health care was challenged implicitly and explicitly by several candidates. Even Biden stepped away from the former president on one issue, saying he no longer supports the Trans-Pacific Partnership." That's quite a flip-flop. Biden was a prominent salesman for the deal three years ago. Notably, Obama is staying neutral and has declined to endorse his former No. 2.

-- More team coverage:

- Biden spoke the most this round, clocking in at 21.2 minutes, almost four minutes more than Tuesday night's longest speaker, Warren. Harris trailed behind Biden, speaking for 17.7 minutes. Booker came in third with 12.8 minutes. Gillibrand spoke for 11.6 minutes; Inslee, 10.7; Bennet and Tulsi Gabbard, 10.6; Castro, 10.5; de Blasio, 9.7; and tech entrepreneur Andrew Yang came in last, speaking for only 8.7 minutes.
- The Fact Checker team scrutinized 13 statements made during the debate.
- Annie Linskey, David Fahrenthold, Sean Sullivan and Holly Bailey: "8 key moments from night 2."
- [redacted] Stein and Yasmeen Abutaleb: "Biden and Harris muddle through confusing health policy in debate."
- Elise Viebeck: "Biden, Harris field attacks on criminal justice records."
- Philip Bump: "More electability than foreign policy: The second debate's topics, by the numbers."
- Eugene Scott: "Five years after Eric Garner's death, he was a major topic at the Democratic debate."
- Read the complete transcript here.

-- What pundits are saying about who won and lost:

- The Fix's Aaron Blake names Sanders and Warren as the winners of the debate's second round, despite not being onstage, because "their performances were even better in contrast." Castro and Yang were also winners in Blake's book. Harris and Biden were the losers.
- CNN's Chris Cillizza thinks Booker, Gabbard, Castro and Biden had a great night, while Harris and Gillibrand stayed behind.
- Vox's Matthew Yglesias thinks Booker and Biden won.

- Politico's Elena Schneider doesn't think there's a clear winner in a "10-car pileup," but she did come up with some superlatives: Biden was the hottest target, and Booker had the best zinger.
- Fox News's Doug Schoen thinks Biden and Gabbard won while Gillibrand and Inslee left defeated.
- The Detroit Free Press says Harris did the best job in an otherwise murky debate.
- The BBC's Anthony Zurcher named Biden the debate's clear winner and Harris the clear loser.

Democratic candidates try to sharpen their message inside the spin room

-- Other takes this morning from across the media ecosystem:

- Politico's John F. Harris: "Biden was not that bad… and not that good."
- The New York Times's Matt Flegenheimer and Katie Glueck: "Biden Did Fine, and That Might Have Been Enough."
- Reuters's James Oliphant: "Biden steadies ship while setting up impending clash with Warren."
- The Times's Gail Collins: "Let's have another debate with just Warren versus Biden. And maybe we'll throw in Booker and Sanders."
- The Atlantic's David A. Graham: "Biden isn't the only one trying to have it both ways on Obama."
- The New Yorker's Benjamin Wallace-Wells: "Biden Defends the Party's Past."
- USA Today's N'dea Yancey-Bragg: "A Kool-Aid clapback: Cory Booker gets spicy."
- Slate's Henry Grabar: "Julián Castro Made the Best Case for Impeachment Yet."

- The New Republic's Heather Souvaine Horn: "Let's get into a fight about foreign policy."

-- From The Post's opinion page:

- "I'm grateful for every single woman running for president. Even Marianne Williamson," writes Alyssa Rosenberg. "I wouldn't vote for every woman running for president in the Democratic primary. But I'm grateful for the presence of every single one of them. Equality isn't a single perfect human woman winning the presidency: it's a bunch of flawed women being considered genuinely plausible contenders for the post."
- "Booker broke through. Biden struck back. Harris got put in the hot seat," writes E.J. Dionne Jr.
- "Biden performed better in the second debate. CNN didn't," writes Jennifer Rubin. "Unfortunately, CNN seemed to learn nothing from its horrendous reviews for Tuesday night. The same time-wasting, overproduced 25 minutes of blather at the onset, the same rigid enforcement of time constraints on candidates, the same lack of attention to foreign policy and the same crudely provocative style of questions reinforced the conclusion that not only CNN but also all of the broadcast news outlets and the DNC need to rethink the format of these events."
- "Biden was brilliantly and gloriously adequate," raves Dana Milbank. "He wasn't the most eloquent or stylish debater on the stage. He struggled to find words at times, he seemed over-rehearsed, he seemed not to grasp how texting works … he cut himself off when his allotted time expired and, at times, he seemed stunned by the ferocity of the barrage — which, in fairness, was stunning."

-- The Trump administration imposed sanctions on Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, a dramatic step bound to further escalate tensions with Tehran. Carol Morello and Karen DeYoung report: "A senior administration official said Zarif had acted more as a 'propaganda minister' than a diplomat. The announcement came as Trump's national security adviser said that nuclear-related sanctions on Iran would again be waived, despite the opposition of some of the administration's most hard-line officials. National Security Adviser John Bolton and Secretary of State Mike Pompeo had advocated ending the waiver, which allows Russia, China and Europe to participate in Iran's civil nuclear program, as permitted under the 2015 agreement from which the administration withdrew last year. Five current waivers were due to expire Thursday, and the Treasury Department expressed concern about collateral effects of ending them on other signatories of the deal. In a statement about the sanctions on Zarif, Pompeo said the foreign minister was 'complicit' in Iran's support of terrorists, torture and other malign activity around the world."

Zarif mocked the designation:

Sen. Rand [redacted] (R-Ky.), a Trump confidant who met with Zarif recently to discuss back-channel communications, expressed concern:

-- A North Korean soldier defected by making a midnight dash to freedom across the heavily fortified demilitarized zone. David Crawshaw reports: "The man crossed into South Korea late on Wednesday and was spotted moving south along the Imjin River about 11:38 p.m. ... It is relatively rare for North Koreans to attempt to cross directly to the South. Doing so involves traversing the DMZ, a heavily defended strip of no man's land running across the peninsula that is dotted with military guard posts, land mines, barbed wire and other barriers."

-- Hamza bin Laden, the son of the al-Qaeda founder, died. From the Times: "Details of the strike that killed him were scarce, including when and where. The United States government played a role in the operation, but it was not clear how … Though Mr. bin Laden carried a prominent name and lineage, the news of his death represented more of a symbolic victory for the American government than the removal of a threat. … Other key members of the organization remain alive, including Saif al-Adel and Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah, who are wanted by the F.B.I. in the bombings of two United States embassies in East Africa in 1998. They are thought to be in Iran."

THE DOMESTIC AGENDA:

-- The Fed cut the benchmark interest rate for the first time in more than a decade, lowering it by a quarter-point to just under 2.25 percent. Heather Long reports: The goal is to bolster the country's economy "amid early signs of a global slowdown. However, the central bank also inadvertently caused confusion about what it plans to do next, disquieting the stock market. Fed Chair Jerome H. Powell said the Fed was going to do whatever it takes to 'sustain the expansion,' but he stopped short of committing to a series of rate reductions as Wall Street and President Trump have demanded. 'Let me be clear. What I said was, it's not the beginning of a long series of rate cuts,' Powell said." These comments caused a sharp drop in the markets and, by the end of the trading day, the Dow Jones industrial average had lost 1.2 percent.

-- If the economy is in good shape, why is the Fed cutting rates in the first place? Long writes: "Lowering interest rates, the Fed's main way to boost the economy, is typically used in dire times, which it's difficult to argue the United States is experiencing right now. Instead, top Fed officials are defending this as an 'insurance cut' that's akin to an immunization shot in the arm. They want to counteract the negative effects of Trump's trade war and prevent the United States from catching the same cold that Europe, China and elsewhere seem to have. … It's a tricky calculus. … Realistically, one cut won't do much. The reason the stock market has rallied sharply in recent weeks is an expectation that this is the first of several cuts. ... If the Fed does not do three cuts this year, the market could pull back, making financial conditions 'tight' again, even though the Fed is cutting rates to try to loosen conditions."

-- Gary Cohn, Trump's former chief economic adviser, said that the president's tariffs are backfiring and hurting the U.S. economy. "I think the Chinese economy was going to slow down with or without a trade war," he told the BBC.

-- China's central bank opted overnight not to follow the Fed in cutting rates. From Reuters: "Though China's central bank does not always follow the Fed's moves in lockstep, some analysts had thought a token People's Bank of China cut, likely in one of its short-term rates, was a possibility. … While heading off a sharper economic slowdown remains Beijing's top priority, officials fear easing too aggressively could fuel debt and financial risks, according to government advisers involved in internal policy discussions."

-- The White House told officials to maintain a measured response to anti-government protests in Hong Kong over fears that any public statements would derail U.S. efforts to finalize a trade deal with China. From the Wall Street Journal: "'It was made clear down the chain that we need to be measured on Hong Kong,' one administration official said, noting that the guidance came from 'the top' over concern that fragile talks with China might be jeopardized by any outward show of support for the protests. The actions reflect the administration's foreign-policy moves that prioritize Mr. Trump's interest in safeguarding relationships where he sees opportunity for economic or political gain, sometimes going against the will of allies and even lawmakers within his own Republican Party."

-- Trump ordered the Navy's top leaders to rescind awards given to military lawyers who prosecuted the war crimes case against Navy SEAL Edward Gallagher, who was acquitted of charges that he murdered a wounded Islamic State fighter in Iraq. Colby Itkowitz reports: "Trump had intervened on Gallagher's behalf, having him removed from solitary confinement in March while awaiting trial. As the military news site Task & Purpose reported Tuesday, members of the prosecution team were quietly presented with Navy Achievement Medals on July 10 for their work on the case. In tweets Wednesday, Trump said the decorations were 'ridiculously given.' 'Not only did they lose the case,' Trump wrote on Twitter, 'they had difficulty with respect to information that may have been obtained from opposing lawyers and for giving immunity in a totally incompetent fashion.'"

-- The Gilroy Garlic Festival shooting is the latest vivid example of how strict gun laws in the states can be neutralized by lax laws in a neighboring state. The gunman who killed three and wounded 12 legally purchased a weapon in Nevada that he could not have gotten in California. "New York and New Jersey, for example, also have gun laws that rank among the tightest in the country. But the flow of firearms up Interstate 95 keeps both states supplied with weapons to such a staggering extent that the trafficking network is known as the 'Iron Pipeline.'" the Times notes. "To advocates of stricter gun laws, the messy patchwork of state laws that contributed to the tragedy in Gilroy is one more reason that federal gun-law changes are needed."

-- A group of doctors urged Congress to investigate the deaths of six migrant children and detention centers at the border in fear that "poor conditions" at U.S. facilities are increasing the spread of deadly diseases. Robert Moore reports: "The doctors, who wrote to Congress on Thursday, said autopsy reports show that at least three of the children — ages 2, 6 and 16 — died in part as a result of having the flu, a far-higher incidence of such deaths than across the general population. Child flu deaths are rare, the doctors said, and should be preventable. ... The letter, dated Thursday, alleges that the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Health and Human Services — which supervises longer-term custody of unaccompanied migrant minors — might not be following best practices in regard to screening, treatment, isolation and prevention of the flu."

-- The House Oversight Committee is seeking documents related to the secret U.S. Customs and Border Protection Facebook groups in which former employees ridiculed migrants and shared racist and sexist memes. Felicia Sonmez reports: "In a letter Wednesday to acting customs and border protection commissioner Mark Morgan, [Elijah] Cummings voiced alarm that some of the agents involved in the Facebook groups may still be on the job. … [The chairman] requested that CBP provide all documents related to the matter by Aug. 14."

-- A woman whose 1-year-old daughter died weeks after being released from a Texas immigration detention center sued the private prison company that runs the facility. From the AP: "Lawyers for Yazmin Juárez are demanding $40 million from CoreCivic in the complaint filed in federal court in San Antonio. It's the third legal claim they have filed related to the death of Yazmin's daughter, Mariee, in May last year. … In a statement, CoreCivic spokeswoman Amanda Gilchrist said the company 'had deep sympathy for the family and the tragic loss of their child,' and that ICE was responsible for hiring and overseeing medical staff."

-- Eight Republicans have announced their retirement plans this year, reflecting the party's transformation in the Trump era. From [redacted] Kane: "Most of those GOP retirements, so far, come from safely red seats … These retirements by influential Republicans suggest that there is increasing doubt about whether they can defy history and become the first caucus to flip the House majority during a presidential election since 1952. … The unspoken fear among Republicans is that more retirements could be on the way, particularly over this long recess as members of Congress spend time with their families, travel their district or make official overseas trips."

-- The Federal Trade Commission warned that so many people are seeking cash payments from Equifax following its 2017 data breach that there may not be enough money for everyone who applies to claim the $125 check. From CNN Business: "The FTC is trying to persuade Americans to pick a different option: take Equifax's offer of free credit monitoring instead. 'Millions of people' have logged onto a claims website set up by the federal government, the FTC said, following a multi-million-dollar settlement with Equifax announced last Monday. The site has been live for a week. Under the deal, consumers can file for Equifax's free credit monitoring or to receive a check for up to $125, which is meant to reimburse the cost of getting credit monitoring from elsewhere."

PERSONNEL IS POLICY:

-- Trump's pick for managing federal lands does not believe the government should have any. Steven Mufson reports: "Trump's Interior Secretary David Bernhardt signed an order making the Wyoming native William Perry Pendley the acting director of the Bureau of Land Management. Pendley, former president of the Mountain States Legal Foundation, was a senior official in Ronald Reagan's administration. … In the three decades since serving under Reagan, Pendley has sued the Interior Department on behalf of an oil and gas prospector, sought to undermine protections of endangered species such as the grizzly bear, and pressed to radically reduce the size of federal lands to make way for development. 'The Founding Fathers intended all lands owned by the federal government to be sold,' he wrote approvingly in a National Review magazine article in 2016. He said 'westerners know that only getting title to much of the land in the West will bring real change.' …

"Pendley's ties to the most conservative networks run deep. Pendley's Mountain States Legal Foundation, founded in 1977 and initially run by Reagan's controversial first Interior Secretary James G. Watt, has received backing from ultraconservative groups and individuals such as the Koch-linked Donors Trust and beer tycoon Joseph Coors. Pendley will once again be overseeing a coal leasing program he was found to have mismanaged … More recently in a September 2017 article in the National Review magazine, Pendley attacked then-Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke for failing to do enough to reduce the size of the country's national monuments."

-- Housing and Urban Development Secretary Ben Carson showed up in Baltimore to defend the president's negative descriptions of the city, saying there are "a lot of good things in Baltimore, but there are a lot of bad things too." Ovetta Wiggins reports: "It's sort of like a patient who has cancer: You can dress them up and put a nice suit on and try to ignore it, but that cancer is going to have a devastating effect," he said while standing outside Hollins House, a federally funded housing complex for senior citizens in the congressional district of Rep. Elijah E. Cummings (D-Md.). "You have to be willing to address that issue if you are ever going to solve it." No state or city officials appeared at Carson's event, which was originally scheduled to be held on a church lot across an apartment complex. The event was hastily moved to an alley behind the complex after a member of the church said no one had asked permission to hold an event on the property.

-- The Senate Armed Services Committee voted to advance Trump's pick to be the military's second-highest officer, despite an Army colonel's allegations that he sexually assaulted her. Karoun Demirjian reports: "The vote was 20 to 7, reflecting bipartisan support for Gen. John E. Hyten … The vote also reflected bipartisan opposition, after Sen. Joni Ernst (R-Iowa) decided to vote against recommending Hyten's confirmation because of 'his inability to address toxic leadership and exercise sound judgment while serving as STRATCOM Commander,' according to her spokeswoman. … Hyten appeared before the committee for his confirmation hearing Tuesday, where he flatly denied Col. Kathryn Spletstoser's charges … On Wednesday, she responded to what she called the committee's 'gut-wrenching' decision to recommend Hyten for confirmation in a statement imploring the panel to let her speak publicly in a hearing before them."

-- The Senate confirmed Kelly Knight Craft as the next U.N. ambassador in a party-line vote. Demirjian reports: "Craft struggled to allay Democrats' concerns about her family's significant investments in the fossil fuel industry, though notably she separated herself from the president on climate change. During her confirmation hearing in June, Craft declared that she believes fossil fuels and human behavior contribute to the planet's shifting weather phenomena. 'Let there be no doubt,' she said. She also pushed back against Democrats' accusations that she had spent too much time away from her post in Ottawa, Canada's capital. … During her confirmation hearing, she defended Trump's decision to reduce payments to the U.N. and pull out of bodies like the U.N. Human Rights Council."

Ivanka Trump, Jared Kushner and other employees unless the president directs him to. From NBC News: "Michael Atkinson, the inspector general of the intelligence community, meaning the chief internal watchdog for the nation's intelligence agencies, wrote to [Democratic] senators that he would be happy to conduct such an investigation, but could only do it if President Trump asks him."

-- A former congressional staffer who fought to discredit the Russia investigation got a senior White House national security job. From the Daily Beast: "Kash Patel, who helmed the efforts of former House Intelligence Committee Chairman Devin Nunes to scrutinize the court-authorized surveillance of a Trump associate has taken on the role of Senior Director of the Counterterrorism Directorate of the National Security Council (NSC), according to two sources familiar with the move. … Patel drew national attention in early 2018, when Nunes oversaw the production and release of a memo on surveillance of Trump campaign advisor Carter Page. … Patel also sparred with Rod Rosenstein during his time supervising the Russia probe."

-- Two former top staffers to Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell lobbied for an aluminum mill project in Kentucky backed by a close ally of Vladimir Putin. From Politico: "The disclosure comes as Democrats are pushing the Trump administration to review Rusal's $200 million investment in the Kentucky project — concerned that the mill will supply the Defense Department — and as McConnell weathers criticism for helping block a congressional effort to stop the investment. The Russian firm was only able to make the investment after it won sanctions relief from penalties the Treasury Department initially imposed in April 2018 on Rusal and other companies owned by Oleg Deripaska, a Russian oligarch and Kremlin ally accused of facilitating Moscow's nefarious activities. ... It's unclear whether the former staffers — Hunter Bates, a former McConnell chief of staff, and Brendan Dunn, who advised the Kentucky Republican on tax, trade and financial services matters before heading to K Street last year — directly lobbied McConnell's office over the aluminum mill project. Akin Gump Strauss Hauer & Feld, the law and lobbying firm where Bates and Dunn work, and McConnell's office declined to comment on whether they had done so.

-- The Kremlin announced that Trump called Putin to offer U.S. help with fighting Siberian wildfires. From Reuters: "The Kremlin said the two leaders had spoken by phone at Washington's initiative, hours after Putin ordered the Russian army to help firefighters battle the wildfires. The fires have spread to around 3 million hectares of mostly remote forest, an area almost the size of Belgium, according to the Federal Forestry Agency, wafting smoke across Siberia and prompting several regions to declare states of emergency. … 'President Putin expressed his sincere gratitude for such an attentive attitude and for the offer of help and support,' [the Kremlin said]. Putin told Trump that Moscow would take him up on his offer if necessary, the Kremlin said, adding: 'The Russian president took this step from the U.S. president as a sign that in the future we can restore full-scale ties between our two countries.'" We know about this call because the Kremlin announced it. The White House did not. This is another norm that's been violated in the Trump era.

-- Russia and the U.S. have eased tensions over a visa deal for students enrolled in an American Embassy-backed school. (Bloomberg News) drive people into their corners, shrinking opportunities to accomplish real results. I'm an institutionalist. I respect Congress, for all its imperfections. As chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, I am responsible for congressional oversight of the Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue Service's administration of the federal tax code. The tax code gives the committee chairman the power to request taxpayer information from the IRS. The committee has exercised this power at various times in the past and has never been denied by the IRS or the Treasury Department. In early April, I requested the president's tax returns to fulfill a legitimate congressional oversight responsibility: Our voluntary tax-compliance system hinges on the public's faith that our tax laws are administered fairly and without favor to those in power. The president is unique: No other American has the power to sign bills into law and direct an entire branch of government. That power, and the extent to which the IRS can audit and enforce federal tax laws against a current or future president, merits closer legislative scrutiny."

THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- Jeffrey Epstein, the financier accused of trafficking girls as young as 14 for sex, hoped to seed the human race with his DNA by impregnating dozens of women at his New Mexico ranch. From the New York Times: "On multiple occasions starting in the early 2000s, Mr. Epstein told scientists and businessmen about his ambitions to use his New Mexico ranch as a base where women would be inseminated with his sperm and would give birth to his babies. ... Epstein over the years confided to scientists and others about his scheme, according to four people familiar with his thinking, although there is no evidence that it ever came to fruition. … [His] vision reflected his longstanding fascination with what has become known as transhumanism: the science of improving the human population through technologies like genetic engineering and artificial intelligence."

Epstein used his connections and [redacted] to build relationships with an array of prominent scientists, including the physicist who discovered the quark and theoretical physicist Stephen Hawking: "The lure for some of the scientists was Mr. Epstein's money. … Some of the scientists said that the prospect of financing blinded them to the seriousness of his sexual transgressions, and even led them to give credence to some of Mr. Epstein's half-baked scientific musings. … Mr. Epstein was willing to finance research that others viewed as bizarre. He told one scientist that he was bankrolling efforts to identify a mysterious particle that might trigger the feeling that someone is watching you. … Alan M. Dershowitz, a professor emeritus of law at Harvard, recalled that at a lunch Mr. Epstein hosted in Cambridge, Mass., he steered the conversation toward the question of how humans could be improved genetically. Mr. Dershowitz said he was appalled, given the Nazis' use of eugenics to justify their genocidal effort to purify the Aryan race. Yet the lunches persisted."

-- Epstein and Trump partied together and swam in the same social pool for the better part of two decades starting in the late 1980s before suddenly becoming rivals over the rights to a Palm Beach, Fla., property in 2004. Beth Reinhard, Rosalind S. Helderman and Marc Fisher report: "Photos and articles captured the men together over the years, the future president of the United States and the future convicted sex offender. … 'They were tight,' said one person who observed them together and spoke on the condition of anonymity to avoid retribution. 'They were each other's wingmen.' … In November 2004, Trump … declared himself intent on winning 'the finest piece of land in Florida and probably the U.S.,' an estate that had been seized as part of the bankruptcy of nursing home magnate Abe Gosman. … In contrast to Trump, Epstein seemed interested in living at the place. … As the competition heated up, Trump and Epstein began talking each other down to the trustee." Trump ultimately won the property, which he sold four years later for more than twice the price he bought it for. But ever since, his relationship with Epstein has been fractured. ...

"Trump also appears to have been helpful to Epstein's accusers. Brad Edwards, an attorney for some of the alleged victims, said in an interview last year that when he was seeking information from Epstein's acquaintances in 2009, Trump was 'the only person who picked up the phone and said: 'Let's just talk. I'll give you as much time as you want. I'll tell you what you need to know.'"

-- Epstein's sex trafficking trial could last a month or more, his defense attorney said. Prosecutors want the trial to begin in June 2020, while Epstein's defense wants it to start after Labor Day of next year. (Renae Merle and Matt Zapotosky)

-- Princess Haya Bint Hussein, one of the six wives of Dubai's ruler, Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Maktoum, is seeking protection from him. She's not the first woman in his family to do so. Ruby Mellen reports: "Haya's case has fixed a fresh spotlight on previous allegations of cruelty against Maktoum from female members of his family. Two of his daughters from another wife have attempted to flee the kingdom, saying they sought freedom from the family's repressive rule. They were both captured and brought back to Dubai. But their cases have sparked international concern. 'When you see female members of the royal family literally fleeing the country and seeking asylum, it should indicate the even greater extent to which average women in the UAE are denied basic rights,' said Radha Stirling, the chief executive of British-based advocacy group Detained in Dubai."

-- Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi kept his wife a secret for decades as he ascended in the country's political ranks. She hasn't heard from him for years, but she still waits for his call. Annie Gowen reports: "The wife, Jashodaben Chimanlal Modi, is a retired teacher who lives in a small town in Modi's home state of Gujarat. Although she had not heard from her husband in years, she says she still hopes to join him one day in the capital as his spouse. 'If he calls me, I will go,' she said in an interview. 'I hear all his speeches on TV. I feel very good when I hear him speak. I want him to fulfill all his promises to the people. That's my prayer to God.' … [Modi] and his wife were promised to each other as young adolescents in keeping with the traditions of their community. They were then married in a small ceremony when she was 17 and he was 18. …

"Narendra Modi left shortly thereafter to wander in the Himalayas with little more than a change of clothing in his rucksack … [He] never returned to his wife but never divorced her, even as he became the high-profile chief minister of Gujarat and, last year, India's premier. He never publicly spoke of his wife, and journalists who sniffed around on the topic as Modi's fame grew were privately discouraged from doing so. … After he became prime minister, she was assigned an official security detail. But it has not been a happy experience. … She subsists on a small pension from her time as a teacher. She keeps a small photo of her husband tucked in her prayer book and spends long hours in solitude."

-- Outrage drove a Malaysian senator to back away from an "anti-seduction" law he had proposed. From SBS News: "Mohamad Imran Abdul Hamid told the senate, known as the Dewan Negara, that a new law was needed to protect men. 'I propose a Sexual Harassment Act to protect men,' he said according to a report in local news outlet Malaysiakini. … Human rights watchdog Suaram immediately called for Imran to issue a public apology and retract his remarks, saying such claims were 'absurd.'"

SOCIAL MEDIA SPEED READ:

[redacted],

1. The attached spreadsheet has three tabs with counts on Attempts, Self Harm and Placement on Suicide Watch for all of our institutions between 2014-2018 and it was shared with IPPA.

2. This is a reporter's question sent to IPPA along with our response and my recommendation for adding more information.

(4) Also, does BOP have any special initiatives under way to help reduce the numbers? What is BOP's response to the union's contention is staffing shortages is at the root of the problem?

The safety of staff, inmates, and the public is the highest priority for the BOP.

The BOP works diligently to provide education to staff and inmates on suicide prevention. Every staff member receives annual training on this important topic, and many receive additional semi-annual training. After an inmate arrives at an institution, every inmate receives information on mental health services available to them. Psychology Services staff at each facility provides crisis intervention and support services as needed. Psychologists are available for formal counseling and treatment on an individual or group basis. In addition, staff in an inmate's housing unit are available for informal counseling. More information can be found on our website here https://www.bop.gov/inmates/custody_and_care/mental_health.jsp.

I would just add that suicide prevention is mandatory and an integral part of our Introduction to Correctional Techniques I & II (Institution & Glynco); Annual Training; Semi-Annual Training; New Lieutenants Training, and Prior to working an assigned post in SHU. The first four items apply to all Bureau staff.

3. The second attachment is a collection of data Psychology Services does every year. 2018 and 2017 will likely have one more death added to each year. This were discovered this week, one at CAA and one at an RRC that PSB was never notified about.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Hi [redacted],

We may need wall counsel again in the Tartaglione matter in relation to the below site visit request. [redacted] so excellently helped us last time in our appearance on the conditions of confinement issue, so I cc'ed her as well.

Thank you and I wish you and yours a Happy Thanksgiving.

As part of our obligations to prepare for the penalty phase (should there be one) of Mr. Tartaglione's trial, we would like to view the cells (including SHU ) and common areas where he has been held. It's possible that we will want to take some photographs, but initially we just want to look at the areas where he has been housed.

Thanks so much for the quick response (and solution). Mr. Weinberg should be able to get back to MCC in about 30 minutes so should be all set, and I'll let you know if he reaches out to me with any issues.

thanks again,

[redacted], [redacted],

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be presented on an indictment tomorrow. His attorney, Martin Weinberg, has represented him in the past, and represents him in connection with our case and has been in touch with us throughout the weekend. He went to MCC today to meet with him in advance of the presentment tomorrow, but was just told he is not allowed in because he is from out-of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to you—is it at all possible to address this issue so Mr. Weinberg can meet with his client this evening? I'm available anytime at [redacted] to discuss, if that's helpful, or Mr. Weinberg can also be reached directly at [redacted] if that's easier (though if you reach out directly to him if you could please just let me know afterward I'd be grateful).

thanks very much,
[redacted].

Thanks so much for the quick response (and solution). Mr. Weinberg should be able to get back to MCC in about 30 minutes so should be all set, and I'll let you know if he reaches out to me with any issues.

thanks again,

[redacted], [redacted],

With apologies for the weekend email, we have a defendant, Jeffrey Epstein, who was arrested last night and is currently being detained at MCC, and is expected to be presented on an indictment tomorrow. His attorney, Martin Weinberg, has represented him in the past, and represents him in connection with our case and has been in touch with us throughout the weekend. He went to MCC today to meet with him in advance of the presentment tomorrow, but was just told he is not allowed in because he is from out-of-state.

We're concerned about the defendant not having access to his attorney in advance of the presentment (as we would be for any defendant) and so I wanted to reach out to you—is it at all possible to address this issue so Mr. Weinberg can meet with his client this evening? I'm available anytime at [redacted] to discuss, if that's helpful, or Mr. Weinberg can also be reached directly at [redacted] if that's easier (though if you reach out directly to him if you could please just let me know afterward I'd be grateful).

thanks very much,

In the era of no regrets, Acosta and Pelosi are not sorry

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Joanie Greve and Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: Sorry, not sorry. We've entered an era of no regrets.

"I have no regrets about anything," Speaker Nancy Pelosi told reporters yesterday as she left a closed-door meeting of the House Democratic caucus. "Regrets is not what I do."

Trying to save his job, embattled Labor Secretary [redacted] Acosta didn't just defend – but touted – a 2008 plea deal he negotiated with wealthy financier Jeffrey Epstein that has been heavily criticized as lenient. A federal judge ruled earlier this year that Acosta's office violated the rights of Epstein's victims by failing to notify them of the agreement not to bring federal charges. The Justice Department has been probing Acosta's handling of the case. But the secretary declined to apologize to the victims when offered multiple opportunities during his afternoon news conference.

"Look, no regrets is a very hard question," Acosta said. "There is a value to a short guilty plea because letting him walk … would have been absolutely awful."

President Trump, of course, is legendary for not apologizing, which he plainly sees as a sign of weakness. "Under my administration," Trump said during his State of the Union address in February, "we will never apologize for advancing America's interests."

Asked last month if he regrets seeking deferments for "bone spurs" to avoid being drafted to serve in Vietnam, Trump said no. "Well, I was never a fan of that war, I'll be honest with you. I thought it was a terrible war. I thought it was very far away. At that time, nobody had ever heard of the country," the president told Piers Morgan. "I think I make up for it right now. I think I'm making up for it rapidly because we're rebuilding our military at a level it's never seen before."

"No, not at all," Trump said in April when asked by the Minneapolis ABC affiliate whether he regretted that Rep. Ilhan Omar (D-Minn.) got death threats after he posted a video that spliced together footage of her with images of the 9/11 attacks. “I don't really care about offending people. I sort of thought you'd know that.”

“No, no. Not at all,” Trump said last October when asked if he regretted his praise for a Montana congressman who physically assaulted a reporter after the Saudis murdered Jamal Khashoggi.

When this president has expressed regret, it has often come across as insincere – a view bolstered by his tendency to later walk back such comments. After initially apologizing for his comments on the “Access Hollywood” tape when it emerged in October 2016, for example, Trump went on the counterattack and subsequently suggested the audio wasn’t authentic.

President Trump greets Sarah Sanders and Kellyanne Conway after they spoke at a campaign rally last November in Fort Wayne, Ind. (Michael Conroy/AP)

Trump’s coterie has followed his example, and the no-apologies ethos has become somewhat infectious in these polarized and tribal times. Counselor to the president Kellyanne Conway has said she does not care that she’s been accused of violating the Hatch Act by using her official position to do things like tout Ivanka Trump’s clothing line or espouse partisan statements. “Blah, blah, blah,” she quipped to a reporter. “Let me know when the jail sentence starts,” she quipped to a reporter.

During an exit interview last month with NBC News, Sarah

During an exit interview last month with NBC News, Sarah Sanders was asked whether she had any regrets about how she did her job. “No, I don’t,” she said. Asked if she would have done anything differently, she elaborated: “Certainly, there are things. I mean, I’ll spend some time thinking about what those are.” But she couldn’t think of any right then, she said.

When Sanders announced she was going home to Arkansas, the owner of the Virginia restaurant who refused to serve food to Sanders – because of the Trump administration’s family separation policy – wrote an op-ed saying she’d do the same thing again, despite all the death threats and the impact on her business. “Resistance is not futile,” wrote [redacted] Wilkinson, the owner of the Red Hen in Lexington.

Rep. Hakeem Jeffries (D-N.Y.), the chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, refused to apologize in January for describing Trump as “the grand wizard of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue,” a Ku Klux Klan reference, and suggesting that the president is a nephew of Jim Crow. “I don't regret the use of the language, but I do think we need to move forward," Jeffries told Chuck Todd on NBC. “Listen, it’s colorful language,” the congressman added, as if that was somehow exculpatory.

Biden apologizes for comments on working with segregationists

party that's been lurching leftward. Elizabeth Warren said "I am sorry" for identifying herself as a Native American in the past and for taking a DNA test to try to prove her ancestry. When Kirsten Gillibrand launched her campaign around the same time, she apologized for her past positions on immigration and guns. Tulsi Gabbard said she was "deeply sorry" for anti-gay comments she made a few years ago but not sorry for meeting with Bashar al-Assad, the man known as the butcher of Damascus, in Syria.

Joe Biden expressed regret last weekend in South Carolina for his comments about working with segregationists in the Senate. "Was I wrong a few weeks ago to somehow give the impression to people that I was praising those men, who I successfully opposed time and again? Yes, I was," the former vice president said. "I regret it. I'm sorry for any of the pain or misconception I may have caused anybody. But should that misstep define 50 years of my record fighting for civil rights and racial justice in this country? I hope not. I don't think so."

Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam apologized for appearing in blackface but refused to resign and then claimed it wasn't actually him in the 1984 blackface photo on his medical school yearbook page. The commonwealth's attorney general, Mark Herring, called on Northam to resign. When it came out a few days later that Herring, also a Democrat, had appeared in blackface when he went to a party as a rapper, Herring apologized but also declined to resign. "From the bottom of my heart, I am deeply, deeply sorry," Herring said.

PELOSI VS. AOC:

-- When Pelosi said, "Regrets is not what I do," the speaker was referring to comments she made about "the Squad," as a quartet of liberal freshman women who have been causing her headaches call themselves. Pelosi told Maureen Dowd for a column that ran in last Sunday's New York Times that the upstarts have "their Twitter world" but lack much influence inside the Democratic caucus. "They're four people and that's how many votes they got," she said.

The Squad – consisting of Omar, Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (N.Y.), Rashida Tlaib (Mich.) and Ayanna Pressley (Mass.) – replied by calling Pelosi a bully. "The four are struggling with the speaker's moves to isolate them in recent weeks," Rachael Bade and Mike DeBonis report. "Pelosi has made at least half a dozen remarks dismissing the group or their far-left proposals on the environment and health care. More recently she scorned their lonely opposition to the party's emergency border bill last month."

Ocasio-Cortez said in an interview with The Washington Post: "When these comments first started, I kind of thought that she was keeping the progressive flank at more of an arm's distance in order to protect more moderate members, which I understood. But the persistent singling out … it got to a point where it was just outright disrespectful … the explicit singling out of newly elected women of color."

"Ocasio-Cortez's relationship with the speaker has been chilly from the start," per Rachael and Mike. "After she upset Rep. Joseph Crowley (N.Y.) in the Democratic primary, Pelosi moved to immediately downplay her victory, saying it was a one-off event. Still, Pelosi tried to create a bridge with the New Yorker: During their first face-to-face meeting just before the midterm elections, Pelosi spent nearly two hours trying to convince the liberal that she was just like her, touting her background. It was around that time that Ocasio-Cortez agreed to not only back Pelosi as speaker but also vocally defend her against rebels trying to keep her from the gavel. Now, half a year later, virtually all communication between the two women has ceased.

"The two have not spoken one-on-one since February when Ocasio-Cortez declined Pelosi's personal request that she join her select committee on climate change. Just days after, during a private Progressive Caucus meeting, Pelosi singled out Ocasio-Cortez in front of her colleagues, calling her out for rejecting the select committee offer. Ocasio-Cortez had publicly criticized leadership for refusing to give the committee the power to directly draft legislation. Since then, Pelosi has made several dismissive remarks about Ocasio-Cortez, calling her Green New Deal 'the Green Dream or whatever,' and suggesting that a 'glass of water' running as a Democrat could win in districts as liberal as hers. 'The third and fourth time [she insulted me], it was like, "This is unnecessary, but I'm not going to pick a fight over it. Whatever, I'll be the punching bag if that's what they want me to be,"' Ocasio-Cortez said. But now people are telling the freshman to talk to Pelosi. She doesn't want to, however."

Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez confers with Saikat Chakrabarti, who is now her chief of staff, after she won her upset last June in a Democratic congressional primary. (Bebeto Matthews/AP)

-- Our Sunday magazine has a long profile of Ocasio-Cortez's chief of staff, Saikat Chakrabarti. (Read it here first.)

-- New Yorker editor David Remnick interviewed AOC after she returned from her trip to the border last week. The full transcript is interesting, but her suggestion that Biden might be too old is generating the most buzz: "I think age gets used as a proxy for capacity. And so I think there are some folks that are of a certain age where you can kind of question their capacity," she said. "I think Donald Trump is a perfect example. I don't think he's all there. … I think Joe Biden, his performance on the stage kind of raised some questions with respect to that. But I don't want to say, just because someone is seventy-nine, they can't or shouldn't run for President. I don't want to use those proxies, a number as a proxy for capacity. I think you have to assess a person's capacity on a case-by-case basis." For example, Ocasio-Cortez said that Bernie Sanders, whom she worked for in 2016, is not too old.

-- More drama on the Hill that should be on your radar: "The White House is pushing congressional leaders to strike a spending deal and increase the debt limit in the next two or three weeks, jolted by a recent report that found the Treasury Department was running out of cash much faster than previously forecasted," Damian Paletta and Erica Werner report. "But the talks have bogged down amid acrimony between Democrats and the White House, and now Washington's leaders run the risk of a fiscal pileup that could also imperil Trump's effort to update the North American Free Trade Agreement. White House officials have said the debt ceiling must be raised by early September to ensure the government can pay its bills. And spending on many federal programs expires at the end of September, requiring a separate deal to prevent a government shutdown. …

"Pelosi has also shown little regard for Trump's top deputies. She has been unsparing in her public criticisms of [acting chief of staff Mick] Mulvaney. At one point during a budget negotiation in May, Pelosi snubbed acting budget director Russell Vought when he spoke up to reiterate a point. Turning to Vought, Pelosi asked, 'What was your name again, dear?'"

WHILE YOU WERE IN YOUR MORNING MEETINGS:

of Defense/AP)

-- Three Iranian vessels attempted to stop a British tanker traveling through the Strait of Hormuz, Britain said today, in the latest escalation between Iran and the world. Erin Cunningham reports from Dubai: "A British navy ship, HMS Montrose, 'was forced to position herself between the Iranian vessels and British Heritage and issue to verbal warnings to the Iranian vessels, which then turned away,' the British government said in a statement. … Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps denied Thursday that it was involved in challenging the British tanker, saying in a statement carried by the Fars news agency that there had been no confrontations with foreign vessels in the past 24 hours. But Iran had previously warned Britain of 'consequences' for seizing an Iranian supertanker in the Mediterranean last week, a move it denounced as 'an act of piracy.' That vessel was carrying oil to Syria in violation of European Union sanctions, Britain said."

-- The Trump administration pulled one of its key proposals to lower drug prices that would have eliminated rebates to middlemen in Medicare, which Trump's top health official had touted as one of the most significant changes to curb medicine costs for consumers. Yasmeen Abutaleb reports: "The rule is the second major drug pricing effort to get blocked this week, complicating the administration's efforts to make lowering prescription medicine costs a key 2020 presidential campaign issue. Health and Human Services Secretary [redacted]

Azar and top White House policy advisers had disagreed over the merits of the rule, which has been a source of tension between the two camps. Azar proposed the rule in January as a central plank of the administration's effort to lower drug prices, and had proposed implementing the change next year. But policy advisers at the White House bristled at the rule's nearly $180 billion estimated price tag over a decade and questioned whether it would be effective."

Amy McGrath campaigns for a House seat last year in Louisville. She lost. Now she's running against the Senate majority leader. (Timothy D. Easley/AP)

-- Amateur hour: Amy McGrath, the Kentucky Democratic Senate candidate who is challenging Mitch McConnell, flip-flopped on whether she would have voted to confirm Brett Kavanaugh. John Wagner and Colby Itkowitz report: "First, during a wide-ranging interview with Louisville's Courier-Journal, McGrath said that while she found Christine Blasey Ford, the woman who alleged Kavanaugh sexually assaulted her in high school, credible, she still probably would have voted to confirm Kavanaugh. But hours later, McGrath said she had changed her mind and actually would not have supported him. 'I was asked earlier today about Judge Brett Kavanaugh and I answered based upon his qualifications to be on the Supreme Court,' McGrath tweeted. 'But upon further reflection and further understanding of his record, I would have voted no.'"

In her first 24 hours as a candidate, her campaign raised more than $2.5 million. Much of that cash came from liberals who loathe McConnell — and would have been unlikely to give her anything if they thought she was the kind of Democrat who would support Kavanaugh. This donnybrook underscores the difficult needle McGrath must thread for her long-shot campaign. Trump remains popular in the state and will probably carry it in 2020 when she's on the ballot. "If President Trump has good ideas, I'll be for them," McGrath told the Louisville Courier-Journal. "At the same time, if I think he's wrong, I'm going to stand up to him, and that's the difference — one of the major differences — between myself and Senator McConnell."

THE IMMIGRATION WARS:

-- ICE agents are preparing to arrest thousands of immigrants during raids that are scheduled to begin Sunday. The Times's Caitlin Dickerson and Zolan Kanno Youngs report: The raids "will include 'collateral' deportations, according to the officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because of the preliminary stage of the operation. In those deportations, the authorities might detain immigrants who happened to be on the scene, even though they were not targets of the raids. … The officials said ICE agents were targeting at least 2,000 immigrants who have been ordered deported — some as a result of their failure to appear in court — but who remain in the country illegally. The operation is expected to take place in at least 10 major cities. The families being targeted crossed the border recently: The Trump administration expedited their immigration proceedings last fall. In February, many of those immigrants were given notice to report to an ICE office and leave the United States, the homeland security officials said."

-- A second federal judge blocked the Justice Department's attempt to swap out its attorneys in the census case. Matt Zapotosky reports: "U.S. District Judge George J. Hazel in Maryland wrote in a six-page order that he shared the concerns of a federal judge in New York who similarly blocked the Justice Department maneuver this week, but noted that in his district, unlike the other judge's, attorneys do not have to provide 'satisfactory reasons for withdrawal.' He wrote he was concerned that 'a shift in counsel at this late stage may be disruptive to an already complicated and expedited case.'"

-- Trump will hold a news conference today on his administration's efforts to add the citizenship question to the census. (John Wagner)

-- "I hate this mission," said an operator of a new emergency shelter for migrant children. Neena Satija reports: "Kevin Dinnin, head of the San Antonio-based nonprofit BCFS Health and Human Services, said on Wednesday in [a] remote Texas town, 'The only reason we do it is to keep the kids out of the Border Patrol jail cells.' The Carrizo Springs shelter opened on June 30 to help alleviate cramped conditions in Border Patrol processing facilities, where people were recently seen sleeping head to

The shelter will be able to hold up to 1,300 teenage children, though it currently has just over 200. … The facility is a scattering of dormitory buildings, trailers and tents that were once housing for oil field workers. Children's artwork — drawings of cartoon characters, flags and paper flowers — decorated the walls of their sleeping quarters. Lighted soccer fields allow children to play at night and avoid the harsh summer heat."

-- A Guatemalan woman who alleges her daughter died of an infection after "neglect and mistreatment" in a U.S. detention center told a House panel she begged for help to no avail. Maria Sacchetti reports: "'My baby grew sicker every day,' Yazmin Juárez, the mother of 19-month-old Mariee, said during an emotional hearing. 'She was vomiting constantly. … I saw her suffer in a way you can't imagine.' … The afternoon hearing before the House Oversight and Government Reform Subcommittee on Civil Rights and Civil Liberties — 'Kids in Cages: Inhumane Treatment at the Border' — reflected the incendiary tensions between Democrats and the White House over the influx of families and unaccompanied minors at the border. Among the witnesses were lawyers and advocates who described squalid, cramped conditions at U.S. border facilities. … Rep. Chip Roy (Tex.), the subcommittee's top Republican, offered his condolences to Juárez and said in Spanish that 'there are no words.' THE DOMESTIC AGENDA:

-- The FBI arrested two former senior officials who served in the administration of Puerto Rico Gov. Ricardo Rosselló in connection with a corruption scandal that is prompting calls for the governor's ouster. [redacted] Stein reports: "The arrests also spurred concerns on Capitol Hill about the billions of dollars in aid that Congress has approved for the island. The federal indictment says the former officials illegally directed federal funding to politically connected contractors. The arrests come about a month after Congress approved a controversial disaster aid bill that earmarked additional funding for Puerto Rico's recovery from Hurricane Maria in 2017, which were tied up in part because President Trump called island officials 'incompetent or corrupt.' … Six people were charged in the 32-count indictment. -- Trump's Fourth of July event — and the weekend protests that surrounded it — bankrupted D.C.'s security fund, Mayor Muriel E. Bowser said. Peter Jamison and Juliet Eilperin report: "Bowser (D) warned that the fund has been depleted and is estimated to be running a $6 million deficit when the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30. The mayor also noted that the account was never reimbursed for $7.3 million in expenses from Trump's 2017 inauguration. Bowser requested that the White House fully reimburse the fund. Without that money, city officials say, Washingtonians will be put in the unprecedented position of funding federal security needs with local tax dollars."

-- A State Department intelligence official resigned after the White House blocked him from submitting written congressional testimony about climate change. Juliet Eilperin reports: "Rod Schoonover — who worked in the Bureau of Intelligence and Research's Office of the Geographer and Global Issues — spoke before the House Intelligence Committee on June 5 about the security risks the United States faces because of climate change. But White House officials would not let him submit the bureau's written statement that climate impacts could be 'possibly catastrophic,' after the State Department refused to cut Individuals familiar with the matter, who asked for anonymity to speak frankly, said Schoonover is leaving voluntarily. But the incident that led to his departure underscores the extent to which climate science has become contested terrain under the current administration."

-- A senior military officer accused the Air Force general tapped as the next vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of sexual misconduct. From the AP's Lolita C. Baldor: "The officer told The Associated Press that Gen. John Hyten subjected her to a series of unwanted sexual advances by kissing, hugging and rubbing up against her in 2017 while she was one of his aides. … The Air Force investigated the woman's allegations, which she reported days after Hyten's nomination was announced in April, and found there was insufficient evidence to charge the general or recommend any administrative punishment. The alleged victim remains in the military but has moved to a different job. … The accusations against Hyten come at a time when the Pentagon has had an unusual amount of turmoil in its senior ranks, with only an acting defense secretary for the past six months. … It's unclear when, or if, Hyten's confirmation hearing will move forward."

-- The White House picked Adm. Mike Gilday as the next chief of naval operations. The Wall Street Journal's Gordon Lubold and Nancy A. Youssef report: "In recommending a three-star admiral to be the next chief of naval operations, Navy Secretary Richard Spencer is picking naval operations, Navy Secretary Richard Spencer is picking a relatively junior officer to lead the service. A major corruption scandal and two ship accidents that killed 17 sailors in 2017 have shaken the culture of the Navy and deprived it of a number of leaders considered qualified. … But multiple officials said Adm. Gilday was a viable pick and is well-regarded by other service chiefs and inside the Navy. His background in cybersecurity—he had served as the commander of U.S. Fleet Cyber Command and director of operations for U.S. Cyber Command—had persuaded top Navy officials to recommend him to be the Navy's top officer."

Members of the group include its leader, Harvard Law School Professor Mary Ann Glendon, 'a former U.S. ambassador to the Vatican [and] an outspoken opponent of abortion [who] has spoken out against same-sex marriage on several occasions over the past two decades'; Peter Berkowitz, "who in 2003 called the Supreme Court ruling that decriminalized homosexuality 'dangerous'; Shaykh Hamza Yusuf Hanson, who said in 2011 that same-sex marriage is a sign of the 'end times'; [and] Meir Soloveichik, who in 2012 wrote in a blurb that an anti-LGBTQ book was an 'influential defense of marriage as it has been historically and rightly understood.'"

2020 WATCH:

-- Former vice president Joe Biden took advantage of a loophole in the tax code that Barack Obama tried to plug. The Wall Street Journal's Richard Rubin reports: "Mr. Biden and his wife, Dr. Jill Biden, routed their book and speech income through S corporations, according to tax returns the couple released this week. They paid income taxes on those profits, but the strategy let the couple avoid the 3.8% self-employment tax they would have paid had they been compensated directly instead of through the S corporations. The tax savings were as much as $500,000, compared to what the Bidens would have owed if paid directly or if the Obama proposal had become law."

The cause that propelled me into a Democratic primary and a quest to become the youngest member of Congress was my fierce opposition to the Vietnam War. But the issue that upended my congressional race is one that unexpectedly has contemporary relevance — federal court-ordered busing."

-- In an op-ed for The Post, Bernie Sanders writes that racial equality can be met by attacking the wealth gap: "Example after example shows that corporate exploitation disproportionately affects black people. Black Americans lost 40 percent of their wealth in the 2009 housing crisis, and were the target of predatory lenders. Black Americans are more likely than white Americans to be paid a minimum wage salary, and black Americans stand to benefit disproportionately from a $15 an hour federal minimum wage. … The racial wealth gap lingers in part because the politicians who could close it are funded by the very corporate donors who continue to benefit from it. Gross inequality persists largely unchallenged despite the United States' massive wealth because myths about racial inferiority and the 'undeserving poor' justify the worst effects of unfettered capitalism. As long as corporations can rely on the indifference to black lives as a cover for their exploitation, they will continue to do so."

they will continue to do so.

-- Pete Buttigieg unveiled his plan to counter systemic racism on NPR this morning. "What we've learned is racist policies being replaced by neutral policies is not enough," the South Bend, Ind., mayor told Rachel Martin. "That the inequities that we have in our country were put in intentionally by generations and sometimes centuries of racist policy. They're not going to go away just because you replace a racist system with a neutral one. We need to intentionally invest in health, in home ownership, in entrepreneurship, in access to democracies, in economic empowerment. If we don't do these things, we shouldn't be surprised that racial inequity persists because inequalities compound — just like a dollar saved. A dollar stolen also compounds."

-- After a female candidate was defeated in a North Carolina GOP primary, Liz Cheney — the top-ranking woman among House Republicans — said the party needs to do more to win the votes of women. [redacted] Kane and Felicia Sonmez report: "Cheney (Wyo.), chair of the House Republican Conference, was speaking one day after state Rep. [redacted] Murphy bested pediatrician Joan Perry to win the GOP nomination for a U.S. House seat in North Carolina. Perry had received nearly $1 million in support from an outside group created to boost female Republican House candidates and was endorsed by all 13 female House Republicans. 'We have to work very hard as Republicans to convince more women to run for office, but also to convince more women to vote for us,' Cheney said at the Capitol."

-- Democrats are waging legal fights against GOP-backed voting restrictions in order to unlock the youth vote in 2020. Amy Gardner reports: "Among the states with laws that Democrats fear could hamper the youth vote in 2020 are battlegrounds including Wisconsin, Florida and New Hampshire. Republicans say the rules are meant to prevent fraud and safeguard the integrity of elections, and they deny accusations that they are trying to make it harder for young people to vote. But there is little doubt that Democrats had more to gain when young voters engaged in recent elections. Voters under 30 turned out in record numbers last fall, helping to power a liberal wave that swept Democrats into power in Congress."

THERE'S STILL A BEAR IN THE WOODS:

-- A federal appeals court dismissed a case claiming Trump's D.C. hotel violated the Constitution's emoluments provision, preventing discovery that could shine some light on the president's foreign sources of income. Ann E. Marimow and Jonathan O'Connell report: "The unanimous ruling from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit is a victory for the president in a novel case brought by the attorneys general of Maryland and the District of Columbia involving anti-corruption provisions in the emoluments clauses of the U.S. Constitution. In its ruling, the three-judge panel said the attorneys general lacked legal grounds to bring the lawsuit alleging the president is violating the Constitution when his business accepts payments from state and foreign governments. The decision ... also stops dozens of subpoenas to federal government agencies and Trump's private business entities demanding financial records related to the D.C. hotel."

All three judges on the panel were nominated to the bench by Republican presidents, including one by Trump himself. Attorneys General Brian Frosh and Karl Racine said they would consider appealing for a rehearing by a full panel of the 4th Circuit in Richmond and would not be surprised to see the case reach the Supreme Court. Trump quickly took to Twitter to celebrate the ruling, referring to the lawsuit as "ridiculous" and "a big part of the Deep State and Democrat induced Witch Hunt." (Read the full opinion here.)

A separate federal appeals court in Washington is considering a different emoluments lawsuit brought by congressional Democrats, who this week began issuing dozens of subpoenas for financial records from the president's private entities. They're pursuing a different legal theory related to standing. The lawmakers say the president is violating the Constitution because Congress is supposed to have the power to approve — or withhold — consent before the president accepts payments or benefits from foreign governments.

-- Newly uncovered audio recordings strengthen accounts by Italian reporters that Russian officials had a secret plan to fund the party of Italian

Interior Minister Matteo Salvini. The Times's [redacted] Horowitz reports: "The report intrigued analysts and liberal politicians, but its cloudy provenance and Mr. Salvini's continued denials led the questions to taper off, even as Mr. Salvini's poll numbers and full-throated support of President Vladimir V. Putin of Russia increased. But on Wednesday, BuzzFeed News published audio that seemed to confirm the Italian report's version of the meeting. The recording was the second to come to light in just months that appeared to reveal how Mr. Putin has actively sought to destabilize the European Union by boosting nationalist, populist parties like the League. … For now, in Italy, where Mr. Salvini appears immune to political injury, the audio did not seem likely to threaten his grip on power. But it did raise new questions about Russia's willingness to meddle in Europe, and the willingness of pro-Russian nationalists in the heart of Western Europe to accept that help."

-- Special counsel Bob Mueller will testify before Congress in six days, and Democrats are looking for ways to navigate land mines amid concerns over the hearing's format. CNN's Manu Raju and Jeremy Herb report: "Mueller's time before the House Judiciary and Intelligence committees will be limited, with each panel currently expected to have roughly two hours back-to-back with the former special counsel -- split equally between Democrats and Republicans. Lawmakers are beginning to raise alarms they won't have enough time to press Mueller, who has already warned he would not go beyond the findings in his report. … Behind the scenes, the preparations are

'An enormous debt of gratitude': British officials respond to Darroch's resignation

THE NEW WORLD ORDER:

-- The Trump administration fears that the new face on the China trade team signals a tougher stance. Robert Costa and David J. Lynch report: "Commerce Minister Zhong Shan, regarded by some White House officials as a hard-liner, has assumed new prominence in the talks, participating in a Tuesday teleconference alongside Chinese Vice Premier Liu He, who has headed the Chinese trade team for more than a year. … Zhong's sudden emergence comes two months after the U.S.-China trade negotiations collapsed with the Trump administration accusing Beijing of having reneged on a preliminary agreement. … U.S. officials and Trump allies have privately expressed concern this week that the Chinese are digging in and avoiding firm commitments."

-- The U.S.-U.K. "special relationship" is in tatters now that the British ambassador, Kim Darroch, has resigned. Dan Balz analyzes the situation: Darroch's resignation "represents a new low point in recent relations between the two countries. … Darroch's resignation has caused an understandable uproar in Britain. Ahead of his decision to resign, he received strong support from outgoing Prime Minister Theresa May. … But what Darroch lacked, in the face of the attacks from Trump, was a strong endorsement from the man now favored to succeed May at No. 10 Downing Street, Boris Johnson. … Nigel Sheinwald, a former British ambassador to the United States, called Trump's treatment of Darroch 'vindictive and undignified,' adding that the president has repeatedly taken advantage of a government weakened by the Brexit stalemate."

report: "Darroch's resignation has already prompted discussions in embassies about scaling back access to diplomatic cables and moderating the tone of assessments about the Trump administration's handling of global and domestic affairs. Powerful colleagues and friends of Darroch have also sought to keep their expressions of solidarity for the envoy private to avoid angering the U.S. president, though many admitted to sending similarly disparaging cables to their own capitals. … In Washington, foreign diplomats are tasked with keeping a polite and respectful exterior while passing along classified cables that reveal a candid, warts-and-all view of the U.S. government. Senior British officials have said that job has become much harder in the aftermath of Darroch's resignation."

-- France adopted a controversial tax on revenue from tech giants like Facebook and Google despite U.S. disapproval. James McAuley reports: "Amid escalating trade tensions, the Trump administration announced on Wednesday a formal investigation into whether the tax unfairly discriminates against U.S. businesses. The measure would levy a 3 percent tax on certain revenue that major tech companies earn in France. Despite U.S. pressure, French officials stood firm on Thursday, brushing off the criticism."

MORE ON THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- A new accuser, [redacted], came forward with her story: that Epstein raped her when she was 15 after she was recruited outside her high school to work for

she was recruited outside her high school to work for him. NBC News's Sarah Fitzpatrick, Savannah Guthrie and Rich Schapiro report: "Araoz says she was 14 years old when a young woman approached her outside her New York City high school in the fall of 2001. The woman was friendly and curious, asking Araoz personal questions about her family, her upbringing, their finances. Soon she began talking to Araoz about a man she knew who was kind and wealthy and lived nearby. … Araoz would return to [Epstein's mansion] regularly over the next year, she said, manipulated into stripping down to her panties and giving Epstein massages that ended with him pleasuring himself to completion and her leaving with $300. In the fall of 2002, Epstein pressured her to do more, Araoz said. He told her to remove her panties. Then he grabbed her 15-year-old body. 'He raped me, forcefully raped me,' Araoz [said]. 'He knew exactly what he was doing.' 'I was terrified, and I was telling him to stop. 'Please stop,' Araoz, now 32, added. Epstein, Araoz said, ignored her pleas. She never returned to his home after that day and her life spiraled downward over the next several years as a result of the trauma, she said."

-- Epstein's new indictment has renewed scrutiny of Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus R. Vance Jr.'s treatment of him. The Times's Jan Ransom reports: "During a hearing in 2011, a seasoned sex-crimes prosecutor from Mr. Vance's office argued forcefully in court that Mr. Epstein, who had been convicted in Florida of soliciting an underage prostitute, should not be registered as a top-level sex offender in New York. Instead, the prosecutor, Jennifer Gaffney, asked a judge to reduce Mr.

prosecutor, Jennifer Gaffney, asked a judge to reduce Mr. Epstein's sex-offender status to the lowest possible classification, which would have limited the personal information available to the public, and would have kept him from being listed on a registry of sex offenders for life. … Mr. Vance has said the request was a mistake and had been made by Ms. Gaffney without his knowledge. Still, his office's decision to take Mr. Epstein's side in the hearing drew renewed criticism this week."

-- Acosta has advocated a budget that would cut funding for a government agency that fights child sex trafficking by 80 percent. The Guardian's Ed Pilkington reports: "Acosta's plan to slash funding of a critical federal agency in the fight against the sexual exploitation of children is contained in his financial plans for the Department of Labor for fiscal year 2020. In it, he proposes decimating the resources of a section of his own department known as the International Labor Affairs Bureau (ILAB). The bureau's budget would fall from $68m last year to just $18.5m. The proposed reduction is so drastic that experts say it would effectively kill off many federal efforts to curb sex trafficking and put the lives of large numbers of children at risk."

-- Federal prosecutors once described Epstein as a "man of nearly infinite means." That may be an illusion. The Times's James B. Stewart, Matthew Goldstein, Kate Kelly and David Enrich report: "Even after his 2008 guilty plea in a prostitution case in Florida, he promoted himself as a financial wizard who used arcane mathematical models. … At his peak in the early 2000s, a magazine profile models … At his peak in the early 2000s, a magazine profile said he employed 150 people, some working out of the historic Villard Houses on Madison Avenue. Much of that appears to be an illusion, and there is little evidence that Mr. Epstein is a billionaire. Mr. Epstein's wealth may have depended less on his math acumen than his connections to two men — Steven J. Hoffenberg, a onetime owner of The New York Post and a notorious fraudster later convicted of running a $460 million Ponzi scheme, and Leslie H. Wexner, the billionaire founder of retail chains including The Limited and the chief executive of the company that owns Victoria's Secret."

-- In the Caribbean island of St. [redacted], whispers and suspicion about Epstein abound. From the AP's Dánica Coto: "The 66-year-old billionaire bought Little St. James Island off this U.S. Caribbean territory more than two decades ago and began to transform it — clearing the native vegetation, ringing the property with towering palm trees and planting two massive U.S. flags on either end. … 'Everybody called it 'Pedophile Island,' said Kevin Goodrich, who is from St. [redacted] and operates boat charters. 'It's our dark corner.' Many people who worked for Epstein told The Associated Press this week that they had signed long non-disclosure agreements, and refused to talk. … [A] man said he saw a handful of young women when he was on Epstein's property but he believed they were older than 18. 'When he was there, it was keep to yourself and do your thing,' the man recalled."

-- The New York Police Department let Epstein skip judge-ordered check-ins. Epstein reportedly never once checked in with city police officers in the eight-plus years since a judge ordered him to do so every 90 days. The NYPD said Epstein wasn't required to check in in New York because he claims his primary residence is his private island in the U.S. Virgin Islands. (New York Post)

-- An investigation found that former Virginia governor Doug Wilder kissed a 20-year-old Virginia Commonwealth University student against her will. Jenna Portnoy reports: "The investigation found Wilder was responsible for 'non-consensual sexual contact' but cleared him of three other allegations made by the woman: sexual exploitation, sex- or gender-based discrimination, and retaliation. The student, Sydney Black, filed a formal complaint with VCU in December 2018, and several months later the university hired an attorney who specializes in federal civil rights law. Black, who is now 22, has said Wilder, 88, kissed her and made other overtures, including suggestions that she could live at his house and accompany him on foreign travel. He also offered to pay for law school, she said."

-- Virginia Lt. Gov. Justin Fairfax's attorney said a witness was present during Fairfax's sexual encounter with Meredith Watson at Duke University in 2000 and can corroborate that it was consensual. Gregory S. Schneider and Laura Vozzella report: "Barry J. Pollack has written to a prosecutor in Durham, N.C., to say that the witness — whom he did not identify — backs up Fairfax's claim that Watson's charge against him is 'demonstrably false.' Watson has said Fairfax sexually assaulted her when they were undergraduates at Duke. She is one of two women to make that accusation against Fairfax. He denies both claims. … Watson's attorney, Nancy Erika Smith, said Fairfax was changing his story, 'and now for the first time, he implicates his buddy as a participant.' She renewed her call for a public hearing on the matter before state legislators."

NEWS YOU CAN USE IF YOU LIVE IN D.C.:

-- Thunderstorms are likely today as we continue breathing this muggy air. The Capital Weather Gang forecasts: "Heat and high humidity serve to fuel some strong to severe storms this afternoon and evening. Gov. Boyd K. Rutherford and state Commerce Secretary Kelly M. Schulz. … Hogan, asked in December about the party's down-ballot losses and how it would affect the search for his successor, said he did not 'want to get into picking potential replacements quite yet.' But he noted that there were several good possibilities. 'I have an incredible lieutenant governor who could be the first black governor in the state history,' he said of Rutherford. 'We have [Barry Glassman], a terrific county executive in Harford County.'"

'Transit is really in crisis,' said Cheryl Cort, policy director at the Coalition for Smarter Growth, which co-sponsored the report along with the MetroHero commute app. 'We have been losing riders for quite a few years, and the speed and reliability of the bus just continues to decline.' Metrobus's grade was pulled down by some of its biggest — and well-known — problems: Buses are commonly stuck in traffic gridlock, they aren't properly spaced, and they are chronically late."

In the era of no regrets, Acosta and Pelosi are not sorry

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Joanie Greve and Mariana Alfaro

THE BIG IDEA: Sorry, not sorry. We've entered an era of no regrets.

"I have no regrets about anything," Speaker Nancy Pelosi told reporters yesterday as she left a closed-door meeting of the House Democratic caucus. "Regrets is not what I do."

Trying to save his job, embattled Labor Secretary [redacted] Acosta didn't just defend – but touted – a 2008 plea deal he negotiated with wealthy financier Jeffrey Epstein that has been heavily criticized as lenient. A federal judge ruled earlier this year that Acosta's office violated the rights of Epstein's victims by failing to notify them of the agreement not to bring federal charges. The Justice Department has been probing Acosta's handling of the case. But the secretary declined to apologize to the victims when offered multiple opportunities during his afternoon news conference.

Asked last month if he regrets seeking deferments for “bone spurs” to avoid being drafted to serve in Vietnam, Trump said no. “Well, I was never a fan of that war, I’ll be honest with you. I thought it was a terrible war. I thought it was very far away. At that time, nobody had ever heard of the country,” the president told Piers Morgan. “I think I make up for it right now. I think I’m making up for it rapidly because we’re rebuilding our military at a level it’s never seen before.”

President Trump greets Sarah Sanders and Kellyanne Conway after they spoke at a campaign rally last November in Fort Wayne, Ind. (Michael Conroy/AP)

Trump's coterie has followed his example, and the no-apologies ethos has become somewhat infectious in these polarized and tribal times. Counselor to the president Kellyanne Conway has said she does not care that she's been accused of violating the Hatch Act by using her official position to do things like tout Ivanka Trump's clothing line or espouse partisan statements. "Blah, blah, blah," she quipped to a reporter. "Let me know when the jail sentence starts," she quipped to a reporter.

During an exit interview last month with NBC News, Sarah Sanders was asked whether she had any regrets about how she did her job. "No, I don't," she said. Asked if she would have done anything differently, she elaborated: "Certainly, there are things. I mean, I'll spend some time thinking about what those are." But she couldn't think of any right then, she said.

When Sanders announced she was going home to Arkansas, the owner of the Virginia restaurant who refused to serve food to Sanders – because of the Trump administration's family separation policy – wrote an op-ed saying she'd do the same thing again, despite all the death threats and the impact on her business. "Resistance is not futile," wrote [redacted] Wilkinson, the owner of the Red Hen in Lexington.

Rep. Hakeem Jeffries (D-N.Y.), the chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, refused to apologize in January for describing Trump as "the grand wizard of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue," a Ku Klux Klan reference, and suggesting that the president is a nephew of Jim Crow. "I don't regret the use of the language, but I do think we need to move forward," Jeffries told Chuck Todd on NBC. "Listen, it's colorful language," the congressman added, as if that was somehow exculpatory.

Biden apologizes for comments on working with segregationists

-- To be sure, several of the Democratic presidential candidates have apologized as they try to appeal to a party that's been lurching leftward. Elizabeth Warren said "I am sorry" for identifying herself as a Native American in the past and for taking a DNA test to try to prove her ancestry. When Kirsten Gillibrand launched her campaign around the same time, she apologized for her past positions on immigration and guns. Tulsi Gabbard said she was "deeply sorry" for anti-gay comments she made a few years ago but not sorry for meeting with Bashar al-Assad, the man known as the butcher of Damascus, in Syria.

Joe Biden expressed regret last weekend in South Carolina for his comments about working with segregationists in the Senate. "Was I wrong a few weeks ago to somehow give the impression to people that I was praising those men, who I successfully opposed time and again? Yes, I was," the former vice president said. "I regret it. I'm sorry for any of the pain or misconception I may have caused anybody. But should that misstep define 50 years of my record fighting for civil rights and racial justice in this country? I hope not. I don't think so."

Virginia Gov. Ralph Northam apologized for appearing in blackface but refused to resign and then claimed it wasn't actually him in the 1984 blackface photo on his medical school yearbook page. The commonwealth's attorney general, Mark Herring, called on Northam to resign. When it came out a few days later that Herring, also a Democrat, had appeared in blackface when he went to a party as a rapper, Herring apologized but also declined to resign. "From the bottom of my heart, I am deeply, deeply sorry," Herring said.

PELOSI VS. AOC:

-- When Pelosi said, "Regrets is not what I do," the speaker was referring to comments she made about "the Squad," as a quartet of liberal freshman women who have been causing her headaches call themselves. Pelosi told Maureen Dowd for a column that ran in last Sunday's New York Times that the upstarts have "their Twitter world" but lack much influence inside the Democratic caucus. "They're four people and that's how many votes they got," she said.

The Squad – consisting of Omar, Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez (N.Y.), Rashida Tlaib (Mich.) and Ayanna Pressley (Mass.) – replied by calling Pelosi a bully. "The four are struggling with the speaker's moves to isolate them in recent weeks," Rachael Bade and Mike DeBonis report. "Pelosi has made at least half a dozen remarks dismissing the group or their far-left proposals on the environment and health care. More recently she scorned their lonely opposition to the party's emergency border bill last month."

Ocasio-Cortez said in an interview with The Washington Post: "When these comments first started, I kind of thought that she was keeping the progressive flank at more of an arm's distance in order to protect more moderate members, which I understood. But the persistent singling out … it got to a point where it was just outright disrespectful … the explicit singling out of newly elected women of color."

"Ocasio-Cortez's relationship with the speaker has been chilly from the start," per Rachael and Mike. "After she upset Rep. Joseph Crowley (N.Y.) in the Democratic primary, Pelosi moved to immediately downplay her victory, saying it was a one-off event. Still, Pelosi tried to create a bridge with the New Yorker: During their first face-to-face meeting just before the midterm elections, Pelosi spent nearly two hours trying to convince the liberal that she was just like her, touting her background. It was around that time that Ocasio-Cortez agreed to not only back Pelosi as speaker but also vocally defend her against rebels trying to keep her from the gavel. Now, half a year later, virtually all communication between the two women has ceased.

"The two have not spoken one-on-one since February when Ocasio-Cortez declined Pelosi's personal request that she join her select committee on climate change. Just days after, during a private Progressive Caucus meeting, Pelosi singled out Ocasio-Cortez in front of her colleagues, calling her out for rejecting the select committee offer. Ocasio-Cortez had publicly criticized leadership for refusing to give the committee the power to directly draft legislation. Since then, Pelosi has made several dismissive remarks about Ocasio-Cortez, calling her Green New Deal 'the Green Dream or whatever,' and suggesting that a 'glass of water' running as a Democrat could win in districts as liberal as hers. 'The third and fourth time [she insulted me], it was like, ''This is unnecessary, but I'm not going to pick a fight over it. Whatever, I'll be the punching bag if that's what they want me to be,'" Ocasio-Cortez said. But now people are telling the freshman to talk to Pelosi. She doesn't want to, however."

-- New Yorker editor David Remnick interviewed AOC after she returned from her trip to the border last week. The full transcript is interesting, but her suggestion that Biden might be too old is generating the most buzz: "I think age gets used as a proxy for capacity. And so I think there are some folks that are of a certain age where you can kind of question their capacity," she said. "I think Donald Trump is a perfect example. I don't think he's all there. … I think Joe Biden, his performance on the stage kind of raised some questions with respect to that. But I don't want to say, just because someone is seventy-nine, they can't or shouldn't run for President. I don't want to use those proxies, a number as a proxy for capacity. I think you have to assess a person's capacity on a case-by-case basis." For example, Ocasio-Cortez said that Bernie Sanders, whom she worked for in 2016, is not too old.

-- More drama on the Hill that should be on your radar: "The White House is pushing congressional leaders to strike a spending deal and increase the debt limit in the next two or three weeks, jolted by a recent report that found the Treasury Department was running out of cash much faster than previously forecasted," Damian Paletta and Erica Werner report. "But the talks have bogged down amid acrimony between Democrats and the White House, and now Washington's leaders run the risk of a fiscal pileup that could also imperil Trump's effort to update the North American Free Trade Agreement. White House officials have said the debt ceiling must be raised by early September to ensure the government can pay its bills. And spending on many federal programs expires at the end of September, requiring a separate deal to prevent a government shutdown. …

"Pelosi has also shown little regard for Trump's top deputies. She has been unsparing in her public criticisms of [acting chief of staff Mick] Mulvaney. At one point during a budget negotiation in May, Pelosi snubbed acting budget director Russell Vought when he spoke up to reiterate a point. Turning to Vought, Pelosi asked, 'What was your name again, dear?'"

-- Programming note: I am sad to report that this is Joanie Greve's final edition as a researcher for The Daily 202. Joanie has been indispensable for the past 26 months, pulling hundreds of arduous overnight shifts to relentlessly seek out the highest-quality and most up-to-date information from around the globe to ensure that this newsletter is as informative and comprehensive as possible every day. She's also written several memorable Big Ideas about delicate issues from abortion to race and redistricting. Joanie has landed a great job as a political reporter for The Guardian of London, based in its Washington bureau, where she'll help cover the 2020 presidential campaign. ## WHILE YOU WERE IN YOUR MORNING MEETINGS:

The British navy vessel HMS Montrose escorts another ship during a mission to remove chemical weapons from Syria off the coast of Cyprus in 2014. (British Ministry of Defense/AP)

Dubai: "A British navy ship, HMS Montrose, 'was forced to position herself between the Iranian vessels and British Heritage and issue to verbal warnings to the Iranian vessels, which then turned away,' the British government said in a statement. … Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps denied Thursday that it was involved in challenging the British tanker, saying in a statement carried by the Fars news agency that there had been no confrontations with foreign vessels in the past 24 hours. But Iran had previously warned Britain of 'consequences' for seizing an Iranian supertanker in the Mediterranean last week, a move it denounced as 'an act of piracy.' That vessel was carrying oil to Syria in violation of European Union sanctions, Britain said."

-- Amateur hour: Amy McGrath, the Kentucky Democratic Senate candidate who is challenging Mitch McConnell, flip-flopped on whether she would have voted to confirm Brett Kavanaugh. John Wagner and Colby Itkowitz report: "First, during a wide-ranging interview with Louisville's Courier-Journal, McGrath said that while she found Christine Blasey Ford, the woman who alleged Kavanaugh sexually assaulted her in high school, credible, she still probably would have voted to confirm Kavanaugh. But hours later, McGrath said she had changed her mind and actually would not have supported him. 'I was asked earlier today about Judge Brett Kavanaugh and I answered based upon his qualifications to be on the Supreme Court,' McGrath tweeted. 'But upon further reflection and further understanding of his record, I would have voted no.'"

New Orleans suffers flash flooding as potential hurricane approaches

GET SMART FAST:

1. The season's first hurricane, to be named Barry, is expected to strike the coast of Louisiana or Texas on Saturday. Louisiana Gov. John Bel Edwards (D) has already declared a state of emergency and warned that "this is going to be a Louisiana event with coastal flooding and heavy rainfall potentially impacting every part of the state. No one should take this storm lightly." (Brian McNoldy and [redacted] Samenow)
2. Trump's company has canceled a golf tournament that a Miami-area strip club planned to hold at his Doral, Fla., resort this weekend. The president's business said it canceled Shadow Cabaret's tournament after the nonprofit named as the beneficiary of the event — Miami Allstars Foundation — dropped out Wednesday in response to reporting by The Washington Post. (David A. Fahrenthold)
3. This has been a nightmare summer for American Airlines. Cancellations have skyrocketed. Last month, the world's largest airline canceled 4 percent of its schedule, or more than 7,500 domestic and international flights. That cancellation rate was 18 times that of Delta. (Wall Street Journal)
4. A lawsuit filed by D.C.'s attorney general alleges that Marriott has been misleading guests about hotel room prices for more than a decade, earning millions in ill-gotten profits as a result. The filing claims the hotel chain hides the true costs of its rooms from customers shopping online, obscuring extra fees shown only as the consumer selects a room and provides a credit card to reserve it. (Cortlynn Stark and Hannah Denham)
5. PG&E knew for years that hundreds of miles of its high-voltage power lines could spark wildfires, and it didn't fix them. New documents show that the utility company estimated in 2017 that its transmission towers had gone past their mean life expectancy of 65 years. The failure of a century-old transmission line sparked the wildfire that killed 85 people and destroyed the California town of

Paradise. (Wall Street Journal)

6. A Connecticut Supreme Court agreed to hear an appeal of a lower court's decision sanctioning broadcaster [redacted] Jones, who spread conspiracy theories about the families whose relatives were killed in the Sandy Hook shooting. An attorney for Jones asked the court to review Superior Court Judge Barbara Bellis's decision to sanction Jones, saying the move was an "obscene mockery of core constitutional values" because the First Amendment has long protected offensive speech. (Susan Svrluga)

7. U.S. stocks hit record highs after Federal Reserve Chair Jay Powell said that an interest rate cut is likely at the end of this month. Powell testified before Congress that a cut was likely given Trump's trade war and slowing growth abroad, comments that came hours before the S&P 500 index crossed 3,000 for the first time. (Heather Long)

8. A Florida police officer allegedly planted meth on random drivers. In one case, an innocent man lost custody of his daughter because of it. Police say the officer, Zachary Wester, planted meth while feigning "searches." He's been charged with 52 counts of racketeering, false imprisonment, misconduct and evidence fabrication, among other charges. (Meagan Flynn)

9. A new Nature article argued that humans first reached Europe 210,000 years ago, about 160,000 years earlier than previously estimated. But some paleoanthropologists warned the findings, based off a human skull found in Greece in the 1970s, could be a "one-off" and should be viewed skeptically until additional examples are uncovered. (Joel Achenbach)

10. Police discovered that a missing man was eaten by his dogs. It is unclear whether the 18 large dogs killed the 57-year-old Texas man or devoured him after he died of a "serious medical condition." (Hannah Knowles)

THE IMMIGRATION WARS:

-- ICE agents are preparing to arrest thousands of immigrants during raids that are scheduled to begin Sunday. The Times's Caitlin Dickerson and Zolan Kanno Youngs report: The raids "will include 'collateral' deportations, according to the officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because of the preliminary stage of the operation. In those deportations, the authorities might detain immigrants who happened to be on the scene, even though they were not targets of the raids. … The officials said ICE agents were targeting at least 2,000 immigrants who have been ordered deported — some as a result of their failure to appear in court — but who remain in the country illegally. The operation is expected to take place in at least 10 major cities. The families being targeted crossed the border recently: The Trump administration expedited their immigration proceedings last fall. In February, many of those immigrants were given notice to report to an ICE office and leave the United States, the homeland security officials said."

-- A second federal judge blocked the Justice Department's attempt to swap out its attorneys in the census case. Matt Zapotosky reports: "U.S. District Judge George J. Hazel in Maryland wrote in a six-page order that he shared the concerns of a federal judge in New York who similarly blocked the Justice Department maneuver this week, but noted that in his district, unlike the other judge's, attorneys do not have to provide 'satisfactory reasons for withdrawal.' He wrote he was concerned that 'a shift in counsel at this late stage may be disruptive to an already complicated and expedited case.'"

efforts to add the citizenship question to the census. (John Wagner)

-- "I hate this mission," said an operator of a new emergency shelter for migrant children. Neena Satija reports: "Kevin Dinnin, head of the San Antonio-based nonprofit BCFS Health and Human Services, said on Wednesday in [a] remote Texas town, 'The only reason we do it is to keep the kids out of the Border Patrol jail cells.' The Carrizo Springs shelter opened on June 30 to help alleviate cramped conditions in Border Patrol processing facilities, where people were recently seen sleeping head to toe on concrete floors, often lacking access to hot meals, showers and proper medical care. The shelter will be able to hold up to 1,300 teenage children, though it currently has just over 200. … The facility is a scattering of dormitory buildings, trailers and tents that were once housing for oil field workers. Children's artwork — drawings of cartoon characters, flags and paper flowers — decorated the walls of their sleeping quarters. Lighted soccer fields allow children to play at night and avoid the harsh summer heat."

-- A Guatemalan woman who alleges her daughter died of an infection after "neglect and mistreatment" in a U.S. detention center told a House panel she begged for help to no avail. Maria Sacchetti reports: "'My baby grew sicker every day,' Yazmin Juárez, the mother of 19-month-old Mariee, said during an emotional hearing. 'She was vomiting constantly. … I saw her suffer in a way you can't imagine.' … The afternoon hearing before the House Oversight and Government Reform Subcommittee on Civil Rights and Civil Liberties — 'Kids in Cages: Inhumane Treatment at the Border' — reflected the incendiary tensions between Democrats and the White House over the influx of families and unaccompanied minors at the border. Among the witnesses were lawyers and advocates who described squalid, cramped conditions at U.S. border facilities. … Rep. Chip Roy (Tex.), the subcommittee's top Republican, offered his condolences to Juárez and said in Spanish that 'there are no words.' But he accused Democrats of attempting to

THE DOMESTIC AGENDA:

-- The FBI arrested two former senior officials who served in the administration of Puerto Rico Gov. Ricardo Rosselló in connection with a corruption scandal that is prompting calls for the governor’s ouster. [redacted] Stein reports: “The arrests also spurred concerns on Capitol Hill about the billions of dollars in aid that Congress has approved for the island. The federal indictment says the former officials illegally directed federal funding to politically connected contractors. The arrests come about a month after Congress approved a controversial disaster aid bill that earmarked additional funding for Puerto Rico’s recovery from Hurricane Maria in 2017, which were tied up in part because President Trump called island officials ‘incompetent or corrupt.’ … Six people were charged in the 32-count indictment. They include Julia Keleher, who served as Puerto Rico’s education secretary until April; and Ángela Ávila-Marrero, who was the executive director of the Puerto Rico Health Insurance Administration until late June. …

“Prosecutors said Rosselló was not involved in the investigation, according to the Associated Press. The governor said on Twitter he had cut short a vacation to return to the island. … On Twitter, the governor said his administration would fight corruption in all its forms and that nobody is above the law. The island’s allies fear the arrests will give Trump greater justification for curtailing badly needed aid to the island.”

-- Trump’s Fourth of July event — and the weekend protests that surrounded it — bankrupted D.C.’s security fund, Mayor Muriel E.

Bowser said. Peter Jamison and Juliet Eilperin report: "Bowser (D) warned that the fund has been depleted and is estimated to be running a $6 million deficit when the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30. The mayor also noted that the account was never reimbursed for $7.3 million in expenses from Trump's 2017 inauguration. Bowser requested that the White House fully reimburse the fund. Without that money, city officials say, Washingtonians will be put in the unprecedented position of funding federal security needs with local tax dollars."

-- A State Department intelligence official resigned after the White House blocked him from submitting written congressional testimony about climate change. Juliet Eilperin reports: "Rod Schoonover — who worked in the Bureau of Intelligence and Research's Office of the Geographer and Global Issues — spoke before the House Intelligence Committee on June 5 about the security risks the United States faces because of climate change. But White House officials would not let him submit the bureau's written statement that climate impacts could be 'possibly catastrophic,' after the State Department refused to cut references to federal scientific findings on climate change. Individuals familiar with the matter, who asked for anonymity to speak frankly, said Schoonover is leaving voluntarily. But the incident that led to his departure underscores the extent to which climate science has become contested terrain under the current administration."

-- A senior military officer accused the Air Force general tapped as the next vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of sexual misconduct. From the AP's Lolita C. Baldor: "The officer told The Associated Press that Gen. John Hyten subjected her to a series of unwanted sexual advances by kissing, hugging and rubbing up against her in 2017 while she was one of his aides. … The Air Force investigated the woman's allegations, which she reported days after Hyten's nomination was announced in April, and found there was insufficient evidence to charge the general or recommend any administrative punishment. The alleged victim remains in the military but has moved to a different job. … The accusations against Hyten come at a time when the Pentagon has had an unusual amount of turmoil in its senior ranks, with only an acting defense secretary for the past six months. … It's unclear when, or if, Hyten's confirmation hearing will move forward."

-- The White House picked Adm. Mike Gilday as the next chief of naval operations. The Wall Street Journal's Gordon Lubold and Nancy A. Youssef report: "In recommending a three-star admiral to be the next chief of naval operations, Navy Secretary Richard Spencer is picking a relatively junior officer to lead the service. A major corruption scandal and two ship accidents that killed 17 sailors in 2017 have shaken the culture of the Navy and deprived it of a number of leaders considered qualified. … But multiple officials said Adm. Gilday was a viable pick and is well-regarded by other service chiefs and inside the Navy. His background in cybersecurity—he had served as the commander of U.S. Fleet Cyber Command and director of operations for U.S. Cyber Command—had persuaded top Navy officials to recommend him to be the Navy's top officer."

-- The Trump administration hasn't briefed Congress on its new rules for cyberattacks, according to lawmakers. The Wall Street Journal's Dustin Volz reports: "In a bipartisan letter addressed to Mr. Trump in February, the leaders of the House Armed Services Committee said Congress hadn't been able to see the directive, known as National Security Presidential Memorandum 13, 'and other related documents on cyber operations' despite the panel's requests. Lacking that visibility had impeded the committee's ability to consider the policy implications of military cyber operations, the letter said."

-- The Trump administration's new Commission on Unalienable

Rights has sparked alarm among LGBTQ advocates who say it is full of people with a history of "fighting against LGBTQ progress." NBC News's Tim Fitzsimons reports: "Critics of the new commission … claim it is a 'farce' designed to undermine LGBTQ and abortion rights." Members of the group include its leader, Harvard Law School Professor Mary Ann Glendon, 'a former U.S. ambassador to the Vatican [and] an outspoken opponent of abortion [who] has spoken out against same-sex marriage on several occasions over the past two decades'; Peter Berkowitz, "who in 2003 called the Supreme Court ruling that decriminalized homosexuality 'dangerous'; Shaykh Hamza Yusuf Hanson, who said in 2011 that same-sex marriage is a sign of the 'end times'; [and] Meir Soloveichik, who in 2012 wrote in a blurb that an anti-LGBTQ book was an 'influential defense of marriage as it has been historically and rightly understood.'"

2020 WATCH:

-- Former vice president Joe Biden took advantage of a loophole in the tax code that Barack Obama tried to plug. The Wall Street Journal's Richard Rubin reports: "Mr. Biden and his wife, Dr. Jill Biden, routed their book and speech income through S corporations, according to tax returns the couple released this week. They paid income taxes on those profits, but the strategy let the couple avoid the 3.8% self-employment tax they would have paid had they been compensated directly instead of through the S corporations. The tax savings were as much as $500,000, compared to what the Bidens would have owed if paid directly or if the Obama proposal had become law."

-- "Unlike Joe Biden, I was a pro-busing Democrat in 1972," by Walter Shapiro in Roll Call: "A long time ago — in fact, the same year that Joe Biden ran for the Senate as a precocious 29-year-old — I sought a Michigan congressional seat as an even more precocious 25-year-old. The cause that propelled me into a Democratic primary and a quest to become the youngest member of Congress was my fierce opposition to the Vietnam War. But the issue that upended my congressional race is one that unexpectedly has contemporary relevance — federal court-ordered busing."

-- In an op-ed for The Post, Bernie Sanders writes that racial equality can be met by attacking the wealth gap: "Example after example shows that corporate exploitation disproportionately affects black people. Black Americans lost 40 percent of their wealth in the 2009 housing crisis, and were the target of predatory lenders. Black Americans are more likely than white Americans to be paid a minimum wage salary, and black Americans stand to benefit disproportionately from a $15 an hour federal minimum wage. … The racial wealth gap lingers in part because the politicians who could close it are funded by the very corporate donors who continue to benefit from it. Gross inequality persists largely unchallenged despite the United States' massive wealth because myths about racial inferiority and the 'undeserving poor' justify the worst effects of unfettered capitalism. As long as corporations can rely on the indifference to black lives as a cover for their exploitation, they will continue to do so."

-- Pete Buttigieg unveiled his plan to counter systemic racism on NPR this morning. "What we've learned is racist policies being replaced by neutral policies is not enough," the South Bend, Ind., mayor told Rachel Martin. "That the inequities that we have in our country were put in intentionally by generations and sometimes centuries of racist policy. They're not going to go away just because you replace a racist system with a neutral one. We need to intentionally invest in health, in home ownership, in entrepreneurship, in access to democracies, in economic empowerment. If we don't do these things, we shouldn't be surprised that racial inequity persists because inequalities compound — just like a dollar saved. A dollar stolen also compounds."

-- After a female candidate was defeated in a North Carolina GOP primary, Liz Cheney — the top-ranking woman among House Republicans — said the party needs to do more to win the votes of women. [redacted] Kane and Felicia Sonmez report: "Cheney (Wyo.), chair of the House Republican Conference, was speaking one day after state Rep. [redacted] Murphy bested pediatrician Joan Perry to win the GOP nomination for a U.S. House seat in North Carolina. Perry had received nearly $1 million in support from an outside group created to boost female Republican House candidates and was endorsed by all 13 female House Republicans. 'We have to work very hard as Republicans to convince more women to run for office, but also to convince more women to vote for us,' Cheney said at the Capitol."

-- Democrats are waging legal fights against GOP-backed voting restrictions in order to unlock the youth vote in 2020. Amy Gardner reports: "Among the states with laws that Democrats fear could hamper the youth vote in 2020 are battlegrounds including Wisconsin, Florida and New Hampshire. Republicans say the rules are meant to prevent fraud and safeguard the integrity of elections, and they deny accusations that they are trying to make it harder for young people to vote. But there is little doubt that Democrats had more to gain when young voters engaged in recent elections. Voters under 30 turned out in record numbers last fall, helping to power a liberal wave that swept Democrats into power in Congress."

THERE'S STILL A BEAR IN THE WOODS:

-- A federal appeals court dismissed a case claiming Trump's D.C. hotel violated the Constitution's emoluments provision, preventing discovery that could shine some light on the president's foreign sources of income. Ann E. Marimow and Jonathan O'Connell report: "The unanimous ruling from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit is a victory for the president in a novel case brought by the attorneys general of Maryland and the District of Columbia involving anti-corruption provisions in the emoluments clauses of the U.S. Constitution. In its ruling, the three-judge panel said the attorneys general lacked legal grounds to bring the lawsuit alleging the president is violating the Constitution when his business accepts payments from state and foreign governments. The decision ... also stops dozens of subpoenas to federal government agencies and Trump's private business entities demanding financial records related to the D.C. hotel."

All three judges on the panel were nominated to the bench by Republican presidents, including one by Trump himself. Attorneys General Brian Frosh and Karl Racine said they would consider appealing for a rehearing by a full panel of the 4th Circuit in Richmond and would not be surprised to see the case reach the Supreme Court. Trump quickly took to Twitter to celebrate the ruling, referring to the lawsuit as "ridiculous" and "a big part of the Deep State and Democrat induced Witch Hunt." (Read the full opinion here.)

governments.

-- Newly uncovered audio recordings strengthen accounts by Italian reporters that Russian officials had a secret plan to fund the party of Italian Interior Minister Matteo Salvini. The Times's [redacted] Horowitz reports: "The report intrigued analysts and liberal politicians, but its cloudy provenance and Mr. Salvini's continued denials led the questions to taper off, even as Mr. Salvini's poll numbers and full-throated support of President Vladimir V. Putin of Russia increased. But on Wednesday, BuzzFeed News published audio that seemed to confirm the Italian report's version of the meeting. The recording was the second to come to light in just months that appeared to reveal how Mr. Putin has actively sought to destabilize the European Union by boosting nationalist, populist parties like the League. … For now, in Italy, where Mr. Salvini appears immune to political injury, the audio did not seem likely to threaten his grip on power. But it did raise new questions about Russia's willingness to meddle in Europe, and the willingness of pro-Russian nationalists in the heart of Western Europe to accept that help."

-- Special counsel Bob Mueller will testify before Congress in six days, and Democrats are looking for ways to navigate land mines amid concerns over the hearing's format. CNN's Manu Raju and Jeremy Herb report: "Mueller's time before the House Judiciary and Intelligence committees will be limited, with each panel currently expected to have roughly two hours back-to-back with the former special counsel -- split equally between Democrats and Republicans. Lawmakers are beginning to raise alarms they won't have enough time to press Mueller, who has already warned he would not go beyond the findings in his report. … Behind the scenes, the preparations are intensifying. Aides on both committees are furiously preparing lines of questioning to divide up among the members. Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee and on the House Intelligence Committee each have separate closed-door meetings this week to go over their strategy."

'An enormous debt of gratitude': British officials respond to Darroch's resignation

THE NEW WORLD ORDER:

-- The Trump administration fears that the new face on the China trade team signals a tougher stance. Robert Costa and David J. Lynch report: "Commerce Minister Zhong Shan, regarded by some White House officials as a hard-liner, has assumed new prominence in the talks, participating in a Tuesday teleconference alongside Chinese Vice Premier Liu He, who has headed the Chinese trade team for more than a year. … Zhong's sudden emergence comes two months after the U.S.-China trade negotiations collapsed with the Trump administration accusing Beijing of having reneged on a preliminary agreement. … U.S. officials and Trump allies have privately expressed concern this week that the Chinese are digging in and avoiding firm commitments."

-- The U.S.-U.K. "special relationship" is in tatters now that the British ambassador, Kim Darroch, has resigned. Dan Balz analyzes the situation: Darroch's resignation "represents a new low point in recent relations between the two countries. … Darroch's resignation has caused an understandable uproar in Britain. Ahead of his decision to resign, he received strong support from outgoing Prime Minister Theresa May. … But what Darroch lacked, in the face of the attacks from Trump, was a strong endorsement from the man now favored to succeed May at No. 10 Downing Street, Boris Johnson. … Nigel Sheinwald, a former British ambassador to the United States, called Trump's treatment of Darroch 'vindictive and undignified,' adding that the president has repeatedly taken advantage of a government weakened by the Brexit stalemate."

-- Diplomats in Washington are afraid of putting Trump criticisms in writing. John Hudson and Karen DeYoung report: "Darroch's resignation has already prompted discussions in embassies about scaling back access to diplomatic cables and moderating the tone of assessments about the Trump administration's handling of global and domestic affairs. Powerful colleagues and friends of Darroch have also sought to keep their expressions of solidarity for the envoy private to avoid angering the U.S. president, though many admitted to sending similarly disparaging cables to their own capitals. … In Washington, foreign diplomats are tasked with keeping a polite and respectful exterior while passing along classified cables that reveal a candid, warts-and-all view of the U.S. government. Senior British officials have said that job has become much harder in the aftermath of Darroch's resignation."

-- France adopted a controversial tax on revenue from tech giants like Facebook and Google despite U.S. disapproval. James McAuley reports: "Amid escalating trade tensions, the Trump administration announced on Wednesday a formal investigation into whether the tax unfairly discriminates against U.S. businesses. The measure would levy a 3 percent tax on certain revenue that major tech companies earn in France. Despite U.S. pressure, French officials stood firm on Thursday, brushing off the criticism."

MORE ON THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- A new accuser, [redacted], came forward with her story: that Epstein raped her when she was 15 after she was recruited outside her high school to work for him. NBC News's Sarah Fitzpatrick, Savannah Guthrie and Rich Schapiro report: "Araoz says she was 14 years old when a young woman approached her outside her New York City high school in the fall of 2001. The woman was friendly and curious, asking Araoz personal questions about her family, her upbringing, their finances. Soon she began talking to Araoz about a man she knew who was kind and wealthy and lived nearby. … Araoz would return to [Epstein's mansion] regularly over the next year, she said, manipulated into stripping down to her panties and giving Epstein massages that ended with him pleasuring himself to completion and her leaving with $300. In the fall of 2002, Epstein pressured her to do more, Araoz said. He told her to remove her panties. Then he grabbed her 15-year-old body. 'He raped me, forcefully raped me,' Araoz [said]. 'He knew exactly what he was doing.' 'I was terrified, and I was telling him to stop. 'Please stop,' Araoz, now 32, added. Epstein, Araoz said, ignored her pleas. She never returned to his home after that day and her life spiraled downward over the next several years as a result of the trauma, she said."

-- Epstein's new indictment has renewed scrutiny of Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus R. Vance Jr.'s treatment of him. The Times's Jan Ransom reports: "During a hearing in 2011, a seasoned sex-crimes prosecutor from Mr. Vance's office argued forcefully in court that Mr. Epstein, who had been convicted in Florida of soliciting an underage prostitute, should not be registered as a top-level sex offender in New York. Instead, the prosecutor, Jennifer Gaffney, asked a judge to reduce Mr. Epstein's sex-offender status to the lowest possible classification, which would have limited the personal information available to the public, and would have kept him from being listed on a registry of sex offenders for life. … Mr. Vance has said the request was a mistake and had been made by Ms. Gaffney without his knowledge. Still, his office's decision to take Mr. Epstein's side in the hearing drew renewed criticism this week."

-- Federal prosecutors once described Epstein as a "man of nearly infinite means." That may be an illusion. The Times's James B. Stewart, Matthew Goldstein, Kate Kelly and David Enrich report: "Even after his 2008 guilty plea in a prostitution case in Florida, he promoted himself as a financial wizard who used arcane mathematical models … At his peak in the early 2000s, a magazine profile said he employed 150 people, some working out of the historic Villard Houses on Madison Avenue. Much of that appears to be an illusion, and there is little evidence that Mr. Epstein is a billionaire. Mr. Epstein's wealth may have depended less on his math acumen than his connections to two men — Steven J. Hoffenberg, a onetime owner of The New York Post and a notorious fraudster later convicted of running a $460 million Ponzi scheme, and Leslie H. Wexner, the billionaire founder of retail chains including The Limited and the chief executive of the company that owns Victoria's Secret."

-- In the Caribbean island of St. [redacted], whispers and suspicion about Epstein abound. From the AP's Dánica Coto: "The 66-year-old billionaire bought Little St. James Island off this U.S. Caribbean territory more than two decades ago and began to transform it — clearing the native vegetation, ringing the property with towering palm trees and planting two massive U.S. flags on either end. … 'Everybody called it 'Pedophile Island,' said Kevin Goodrich, who is from St. [redacted] and operates boat charters. 'It's our dark corner.' Many people who worked for Epstein told The Associated Press this week that they had signed long non-disclosure agreements, and refused to talk. … [A] man said he saw a handful of young women when he was on Epstein's property but he believed they were older than 18. 'When he was there, it was keep to yourself and do your thing,' the man recalled."

-- The New York Police Department let Epstein skip judge-ordered check-ins. Epstein reportedly never once checked in with city police officers in the eight-plus years since a judge ordered him to do so every 90 days. The NYPD said Epstein wasn't required to check in in New York because he claims his primary residence is his private island in the U.S. Virgin Islands. (New York Post)

months later the university hired an attorney who specializes in federal civil rights law. Black, who is now 22, has said Wilder, 88, kissed her and made other overtures, including suggestions that she could live at his house and accompany him on foreign travel. He also offered to pay for law school, she said."

This question is NOT about suicide watch. It should be referred to CPD.

[redacted],

The reporter now says his deadline is 3 pm, so I'll need to take this to IPPA leadership as soon as you return and review this.

(1) I can not recall whether the 6 or 8 inmates watched together in an MRC's specialized mental health unit (which you referenced) are inmates on suicide watch? In other words, is my underlined phrase accurate to include in the first sentence of the draft answer below?

(2) If my first sentence in the answer is correct, then it leads me to wonder: are inmates on suicide watch being taped on a camera or instead only being watched by a staffer (and thus not on camera)? We might want to make that clear in our answer.

I think it may help to give this reporter some of the extra paragraphs on all that we do to prevent suicides since it shows we take this issue seriously and the language in the second and third paragraphs of the answer below was already vetted by IPPA leadership (after I originally consulted [redacted] in August for input).

Thanks,
Justin

Question:

In wake of the Epstein death, I understand that institutions across the bureau are designating specific officers to regularly monitor surveillance video in segregated housing units and other locations where inmates are at some risk for suicide. Is there someone who may be able to elaborate on this effort?

Proposed Response:
In some of our Medical Referral Centers' specialized mental health units, there are staff who may observe inmates on camera who are not on suicide watch but who may have a heightened risk for suicide. However, this is not a new practice. Separately, we can also share that our institutions' executive staff review video of staff performing their duties, but this is not primarily aimed at watching inmates with a suicide risk.

As background, inmates who are most at risk for suicide are placed on suicide watch, which is typically a short-term and highly restrictive intervention measure. Every Bureau of Prisons institution has one or more rooms designated specifically for housing an inmate on suicide watch. These areas are set aside as special cells, typically in the BOP's Health Services division, which allow staff to maintain a safe environment for the inmate without compromising the ability to observe and protect the inmate. This environment includes easy access to the room, privacy, unobstructed vision of the inmate at all times, and limited availability of objects, materials, or architectural features that would allow for easy self-injury. Inmates on suicide watch are evaluated daily by a psychologist and are constantly observed by either staff or inmate companions. Once an inmate is placed on suicide watch, the watch may only be terminated by a BOP psychologist following a face-to-face evaluation with the inmate.

As background, the BOP has an extensive Suicide Prevention Program that begins upon an inmate's arrival at each BOP facility. The Suicide Prevention Program at each BOP facility is administered by a Suicide Prevention Program Coordinator. The Program Coordinator, who must be a doctoral-level psychologist, ensures compliance with suicide intervention and prevention policies, which include training, identification, referral, assessment, and intervention. During the initial intake screening by medical staff, inmates complete a psychological questionnaire. Psychology Services staff are immediately notified if suicidal ideation is apparent from an inmate's responses. For more information, see BOP Program Statement 5324.08 "Suicide Prevention Program" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5324_008.pdf and BOP Program Statement 5310.17 "Psychology Services Manual" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5310_017.pdf.

Internal Notes:

[redacted] explained to me by phone today the info in the first paragraph of the answer above, whereas the language in the second and third paragraphs above are copied from an answer IPPA leadership finalized that I sent to the WA Post in August (that answer is copied below).

[redacted] explained that executive staff at institutions may be more likely to review rounds of tape of staff to be sure they're performing their duties recently. This is what I was referencing in the third sentence of the first paragraph. We may NOT want to include that in our answer (I'll ask CPD), but I included it for now just in case we want to use it.

[redacted] said SHU does not have cameras watching inmates for suicide risk, but there are cameras in SHU units focused on the range generally (not on a particular cell); it is not standard practice to have a camera in a SHU cell. Bottom line - the reporter is probably not referencing cameras in SHU. [redacted] says we don't do mental health observation in SHU unless there was a waiver and specific policy in place.

Answer sent to WA Post on 8/21/2019 (finalized by IPPA leadership after consulting [redacted]):

The safety of staff, inmates, and the public is the highest priority for the Bureau of Prisons (BOP). The BOP has an extensive Suicide Prevention Program that begins upon an inmate's arrival at each BOP facility, including pretrial facilities such as MCC New York. See BOP Program Statement 5324.08 "Suicide Prevention Program" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5324_008.pdf and BOP Program Statement 5310.17 "Psychology Services Manual" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5310_017.pdf. During the initial intake screening by medical staff, inmates complete a psychological questionnaire. Psychology Services staff are immediately notified if suicidal ideation is apparent from the responses. Further, any BOP staff member may place an inmate on suicide watch.

The Suicide Prevention Program at each BOP facility is administered by a Suicide Prevention Program Coordinator. The Program Coordinator, who must be a doctoral-level psychologist, ensures compliance with suicide intervention and prevention policies, which include training, identification, referral, assessment, and intervention. In BOP facilities, suicide watch is typically a short-term and highly restrictive intervention measure. Every institution has one or more rooms designated specifically for housing an inmate on suicide watch. These areas are set aside as special cells, typically in the BOP's Health Services division, which allow staff to maintain a safe environment for the inmate without compromising the ability to observe and protect the inmate. This environment includes easy access to the room, privacy, unobstructed vision of the inmate at all times, and limited availability of objects, materials, or architectural features that would allow for easy self-injury. Inmates on suicide watch are evaluated daily by apsychologist and are constantly observed by either staff or inmate companions. Once an inmate is placed on suicide watch, the watch may only be terminated by a BOP psychologist following a face-to-face evaluation with the inmate.

With regard to staffing levels, 15,012 correctional officers are currently working at the BOP and 1,654 correctional officer positions are vacant as of August 3, 2019. The BOP continues to work on hiring and retaining staff nationally. As you are aware, the Epstein case is currently under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Justice's Office of the Inspector General. The BOP is also conducting an After Action Review and a Suicide Reconstruction Review. The BOP will assess any additional measures which should be taken after those processes are completed.

The factors that lead an inmate from suicidal ideation to suicidal behavior are complex. Those factors include an individual's access to means (e.g., pills or razors), opportunity (e.g., privacy to implement a plan), motivation, and subjective feelings of defeat or humiliation.

The USA Today's top reporter (who's written front page stories on the BOP) is asking if BOP is "designating specific officers to regularly monitor surveillance video in segregated housing units and other locations where inmates are at some risk for suicide."

IPPA's Deputy AD [redacted] is curious if CPD & [redacted] (primarily [redacted] I'm guessing) have recommendations on what I should tell Kevin in an email response today?
We are thinking it may be best if you want to write your own statement with whatever is best to say about this subject, but we could ask this reporter below for more specific questions if you think that is needed.

Thanks,
Justin

FYI [redacted] and [redacted]

[redacted],

The reporter now says his deadline is 3 pm, so I'll need to take this to IPPA leadership as soon as you return and review this.

Here are two follow-up questions I have for you, following our call, to help finalize my draft answer below:

(1) I can not recall whether the 6 or 8 inmates watched together in an MRC's specialized mental health unit (which you referenced) are inmates on suicide watch? In other words, is my underlined phrase accurate to include in the first sentence of the draft answer below?

(2) If my first sentence in the answer is correct, then it leads me to wonder: are inmates on suicide watch being taped on a camera or instead only being watched by a staffer (and thus not on camera)? We might want to make that clear in our answer.

I think it may help to give this reporter some of the extra paragraphs on all that we do to prevent suicides since it shows we take this issue seriously and the language in the second and third paragraphs of the answer below was already vetted by IPPA leadership (after I originally consulted [redacted] in August for input).

Thanks,
Justin

Question:

In wake of the Epstein death, I understand that institutions across the bureau are designating specific officers to regularly monitor surveillance video in segregated housing units and other locations where inmates are at some risk for suicide. Is there someone who may be able to elaborate on this effort?

Proposed Response:
In some of our Medical Referral Centers' specialized mental health units, there are staff who may observe inmates on camera who are not on suicide watch but who may have a heightened risk for suicide. However, this is not a new practice. Separately, we can also share that our institutions' suicide. However, this is not a new practice. Separately, we can also share that our institutions executive staff review video of staff performing their duties, but this is not primarily aimed at watching inmates with a suicide risk.

As background, inmates who are most at risk for suicide are placed on suicide watch, which is typically a short-term and highly restrictive intervention measure. Every Bureau of Prisons institution has one or more rooms designated specifically for housing an inmate on suicide watch. These areas are set aside as special cells, typically in the BOP's Health Services division, which allow staff to maintain a safe environment for the inmate without compromising the ability to observe and protect the inmate. This environment includes easy access to the room, privacy, unobstructed vision of the inmate at all times, and limited availability of objects, materials, or architectural features that would allow for easy self-injury. Inmates on suicide watch are evaluated daily by a psychologist and are constantly observed by either staff or inmate companions. Once an inmate is placed on suicide watch, the watch may only be terminated by a BOP psychologist following a face-to-face evaluation with the inmate.

As background, the BOP has an extensive Suicide Prevention Program that begins upon an inmate's arrival at each BOP facility. The Suicide Prevention Program at each BOP facility is administered by a Suicide Prevention Program Coordinator. The Program Coordinator, who must be a doctoral-level psychologist, ensures compliance with suicide intervention and prevention policies, which include training, identification, referral, assessment, and intervention. During the initial intake screening by medical staff, inmates complete a psychological questionnaire. Psychology Services staff are immediately notified if suicidal ideation is apparent from an inmate's responses. For more information, see BOP Program Statement 5324.08 "Suicide Prevention Program" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5324_008.pdf and BOP Program Statement 5310.17 "Psychology Services Manual" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5310_017.pdf.

Internal Notes:

[redacted] explained to me by phone today the info in the first paragraph of the answer above, whereas the language in the second and third paragraphs above are copied from an answer IPPA leadership finalized that I sent to the WA Post in August (that answer is copied below).

[redacted] explained that executive staff at institutions may be more likely to review rounds of tape of staff to be sure they're performing their duties recently. This is what I was referencing in the third sentence of the first paragraph. We may NOT want to include that in our answer (I'll ask CPD), but I included it for now just in case we want to use it.

[redacted] said SHU does not have cameras watching inmates for suicide risk, but there are cameras in SHU units focused on the range generally (not on a particular cell); it is not standard practice to have a camera in a SHU cell. Bottom line - the reporter is probably not referencing cameras in SHU. [redacted] says we don't do mental health observation in SHU unless there was a waiver and specific policy in place.

Answer sent to WA Post on 8/21/2019 (finalized by IPPA leadership after consulting [redacted]):

The safety of staff, inmates, and the public is the highest priority for the Bureau of Prisons (BOP). The BOP has an extensive Suicide Prevention Program that begins upon an inmate's arrival at each BOP facility, including pretrial facilities such as MCC New York. See BOP Program Statement 5324.08 "Suicide Prevention Program" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5324_008.pdf and BOP Program Statement 5310.17 "Psychology Services Manual" here https://www.bop.gov/policy/progstat/5310_017.pdf. During the initial intake screening by medical staff, inmates complete a psychological questionnaire. Psychology Services staff are immediately notified if suicidal ideation is apparent from the responses. Further, any BOP staff member may place an inmate on suicide watch.

The Suicide Prevention Program at each BOP facility is administered by a Suicide Prevention Program Coordinator. The Program Coordinator, who must be a doctoral-level psychologist, ensures compliance with suicide intervention and prevention policies, which include training, identification, referral, assessment, and intervention. In BOP facilities, suicide watch is typically a short-term and highly restrictive intervention measure. Every institution has one or more rooms designated specifically for housing an inmate on suicide watch. These areas are set aside as special cells, typically in the BOP's Health Services division, which allow staff to maintain a safe environment for the inmate without compromising the ability to observe and protect the inmate. This environment includes easy access to the room, privacy, unobstructed vision of the inmate at all times, and limited availability of objects, materials, or architectural features that would allow for easy self-injury. Inmates on suicide watch are evaluated daily by apsychologist and are constantly observed by either staff or inmate companions. Once an inmate is placed on suicide watch, the watch may only be terminated by a BOP psychologist following a face-to-face evaluation with the inmate.

With regard to staffing levels, 15,012 correctional officers are currently working at the BOP and 1,654 correctional officer positions are vacant as of August 3, 2019. The BOP continues to work on hiring and retaining staff nationally. As you are aware, the Epstein case is currently under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Justice's Office of the Inspector General. The BOP is also conducting an After Action Review and a Suicide Reconstruction Review. The BOP will assess any additional measures which should be taken after those processes are completed.

The factors that lead an inmate from suicidal ideation to suicidal behavior are complex. Those factors include an individual's access to means (e.g., pills or razors), opportunity (e.g., privacy to implement a plan), motivation, and subjective feelings of defeat or humiliation.

The USA Today's top reporter (who's written front page stories on the BOP) is asking if BOP is "designating specific officers to regularly monitor surveillance video in segregated housing units and other locations where inmates are at some risk for suicide."

IPPA's Deputy AD[redacted] is curious if CPD & [redacted] (primarily [redacted] I'm guessing) have recommendations on what I should tell Kevin in an email response today?
We are thinking it may be best if you want to write your own statement with whatever is best to say about this subject, but we could ask this reporter below for more specific questions if you think that is needed.

Thanks,
Justin

As part of our obligations to prepare for the penalty phase (should there be one) of Mr. Tartaglione's trial, we would like to view the cells (including SHU ) and common areas where he has been held. It's possible that we will want to take some photographs, but initially we just want to look at the areas where he has been housed.

Trump is mum on Hong Kong as mobs attack protesters and China challenges U.S. influence

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Emily Davies

THE BIG IDEA: The stories coming out of Hong Kong this morning shock the conscience.

Pro-democracy lawmaker Lam Cheuk-ting was in a subway station near the area he represents on Sunday night, responding to reports of a violent mob in the area. Suddenly, dozens of white-shirted men appeared, surrounding the station.

“Armed with bats, batons and wooden rods attached to Chinese flags, they chased protesters who were returning home from a largely peaceful anti-government march into a subway train and around the station,” our Shibani Mahtani reports from the island. “As they kicked, hit and punched people, commuters pleaded for mercy and hid behind umbrellas. One witness said several women were wailing and hyperventilating in fear, some separated from their family members. Video shared with The Washington Post showed the men beating people with sticks so violently that they fell to the ground, clutching injured limbs. Chinese flags that had fallen from the sticks littered the floor. Surgical face masks and tissues drenched in blood lay abandoned on subway cars.”

“There were so many passengers, so many ordinary people,” Lam told The Post from a hospital where he’s recovering from broken fingers, a deep gash near his mouth and other injuries to his arms and body. He could not remember how many had surrounded and pummeled him, but he said they were using vulgar language and telling people to stay away from the neighborhood, Yuen Long. What’s worse is that police, suspiciously, did not respond to emergency calls for help until more than an hour and a half afterward and when all the assailants had left. No arrests have been made.

the Beijing-backed government, will plunge Hong Kong deeper into a political crisis that has gripped the city all summer. It also amplifies pressure on President Trump and senior administration officials to stop averting their gaze. This popular uprising began in response to a proposal that would allow people on the island to be more easily extradited to mainland China. That legislation has been tabled, but it's led to a broader movement to challenge Hong Kong's diminished autonomy and to call for the resignation of the island's China-backed leader.

-- The Financial Times has reported that Trump promised Chinese President Xi Jinping when they met in Osaka, Japan, that the United States would muzzle its criticisms of Beijing's attacks on Hong Kong's already limited freedoms while trade talks are ongoing. That reportedly led Mike Pompeo's State Department to nix a planned speech by the outgoing U.S. consul general for Hong Kong that would have offered support for the protest movement, despite Pompeo's strong statement for human rights on the 30th anniversary of the massacre in Tiananmen Square in early June.

-- Kurt Tong, who spent three years as consul and is now out of government, has chosen to go public with his concerns this morning. "Put the short-term politics

his concerns this morning. "Put the short-term politics aside," Tong pleads in a piece for Bloomberg Opinion that just posted. "The U.S. has more at stake here than many Americans realize. Opening doors to free and fair trade, with China and other partners, has been a consistent core interest of the U.S. in the western Pacific. … The city's value is buttressed by its rule of law -- not just rule by law -- and by its independent judiciary and sense of fair play. That's why more U.S. businesses – close to 1,400 of them – now operate in Hong Kong than when the British returned their onetime colony to China in 1997. Many important American firms, especially in finance and services, continue to favor the city for their Asian headquarters. …

"In my final message home to Washington, I urged colleagues to recognize the city's abiding strengths," Tong concludes. "After all, a couple million people validated last month that Hong Kong remains very different from mainland China. Most important, U.S. leaders should always remember that the city isn't a card to be played against Beijing -- neither a means of highlighting flaws in the mainland's governance when it suits us, nor a token to be exchanged for concessions in trade talks. Rather, Hong Kong is a vision of what we should want China, and indeed much of the rest of Asia, to look like. We should seek ways to bolster its strengths."

Tens of thousands march for democratic reform in Hong Kong

fresh headlines that put Beijing's military and economic ambitions in stark relief. Consider these seven stories that just posted:

-- The Post reports this morning that Huawei Technologies Co., the Chinese tech giant embroiled in Trump's trade war with China, secretly helped the North Korean government build and maintain the country's commercial wireless network. Ellen Nakashima, Gerry Shih and John Hudson report: "Huawei partnered with a Chinese state-owned firm, Panda International Information Technology Co. Ltd., on a variety of projects there spanning at least eight years, according to past work orders, contracts and detailed spreadsheets taken from a database that charts the company's telecom operations worldwide. Taken together, the revelations raise questions about whether Huawei, which has used American technology in its components, violated U.S. export controls to furnish equipment to North Korea. In a statement, Huawei said it 'has no business presence' in North Korea. Spokesman Joe Kelly declined, however, to address detailed questions …

"Discovery of a link between North Korea and Huawei, whose activities, ambitions and suspected ties to the Chinese government have alarmed U.S. and European security officials, is likely to fuel even deeper suspicion among Western nations contemplating whether to ban the company, in full or in part, from their next-generation 5G wireless networks. … Since its founding in 1987 by a former engineer with the People's Liberation Army, Huawei has grown from a humble phone switch maker into an icon of China's technological prowess — the world's largest telecom equipment manufacturer. Today, it is a 'national champion' promoted by Beijing and does business in more than 170 countries."

-- The Wall Street Journal reports that China has signed a secret agreement allowing its armed forces to use a Cambodian navy base, as Beijing works to boost its ability to project military power around the globe: "The pact—signed this spring but not disclosed by either side—gives China exclusive rights to part of a Cambodian naval installation on the Gulf of Thailand, not far from a large airport now being constructed by a Chinese company."

-- China's military capacity will surpass that of the U.S. Indo-Pacific Command within the next few years unless American policy changes significantly, according to Adm. Phil Davidson, the top U.S. commander in the region. Speaking over the weekend at the Aspen Security Forum in Colorado, he cited China's "explosive growth" in the air, land, and maritime domains, along with its increased capability in space and cyber. "We run the risk, if we don't take proactive action, that China will indeed surpass our capabilities in the middle of the next decade," Davidson said, according to Air Force Magazine. The admiral reportedly disclosed that, within the past 28 months, Chinese naval ships have made more port visits to more countries than in the previous 28 years.

-- China has reached parity with the United States on this year's Fortune Global 500 list, which dropped this morning. "As the Chinese Century nears its third decade, Fortune's Global 500 shows how profoundly the world's balance of power is shifting," Geoff Colvin writes in the magazine. "American companies account for 121 of the world's largest corporations by revenue. Chinese companies account for 129 (including 10 Taiwanese companies). For the first time since the debut of the Global 500 in 1990, and arguably for the first time since World War II, a nation other than the U.S. is at the top of the ranks of global big business. That shift is transforming not just the business world but the whole world. … The No. 1 nationality among the top 50 companies in this year's Global 500 is American; among the bottom 50, it's Chinese. Those companies near the bottom are rising quickly, and like their country, they're burning with ambition."

-- The New York Times reports that Chinese investment in the United States has plummeted by nearly 90 percent since Trump took office: "The falloff, which is being felt broadly across the economy, stems from tougher regulatory scrutiny in the United States and a less hospitable climate toward Chinese investment, as well Beijing's tightened limits on foreign spending. It is affecting a range of industries including Silicon Valley start-ups, the Manhattan real estate market and state governments that spent years wooing Chinese investment, underscoring how the world's two largest economies are beginning to decouple after years of increasing integration."

-- "Trading on China's new Nasdaq-style stock market began today, with 25 tech companies listed on the Science and Technology Innovation Board, operated by the Shanghai Stock Market," TechCrunch reports. "Called the STAR Market, the board is an initiative by the government to encourage more Chinese tech companies to list domestically. … Some of the highest-profile Chinese tech IPOs, including Alibaba, Tencent, Xiaomi, JD.com and Pinduoduo, have taken place in New York City or Hong Kong, and the STAR Market may encourage more local stock debuts and investment—a goal that holds especially high stakes as China's trade war with the U.S. continues."

WHILE YOU WERE SLEEPING:

-- White House and congressional negotiators rushing to hammer out the final details of a sweeping budget and debt deal are unlikely to include many — if any — actual spending cuts, even as the debt limit is lifted for two years. Damian Paletta and Erica Werner report: "The agreement appeared likely to mark a retreat for White House officials who had demanded major spending cuts in exchange for a new budget deal. But the process remained in limbo while negotiators awaited final approval late Sunday from President Trump. The pending deal would seek to extend the debt ceiling and set new spending levels for two years, ratcheting back the budget brinkmanship that led to a record-long government shutdown earlier this year. In practical terms, the budget agreement would increase spending by tens of billions of dollars in the next two years."

What to watch for when the deal is officially announced: "As some White House officials backed away from demands for spending cuts, their focus shifted to trying to block an attempt by Democrats to restrict funding for a wall along the Mexico border. As part of the deal to raise military and spending levels for two years, White House officials were attempting to convince House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) to back off on certain policies Democrats hoped to include in future must-pass spending bills. One point of contention involved the administration's authority to transfer money between budget accounts to finance construction of the wall. Democrats have fought to limit or eliminate the White House's ability to transfer money in this way, but White House officials have pushed hard to retain the flexibility to do so. The exact resolution was uncertain."

If the agreement is finalized and gets Trump's approval, Pelosi will have less than a week to muscle it through the House before the chamber adjourns for a scheduled six-week summer recess on Friday. The Senate will be in session for an additional week after the House departs.

THE DIVIDED STATES OF AMERICA:

-- "During America's 'most segregated hour,' preachers grapple with Trump's politics," by [redacted] Jaffe and Cleve Wootson in Greenville, N.C.: "Trump's Greenville rally and the 'Send her back' chants it inspired, divided much of the country, and Greenville was no exception. … The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. once called church services one of the 'most segregated hours' in America. Decades later, King's quote holds true. One of the biggest events to hit Greenville in decades was barely mentioned in at least two white churches here, where pastors were reluctant to blend politics and faith. … Many of the congregants at the Unity Free Will Baptist Church … thought the accusations of racism over the president's remarks weren't fair. … At Greenville's lone mosque, members spent a portion of Friday prayers talking about racism and Islamophobia."

In black churches, the political, the spiritual and the moral were unavoidably intermixed: "The Rev. Stephen Howard knew Trump's speech was going to be unsettling for his city and his mostly black church the moment he saw people had lined up at 4 a.m. Wednesday to get into the arena. These were his congregants' neighbors and co-workers. Soon, they would be cheering for a president whom Howard and many of his flock at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church considered a racist. He knew he would have to say something. … Howard, 51, came to the United States in the 1980s from Liberia and has experienced the country as both a black man and an immigrant with an accent. As a as both a black man and an immigrant with an accent. As a pastor at churches throughout the Southeast, he said, he has learned that being asked, 'Where are you from?' is not always a sign of harmless curiosity.

"Just before Howard stepped to the pulpit on Sunday, Trump fired off a new tweet accusing the four congresswomen of not loving America and demanding they apologize for the 'horrible' and 'hateful' things they had said. … There was an hour of singing, a pause for tithing and then Howard's sermon, which began with the 37th Psalm's advice 'not to fret of those who are evil.' Howard reminded his congregants that God had delivered African Americans from darker periods in the nation's history. That salvation, he said, was even more reason to stand with [Ilhan] Omar and the other congresswomen amid Trump's attacks. … The worshipers called out amens. … He promised his congregants that if they were steadfast in their faith, their deliverance from evil and sin would be heavenly. And in a nod to the previous week, he noted, it could also be earthly. 'November 2020 ain't that far away,' he said. 'The wicked shall soon be cut off.'

"Across town, Brad Smith, the pastor at a 192-year-old predominantly white Baptist church, got his first inkling that something had gone wrong when his wife returned home from the speech. She was there as an returned home from the speech. She was there as an employee of East Carolina University, where the rally was held, and was shaken by the anger in the auditorium. … The chants at the rally were 'disturbing' and 'probably racist,' but they didn't represent the Greenville that he knew. … He was upset that Trump had chosen his city to hold such a divisive rally. And he wondered how the country had become so divided. 'Was it because a black president won?' he asked. 'Maybe we weren't ready for it?'

"Smith spent two days thinking about whether he should scrap his prepared sermon on Noah and the flood in favor of a speech focused on the rally and its aftermath. … When Sunday came, he took the pulpit and told the story of God's disappointment, the flood and the one good man he had chosen to save to start anew. The only mention he made of Trump's rally was a fleeting one. 'When those who protest to open borders and those who chant 'Go back home' can't seem to be on the same page, it is the love and grace and mercy found in the very body of Christ' that can mend divisions, he said. This was the message of Noah's story: 'To love God is to love all of us,' he said. 'It is hard to do, but it is beautiful.'"

'Is Trump racist?': Lawmakers sound off on Trump's attacks of minority congresswomen

with 'Fox News Sunday' host Chris Wallace over the president's tweets as well as the North Carolina Trump rally where the crowd chanted 'Send her back!' Miller defended Trump and said the term 'racist' has become a label used to silence and punish people. Vice President Pence, meanwhile, reiterated that he and Trump were not pleased with the chanting but declined to directly address supporters and tell them not to do it again. 'The president was very clear that he wasn't happy about it and that, if it happened again, he might make an effort to speak out about it,' Pence said on CBS News.

"On ABC News's 'This Week,' Mercedes Schlapp, an adviser to Trump's reelection campaign, defended Trump, saying he 'disavowed' the chants at his rally. Host George Stephanopoulos pushed back, noting the president did not speak out against the chants during the rally and later retweeted a tweet that said, 'Send her back is the new lock her up.' Schlapp responded: 'He made it very clear that he disagreed with the chant, and I will tell you he stands with those people in North Carolina, across the country who support him.'" Read that again: How can Trump both disagree with and stand with "those people in North Carolina"? Schlapp's message shows how the Trump team is trying to have it both ways.

-- "The reality is this is a guy who is worse than a racist," Sen. Cory Booker (D-N.J.) said on CNN's "State of the Union." "He's actually using racist tropes and racial language for political gain, he's trying to use this as a weapon to divide our nation against itself." Booker compared weapon to divide our nation against itself." Booker compared Trump to George Wallace. "He's using the exact same language," Booker said. "We have a demagogue, fearmongering person who is using race to divide."

-- Rep. Elijah E. Cummings (D-Md.) said the president's behavior reminds him of when he was beaten up and called racial slurs while trying to integrate a pool in Baltimore 50 years ago. "I heard the same kind of chants, 'Go Home,' 'You don't belong here,' and they called us the n-word over and over again," the House Oversight Committee chairman said on ABC. "What it does when the president does these things, it brings up the same feelings I had over 50-some years ago. It's very, very painful, it's extremely divisive."

-- A new CBS News-YouGov poll shows 59 percent of Americans disagree with Trump's tweets about the congresswomen, while 40 percent of respondents agree with the remarks. Views were split sharply along party lines: 82 percent of Republicans agree with Trump's remarks, while 88 percent of Democrats disagree.

- Max Boot: "Why 'send her back' is even worse than 'lock her up.'"
- Charlie Sykes for America magazine: "Dante, Trump and the moral cowardice of the G.O.P."

-- A Louisiana police officer posted a comment on his Facebook page calling Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez a "vile idiot" who "needs a round, and I don't mean the kind she used to serve." The Times-Picayune of New Orleans reports: "The comment, which alludes to the freshman Democrat's past work as a New York City bartender while apparently saying she should be shot, comes amid increasing scrutiny of racist and violent social media posts by police officers in departments across the country. Charlie Rispoli, who has been on the Gretna police force since 2005, could not be reached for comment, but Chief Arthur Lawson called the post 'disturbing' when it was shown to him. … Lawson said he does not think the comment constitutes an actual threat, but it appears to violate the department's social media policy, which he said all officers have read and signed. …

"Rispoli's comment referred to a fake news story he posted to his personal Facebook page on Thursday at 1:51 p.m. The story's headline attributed a fabricated quote to Ocasio-Cortez saying, 'We pay soldiers too much.' The photo on the post is marked as 'satire' and it had been labeled 'false' by the website snopes.com on Wednesday, but Rispoli appeared to be upset by it."

Schiff on protecting the 2020 election from foreign interference

-- House Intelligence Committee Chairman [redacted] Schiff

(D-Calif.) said that he and his contacts at the top intelligence agencies were unaware of Russian attempts to hack Senate campaigns in 2018 until the issue came up publicly at a conference. Hannah Knowles reports: "Speaking to NBC journalist Kristen Welker at the Aspen Security Forum — an annual Colorado gathering of government officials, industry experts and reporters — Schiff recalled his surprise when a Microsoft representative said at last year's forum that three Senate campaigns had been attacked by what seemed like the same Russian group that interfered in the 2016 election. 'That should not be the first time the Intelligence chair is hearing that,' Schiff said at the Aspen conference. The hacking attempts were also news to the National Security Agency and CIA officials he talked to later, the lawmaker said. 'And that told me, as a matter of quality control, that something is broken here,' Schiff added." (Todd Purdum interviews Schiff for a profile in the Atlantic that popped this morning.)

This revelation alarmed experts, including former CIA counterterrorism analyst Aki Peritz:

(The CIA, the NSA and Microsoft did not immediately respond to our requests for comment Sunday.)

-- Hostile witness or Democratic hero? Bob Mueller will probably be neither. "On Wednesday, when he delivers long-awaited testimony about his investigation, Democrats are hoping to coax from the former special counsel the kind of dramatic moments that could galvanize public opinion against the president. Republicans, meanwhile, are eager to elicit testimony that shows the investigation was biased from its inception. Those who know him best are skeptical he will meet either side's expectations," Devlin Barrett reports.

"For anybody hoping he's going to provide new information or evidence against the president, I think many people will be very disappointed," said John Pistole, who served as Mueller's deputy for years when he was FBI director. "And then on the other side of the aisle, some may be disappointed to find out that he's not a demagogue of the left."

"Mueller is set to appear before the House Judiciary Committee for three hours — a hearing that aims to focus on the question of whether the president obstructed justice. Mueller will also spend two hours before the House Intelligence Committee answering questions about Russia's election interference," Barrett explains. "The back-to-back hearings will probably be the last public word from the special prosecutor, whose two-year tenure was marked by long silences and fevered speculation about his work. Mueller's past, particularly his congressional appearances during his 12 years as FBI director, offer a number of clues about how he will approach Wednesday's task. Does Mueller like appearing before Congress? 'Oh no, no, no, no, no,' answered Pistole, now the president of Anderson University, who said he often appeared in Mueller's place at hearings. ...

"A central question for Mueller will be whether he, as a prosecutor, would have filed charges against Trump were he not the president. Mueller also probably will face questions about his interactions with Attorney General William P. Barr. Democrats have accused Barr of mischaracterizing Mueller's findings in the weeks before the report's public release — a political move, they say, that blunted its impact. At one point, Mueller wrote to Barr complaining that the attorney general's statements had created confusion among the public about the investigation's results, but Barr has tried to play down the disagreement, calling Mueller's letter 'a bit snippy.'"

-- While politicians anxiously prepare for Wednesday, Mueller has had a lifetime of preparation. The New York Times reports: "A review of dozens of hours of his hearings — Mr. Mueller has appeared before Congress 88 times dating back to 1990, according to the Senate Historical Office, among the most of any official ever — offers insight into what kind of witness he will be this week. ... Mr. Mueller brings a longstanding commitment to preparation to Wednesday's hearings. He met into the evenings with F.B.I. colleagues for days ahead of congressional appearances, poring over thick binders in a large conference room next to the bureau director's office on the seventh floor of the J.

Edgar Hoover Building. Aides role-played as members of Congress who might have wanted to squabble with him on camera."

THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- In his first interview since leaving the Senate in December 2017, former senator Al Franken opened up to the New Yorker about his clinical depression since his fall from grace and the regrets that plague him to this day. Jane Mayer reports: "When I asked him if he truly regretted his decision to resign, he said, 'Oh yeah. Absolutely.' He wishes that he had appeared before a Senate Ethics Committee hearing, as he had requested, allowing him to marshal facts that countered the narrative aired in the press. Holding his head in his hands, he said, 'I don't think people who have been sexually assaulted, and those kinds of things, want to hear from people who have been #MeToo'd that they're victims.' Yet, he added, being on the losing side of the #MeToo movement, which he fervently supports, has led him to spend time thinking about such matters as due process, proportionality of punishment, and the consequences of Internet-fueled outrage. …

"He told me that his therapist had likened his experience to 'what happens when primates are shunned and humiliated by the rest of the other primates.' Their reaction, Franken said, with a mirthless laugh, 'is 'I'm going to die alone in the jungle.'"

Franken's downfall has left a bad taste for many who initially cried for his resignation: "Seven current and former U.S. senators who demanded Franken's resignation in 2017 told me that they'd be wrong to do so. Such admissions are unusual in an institution whose members rarely concede mistakes. [redacted] Leahy, the veteran Democrat from Vermont, said that his decision to seek Franken's resignation without first getting all the facts was 'one of the biggest mistakes I've made' in forty-five years in the Senate. Heidi Heitkamp, the former senator from North Dakota, told me, 'If there's one decision I've made that I would take back, it's the decision to call for his resignation. It was made in the heat of the moment, without concern for exactly what this was.' … The Presidential candidacy of Senator Kirsten Gillibrand has been plagued by questions about her role as the first of three dozen Democratic senators to demand Franken's resignation. … Gillibrand told me, 'I'd do it again today,' adding, 'If a few wealthy donors are angry about that, it's on them.'"

Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office chief deputy interviewed about Jeffrey Epstein

girls to the island as recently as this year -- a decade after he was forced to register as a convicted sex offender -- and that authorities did nothing to stop him": "Two employees who worked at the local airstrip on St. [redacted] tell Vanity Fair that they witnessed Epstein boarding his private plane on multiple occasions in the company of girls who appeared to be under the age of consent. According to the employees, the girls arrived with Epstein aboard one of his two Gulfstream jets. Between January 2018 and June 2019, previously published flight records show, the jets were airborne at least one out of every three days. They stopped all over the world, sometimes for only a few hours at a time: Paris, London, Slovakia, Mexico, Morocco. When they left St. [redacted], the employees say, they returned to airports near Epstein's homes in Palm Beach and New York City."

-- On Friday, the Palm Beach County sheriff announced an internal affairs investigation into the actions of deputies assigned to monitor Epstein while he was on work release during his sentence in Palm Beach in 2008. Lori Rozsa reports: "Participation in the work-release program was a privilege granted to him at the discretion of the sheriff's office. Though inmates on work release are not generally accompanied by deputies, Epstein was 'monitored by a deputy the entire time he was out,' said Teri Barbera, a spokeswoman for the sheriff's office. Epstein paid $128,136 for the deputies to watch him, according to the records. One deputy wrote that he sought clarification of his duties and was told his job was to 'provide security' for Epstein. The deputies who monitored him were required to wear suits and to “greet inmate Epstein upon his arrival,” documents show. In internal reports about the work-release program, the deputies often describe Epstein as ‘the client’ or ‘Mr. Epstein.’ Two deputies refer to him as ‘Jeffrey.’”

Israel says the buildings were erected too close to its West Bank separation barrier. Residents say the buildings are on West Bank land, and the Palestinian Authority gave them construction permits. # Trump is mum on Hong Kong as mobs attack protesters and China challenges U.S. influence

BY JAMES HOHMANN

with Emily Davies

THE BIG IDEA: The stories coming out of Hong Kong this morning shock the conscience.

Pro-democracy lawmaker Lam Cheuk-ting was in a subway station near the area he represents on Sunday night, responding to reports of a violent mob in the area. Suddenly, dozens of white-shirted men appeared, surrounding the station.

"Armed with bats, batons and wooden rods attached to Chinese flags, they chased protesters who were returning home from a largely peaceful anti-government march into a subway train and around the station," our Shibani Mahtani reports from the island. "As they kicked, hit and punched people, commuters pleaded for mercy and hid behind umbrellas. One witness said several women were wailing and hyperventilating in fear, some separated from their family members. Video shared with The Washington Post showed the men beating people with sticks so violently that they fell to the ground, clutching injured limbs. Chinese flags that had fallen from the sticks littered the floor. Surgical face masks and tissues drenched in blood lay abandoned on subway cars."

"There were so many passengers, so many ordinary people," Lam told The Post from a hospital where he's recovering from broken fingers, a deep gash near his mouth and other injuries to his arms and body. He could not remember how many had surrounded and pummeled him, but he said they were using vulgar language and telling people to stay away from the neighborhood, Yuen Long. What's worse is that police, suspiciously, did not respond to emergency calls for help until more than an hour and a half afterward and when all the assailants had left. No arrests have been made.

This thuggish violence against peaceful protesters, combined with accusations that it was condoned by the Beijing-backed government, will plunge Hong Kong deeper into a political crisis that has gripped the city all summer. It also amplifies pressure on President Trump and senior administration officials to stop averting their gaze. This popular uprising began in response to a proposal that would allow people on the island to be more easily extradited to mainland China. That legislation has been tabled, but it's led to a broader movement to challenge Hong Kong's diminished autonomy and to call for the resignation of the island's China-backed leader.

-- The Financial Times has reported that Trump promised Chinese President Xi Jinping when they met in Osaka, Japan, that the United States would muzzle its criticisms of Beijing's attacks on Hong Kong's already limited freedoms while trade talks are ongoing. That reportedly led Mike Pompeo's State Department to nix a planned speech by the outgoing U.S. consul general for Hong Kong that would have offered support for the protest movement, despite Pompeo's strong statement for human rights on the 30th anniversary of the massacre in Tiananmen Square in early June.

-- Kurt Tong, who spent three years as consul and is now out of government, has chosen to go public with his concerns this morning. "Put the short-term politics aside," Tong pleads in a piece for Bloomberg Opinion that just posted. "The U.S. has more at stake here than many Americans realize. Opening doors to free and fair trade, with China and other partners, has been a consistent core interest of the U.S. in the western Pacific. … The city's value is buttressed by its rule of law -- not just rule by law -- and by its independent judiciary and sense of fair play. That's why more U.S. businesses – close to 1,400 of them – now operate in Hong Kong than when the British returned their onetime colony to China in 1997. Many important American firms, especially in finance and services, continue to favor the city for their Asian headquarters. …

"In my final message home to Washington, I urged colleagues to recognize the city's abiding strengths," Tong concludes. "After all, a couple million people validated last month that Hong Kong remains very different from mainland China. Most important, U.S. leaders should always remember that the city isn't a card to be played against Beijing -- neither a means of highlighting flaws in the mainland's governance when it suits us, nor a token to be exchanged for concessions in trade talks. Rather, Hong Kong is a vision of what we should want China, and indeed much of the rest of Asia, to look like. We should seek ways to bolster its strengths."

Tens of thousands march for democratic reform in Hong Kong

-- The threat posed to American power in Asia by a rising China is real and growing. Every day brings fresh headlines that put Beijing's military and economic ambitions in stark relief. Consider these seven stories that just posted:

-- The Post reports this morning that Huawei Technologies Co., the Chinese tech giant embroiled in Trump's trade war with China, secretly helped the North Korean government build and maintain the country's commercial wireless network. Ellen Nakashima, Gerry Shih and John Hudson report: "Huawei partnered with a Chinese state-owned firm, Panda International Information Technology Co. Ltd., on a variety of projects there spanning at least eight years, according to past work orders, contracts and detailed spreadsheets taken from a database that charts the company's telecom operations worldwide. Taken together, the revelations raise questions about whether Huawei, which has used American technology in its components, violated U.S. export controls to furnish equipment to North Korea. In a statement, Huawei said it 'has no business presence' in North Korea. Spokesman Joe Kelly declined, however, to address detailed questions …

"Discovery of a link between North Korea and Huawei, whose activities, ambitions and suspected ties to the Chinese government have alarmed U.S. and European security officials, is likely to fuel even deeper suspicion among Western nations contemplating whether to ban the company, in full or in part, from their next-generation 5G wireless networks. … Since its founding in 1987 by a former engineer with the People's Liberation Army, Huawei has grown from a humble phone switch maker into an icon of China's technological prowess — the world's largest telecom equipment manufacturer. Today, it is a 'national champion' promoted by Beijing and does business in more than 170 countries."

-- The Wall Street Journal reports that China has signed a secret agreement allowing its armed forces to use a Cambodian navy base, as Beijing works to boost its ability to project military power around the globe: "The pact—signed this spring but not disclosed by either side—gives China exclusive rights to part of a Cambodian naval installation on the Gulf of Thailand, not far from a large airport now being constructed by a Chinese company."

-- China's military capacity will surpass that of the U.S. Indo-Pacific Command within the next few years unless American policy changes significantly, according to Adm. Phil Davidson, the top U.S. commander in the region. Speaking over the weekend at the Aspen Security Forum in Colorado, he cited China's "explosive growth" in the air, land, and maritime domains, along with its increased capability in space and cyber. "We run the risk, if we don't take proactive action, that China will indeed surpass our capabilities in the middle of the next decade," Davidson said, according to Air Force Magazine. The admiral reportedly disclosed that, within the past 28 months, Chinese naval ships have made more port visits to more countries than in the previous 28 years.

-- China has reached parity with the United States on this year's Fortune Global 500 list, which dropped this morning. "As the Chinese Century nears its third decade, Fortune's Global 500 shows how profoundly the world's balance of power is shifting," Geoff Colvin writes in the magazine. "American companies account for 121 of the world's largest corporations by revenue. Chinese companies account for 129 (including 10 Taiwanese companies). For the first time since the debut of the Global 500 in 1990, and arguably for the first time since World War II, a nation other than the U.S. is at the top of the ranks of global big business. That shift is transforming not just the business world but the whole world. … The No. 1 nationality among the top 50 companies in this year's Global 500 is American; among the bottom 50, it's Chinese. Those companies near the bottom are rising quickly, and like their country, they're burning with ambition."

-- The New York Times reports that Chinese investment in the United States has plummeted by nearly 90 percent since Trump took office: "The falloff, which is being felt broadly across the economy, stems from tougher regulatory scrutiny in the United States and a less hospitable climate toward Chinese investment, as well Beijing's tightened limits on foreign spending. It is affecting a range of industries including Silicon Valley start-ups, the Manhattan real estate market and state governments that spent years wooing Chinese investment, underscoring how the world's two largest economies are beginning to decouple after years of increasing integration."

WHILE YOU WERE SLEEPING:

report: “The agreement appeared likely to mark a retreat for White House officials who had demanded major spending cuts in exchange for a new budget deal. But the process remained in limbo while negotiators awaited final approval late Sunday from President Trump. The pending deal would seek to extend the debt ceiling and set new spending levels for two years, ratcheting back the budget brinkmanship that led to a record-long government shutdown earlier this year. In practical terms, the budget agreement would increase spending by tens of billions of dollars in the next two years.”

What to watch for when the deal is officially announced: “As some White House officials backed away from demands for spending cuts, their focus shifted to trying to block an attempt by Democrats to restrict funding for a wall along the Mexico border. As part of the deal to raise military and spending levels for two years, White House officials were attempting to convince House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) to back off on certain policies Democrats hoped to include in future must-pass spending bills. One point of contention involved the administration’s authority to transfer money between budget accounts to finance construction of the wall. Democrats have fought to limit or eliminate the White House’s ability to transfer money in this way, but White House officials have pushed hard to retain the flexibility to do so. The exact resolution was uncertain.”

If the agreement is finalized and gets Trump’s approval, Pelosi will have less than a week to muscle it through the House before the chamber adjourns for a scheduled six-week summer recess on Friday. The Senate will be in session for an additional week after the House departs.

THE DIVIDED STATES OF AMERICA:

-- "During America's 'most segregated hour,' preachers grapple with Trump's politics," by [redacted] Jaffe and Cleve Wootson in Greenville, N.C.: "Trump's Greenville rally and the 'Send her back' chants it inspired, divided much of the country, and Greenville was no exception. … The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. once called church services one of the 'most segregated hours' in America. Decades later, King's quote holds true. One of the biggest events to hit Greenville in decades was barely mentioned in at least two white churches here, where pastors were reluctant to blend politics and faith. … Many of the congregants at the Unity Free Will Baptist Church … thought the accusations of racism over the president's remarks weren't fair. … At Greenville's lone mosque, members spent a portion of Friday prayers talking about racism and Islamophobia."

In black churches, the political, the spiritual and the moral were unavoidably intermixed: "The Rev. Stephen Howard knew Trump's speech was going to be unsettling for his city and his mostly black church the moment he saw people had lined up at 4 a.m. Wednesday to get into the arena. These were his congregants' neighbors and co-workers. Soon, they would be cheering for a president whom Howard and many of his flock at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church considered a racist. He knew he would have to say something. … Howard, 51, came to the United States in the 1980s from Liberia and has experienced the country as both a black man and an immigrant with an accent. As a pastor at churches throughout the Southeast, he said, he has learned that being asked, 'Where are you from?' is not always a sign of harmless curiosity.

"Just before Howard stepped to the pulpit on Sunday, Trump fired off a new tweet accusing the four congresswomen of not loving America and demanding they apologize for the 'horrible' and 'hateful' things they had said. … There was an hour of singing, a pause for tithing and then Howard's sermon, which began with the 37th Psalm's advice 'not to fret of those who are evil.' Howard reminded his congregants that God had delivered African Americans from darker periods in the nation's history. That salvation, he said, was even more reason to stand with [Ilhan] Omar and the other congresswomen amid Trump's attacks. … The worshipers called out amens. … He promised his congregants that if they were steadfast in their faith, their deliverance from evil and sin would be heavenly. And in a nod to the previous week, he noted, it could also be earthly. 'November 2020 ain't that far away,' he said. 'The wicked shall soon be cut off.'

"Across town, Brad Smith, the pastor at a 192-year-old predominantly white Baptist church, got his first inkling that something had gone wrong when his wife returned home from the speech. She was there as an employee of East Carolina University, where the rally was held, and was shaken by the anger in the auditorium. … The chants at the rally were 'disturbing' and 'probably racist,' but they didn't represent the Greenville that he knew. … He was upset that Trump had chosen his city to hold such a divisive rally. And he wondered how the country had become so divided. 'Was it because a black president won?' he asked. 'Maybe we weren't ready for it?'

“Smith spent two days thinking about whether he should scrap his prepared sermon on Noah and the flood in favor of a speech focused on the rally and its aftermath. … When Sunday came, he took the pulpit and told the story of God’s disappointment, the flood and the one good man he had chosen to save to start anew. The only mention he made of Trump’s rally was a fleeting one. ‘When those who protest to open borders and those who chant ‘Go back home’ can’t seem to be on the same page, it is the love and grace and mercy found in the very body of Christ’ that can mend divisions, he said. This was the message of Noah’s story: ‘To love God is to love all of us,’ he said. ‘It is hard to do, but it is beautiful.’”

-- Trump’s aides defended his behavior on the Sunday shows. Cat Zakrzewski and Felicia Sonmez report: “Stephen Miller, the White House senior adviser who oversees immigration policy, had a heated back-and-forth with ‘Fox News Sunday’ host Chris Wallace over the president’s tweets as well as the North Carolina Trump rally where the crowd chanted ‘Send her back!’ Miller defended Trump and said the term ‘racist’ has become a label used to silence and punish people. Vice President Pence, meanwhile, reiterated that he and Trump were not pleased with the chanting but declined to directly address supporters and tell them not to do it again. ‘The president was very clear that he wasn’t happy about it and that, if it happened again, he might make an effort to speak out about it,’ Pence said on CBS News.

“On ABC News’s ‘This Week,’ Mercedes Schlapp, an adviser to Trump’s reelection campaign, defended Trump, saying he ‘disavowed’ the chants at his rally. Host George Stephanopoulos pushed back, noting the president did not speak out against the chants during the rally and later retweeted a tweet that said, 'Send her back is the new lock her up.' Schlapp responded: 'He made it very clear that he disagreed with the chant, and I will tell you he stands with those people in North Carolina, across the country who support him.'" Read that again: How can Trump both disagree with and stand with "those people in North Carolina"? Schlapp's message shows how the Trump team is trying to have it both ways.

-- "The reality is this is a guy who is worse than a racist," Sen. Cory Booker (D-N.J.) said on CNN's "State of the Union." "He's actually using racist tropes and racial language for political gain, he's trying to use this as a weapon to divide our nation against itself." Booker compared Trump to George Wallace. "He's using the exact same language," Booker said. "We have a demagogue, fearmongering person who is using race to divide."

-- Rep. Elijah E. Cummings (D-Md.) said the president's behavior reminds him of when he was beaten up and called racial slurs while trying to integrate a pool in Baltimore 50 years ago. "I heard the same kind of chants, 'Go Home,' 'You don't belong here,' and they called us the n-word over and over again," the House Oversight Committee chairman said on ABC. "What it does when the president does these things, it brings up the same feelings I had over 50-some years ago. It's very, very painful, it's extremely divisive."

-- A new CBS News-YouGov poll shows 59 percent of Americans disagree with Trump's tweets about the congresswomen, while 40 percent of respondents agree with the remarks. Views were split sharply along party lines: 82 percent of Republicans agree with Trump's remarks, while 88 percent of Democrats disagree.

-- Conservative intellectuals explain why rank-and-file Republicans should be more upset about Trump's racist comments:

- Max Boot: “Why ‘send her back’ is even worse than ‘lock her up.’”
- Charlie Sykes for America magazine: “Dante, Trump and the moral cowardice of the G.O.P.”

-- A Louisiana police officer posted a comment on his Facebook page calling Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez a “vile idiot” who “needs a round, and I don't mean the kind she used to serve.” The Times-Picayune of New Orleans reports: “The comment, which alludes to the freshman Democrat's past work as a New York City bartender while apparently saying she should be shot, comes amid increasing scrutiny of racist and violent social media posts by police officers in departments across the country. Charlie Rispoli, who has been on the Gretna police force since 2005, could not be reached for comment, but Chief Arthur Lawson called the post ‘disturbing’ when it was shown to him. … Lawson said he does not think the comment constitutes an actual threat, but it appears to violate the department's social media policy, which he said all officers have read and signed. …

THERE'S STILL A BEAR IN THE WOODS:

-- House Intelligence Committee Chairman [redacted] Schiff (D-Calif.) said that he and his contacts at the top intelligence agencies were unaware of Russian attempts to hack Senate campaigns in 2018 until the issue came up publicly at a conference. Hannah Knowles reports: "Speaking to NBC journalist Kristen Welker at the Aspen Security Forum — an annual Colorado gathering of government officials, industry experts and reporters — Schiff recalled his surprise when a Microsoft representative said at last year's forum that three Senate campaigns had been attacked by what seemed like the same Russian group that interfered in the 2016 election. 'That should not be the first time the Intelligence chair is hearing that,' Schiff said at the Aspen conference. The hacking attempts were also news to the National Security Agency and CIA officials he talked to later, the lawmaker said. 'And that told me, as a matter of quality control, that something is broken here,' Schiff added." (Todd Purdum interviews Schiff for a profile in the Atlantic that popped this morning.)

"For anybody hoping he's going to provide new information or evidence against the president, I think many people will be very disappointed," said John Pistole, who served as Mueller's deputy for years when he was FBI director. "And then on the other side of the aisle, some may be disappointed to find out that he's not a

"Mueller is set to appear before the House Judiciary Committee for three hours — a hearing that aims to focus on the question of whether the president obstructed justice. Mueller will also spend two hours before the House Intelligence Committee answering questions about Russia's election interference," Barrett explains. "The back-to-back hearings will probably be the last public word from the special prosecutor, whose two-year tenure was marked by long silences and fevered speculation about his work. Mueller's past, particularly his congressional appearances during his 12 years as FBI director, offer a number of clues about how he will approach Wednesday's task. Does Mueller like appearing before Congress? 'Oh no, no, no, no, no,' answered Pistole, now the president of Anderson University, who said he often appeared in Mueller's place at hearings. ...

"A central question for Mueller will be whether he, as a prosecutor, would have filed charges against Trump were he not the president. Mueller also probably will face questions about his interactions with Attorney General William P. Barr. Democrats have accused Barr of mischaracterizing Mueller's findings in the weeks before the report's public release — a political move, they say, that blunted its impact. At one point, Mueller wrote to Barr complaining that the attorney general's statements had created confusion among the public about the investigation's results, but Barr has tried to play down the disagreement, calling Mueller's letter 'a bit snippy.'"

-- While politicians anxiously prepare for Wednesday, Mueller has had a lifetime of preparation. The New York Times reports: "A review of dozens of hours of his hearings — Mr. Mueller has appeared before Congress 88 times dating back to 1990, according to the Senate Historical Office, among the most of any official ever — offers insight into what kind of witness he will be this week. ... Mr. Mueller brings a longstanding commitment to preparation to Wednesday's hearings. He met into the evenings with F.B.I. colleagues for days ahead of congressional appearances, poring over thick binders in a large conference room next to the bureau director's office on the seventh floor of the J. Edgar Hoover Building. Aides role-played as members of Congress who might have wanted to squabble with him on camera."

Al Franken speaks to journalists outside his Capitol office in November 2017 to comment on the sexual harassment allegations against him. (Melina Mara/The Washington Post)

THE #METOO RECKONING:

-- In his first interview since leaving the Senate in December 2017, former senator Al Franken opened up to the New Yorker about his clinical depression since his fall from grace and the regrets that plague him to this day. Jane Mayer reports: "When I asked him if he truly regretted his decision to resign, he said, 'Oh yeah. Absolutely.' He wishes that he had appeared before a Senate Ethics Committee hearing, as he had requested, allowing him to marshal facts that countered the narrative aired in the press. Holding his head in his hands, he said, 'I don't think people who have been sexually assaulted, and those kinds of things, want to hear from people who have been #MeToo'd that they're victims.' Yet, he added, being on the losing side of the #MeToo movement, which he fervently supports, has led him to spend time thinking about such matters as due process, proportionality of punishment, and the consequences of Internet-fueled outrage. …

"He told me that his therapist had likened his experience to 'what happens when primates are shunned and humiliated by the rest of the other primates.' Their reaction, Franken said, with a mirthless laugh, 'is 'I'm going to die alone in the jungle.'"

demanded Franken's resignation in 2017 told me that they'd be wrong to do so. Such admissions are unusual in an institution whose members rarely concede mistakes. [redacted] Leahy, the veteran Democrat from Vermont, said that his decision to seek Franken's resignation without first getting all the facts was 'one of the biggest mistakes I've made' in forty-five years in the Senate. Heidi Heitkamp, the former senator from North Dakota, told me, 'If there's one decision I've made that I would take back, it's the decision to call for his resignation. It was made in the heat of the moment, without concern for exactly what this was.' … The Presidential candidacy of Senator Kirsten Gillibrand has been plagued by questions about her role as the first of three dozen Democratic senators to demand Franken's resignation. … Gillibrand told me, 'I'd do it again today,' adding, 'If a few wealthy donors are angry about that, it's on them.'"

Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office chief deputy interviewed about Jeffrey Epstein

-- Jeffrey Epstein allegedly continued to bring underage girls to St. [redacted] as recently as this year. A Vanity Fair investigation reported that "on nearby St. [redacted], locals say Epstein continued to bring underage girls to the island as recently as this year -- a decade after he was forced to register as a convicted sex offender -- and that authorities did nothing to stop him": "Two employees who worked at the local airstrip on St. [redacted] tell Vanity Fair that they witnessed Epstein boarding his private plane on multiple occasions in the company of girls who appeared to be under the age of consent. According to the employees, the girls arrived with Epstein aboard one of his two Gulfstream jets. Between January 2018 and June 2019, previously published flight records show, the jets were airborne at least one out of every three days. They stopped all over the world, sometimes for only a few hours at a time: Paris, London, Slovakia, Mexico, Morocco. When they left St. [redacted], the employees say, they returned to airports near Epstein's homes in Palm Beach and New York City."

-- On Friday, the Palm Beach County sheriff announced an internal affairs investigation into the actions of deputies assigned to monitor Epstein while he was on work release during his sentence in Palm Beach in 2008. Lori Rozsa reports: "Participation in the work-release program was a privilege granted to him at the discretion of the sheriff's office. Though inmates on work release are not generally accompanied by deputies, Epstein was 'monitored by a deputy the entire time he was out,' said Teri Barbera, a spokeswoman for the sheriff's office. Epstein paid $128,136 for the deputies to watch him, according to the records. One deputy wrote that he sought clarification of his duties and was told his job was to 'provide security' for Epstein. The deputies who monitored him were required to wear suits and to "greet inmate Epstein upon his arrival," documents show. In internal reports about the work-release program, the deputies often describe Epstein as 'the client' or 'Mr. Epstein.' Two deputies refer to him as 'Jeffrey.'"

WORLD NEWS THAT SHOULD BE ON YOUR RADAR:

-- Islamic State militants who escaped the defeat of their self-declared caliphate in Syria earlier this year have been slipping across the border into Iraq, bolstering a low-level insurgency the group is now waging across the central and northern part of the country. About 1,000 fighters have crossed into Iraq over the past eight months, most of them in the aftermath of the caliphate's collapse in March, said Hisham al-Hashimi, a security analyst who advises Iraq's government and foreign aid agencies. -- Pakistani Prime Minister Imran Khan will call on Trump at the White House today during his first trip to the United States as the country's leader. It's a meeting of two celebrity gadflies turned rabble-rousing, nationalist politicians. -- Israeli work crews are demolishing dozens of Palestinian homes in an east Jerusalem neighborhood today in one of the largest operations of its kind in years. The AP reports: "The demolitions capped a years-long legal battle over the buildings, built along the invisible line straddling the city and the occupied West Bank. Israel says the buildings were erected too close to its West Bank separation barrier. Residents say the buildings are on West Bank land, and the Palestinian Authority gave them construction permits. In the wake of a recent Supreme Court decision clearing the way for the demolitions, Israeli work crews moved into the neighborhood overnight. Massive construction vehicles smashed through the roofs of several buildings, and large excavators were digging through the rubble."

But health leaders in the Democratic Republic of Congo are reluctant to roll out the second vaccine because their differing regimens may lead to confusion. (Bloomberg News)

NORTHEAST REGION

FROM: Hugh J. [redacted], Assistant Director
Reentry Services Division

SUBJECT: Institution Response
Inmate Epstein, Jeffrey (76318-054)

I have reviewed the Institution Response dated November 19, 2019, to the Psychological Reconstruction of an inmate suicide involving Jeffrey Epstein (76318-054).

Some of the corrective actions and plans for implementation outlined in the response are unclear or insufficient. Please review the feedback provided and revise your response accordingly. An updated Institution Response is due to me within thirty (30) days of your receipt of this memorandum.

If you have questions or concerns, please feel free to contact me at [redacted]. I appreciate your assistance with this matter.

Institution Response Feedback
MCC New York
Epstein, Jeffrey (Reg. No. 76318-054)

Issue 1: Single Celling - Corrective Measure Accepted
The local guidelines provide a reasonable system of control to monitor the single-celling of inmates in the Special Housing Unit.

National guidelines for single celling in the Special Housing Unit have been incorporated into national policy and will soon be released. Please reference these generally with a plan to incorporate.

Issue 2: 30 Minute Rounds
The substance of the two hour Captain video review and six hour IDO video review is unclear. Please clarify the requirement for the Captain and IDO. Additionally, please identify the documentation used to maintain accountability of the reviews.

Issue 3: Cellmate Assignments
Documentation exists reflecting the role of the local Psychology Services department in communicating the importance of Mr. Epstein's status as a sex offender with specific needs to the Associate Warden. This includes consultation with the Psychology Services Branch in Central Office. The communication chain and decision making of Executive Staff lacks transparency as there is no documentation of the process or staff members present when decisions were made about the housing of Mr. Epstein. After the fact explanations may not accurately reflect what occurred.

Psychology Services was not adequately represented in the decision making of Executive Staff. Please establish a plan to increase the input of a psychologist in placement decisions for vulnerable inmates.

Issue 4: Documentation Accuracy
Professional responsibility requires taking into account multiple descriptions of an incident as noted in your response. However, when discrepancies exist these should be compiled and noted in documentation to decrease the likelihood of conflicting conclusions.

As noted in the reconstruction report, an incident report must be written within 24 hours of having the information that an inmate likely violated BOP rules. An incident report was written for Mr. Epstein prior to a determination of whether he engaged in self-directed violence or was assaulted on July 23, 2019. Staff had ample time to wait for the outcome of the SIS investigation of this incident. The incident report presumed self-directed violence, although SIS was not able to determine whether this incident was self-directed violence or an assault. Generating the incident report for self-directed violence is evidence of a local bias about the July 23, 2019 incident that still exists amongst some staff at MCC New York. Preconceived notions challenge the ability to remain open about alternative explanations, and subsequent systemic changes may be needed.

Please develop and provide local training for all staff that at a minimum reviews the time frame for writing incident reports and offers guidance when there is not clear evidence of an infraction. Include an outline of the training and evidence of staff who attended the training.

Typographical Errors - Corrective Measure Accepted

Psychology Observation - Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 5: Telephone Calls
As noted in the response, there is a lack of documentation to substantiate that a lieutenant facilitated two telephone calls to Mr. Epstein. However, this does not address the report of two telephone calls being provided. This response implies that the reporting of two staff members is inaccurate.

The response neglects the documented telephone call to Mr. Epstein's deceased mother.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 7: Follow-Up
Please provide documentation for the follow up training provided to staff detailing the content of the training and to whom it was provided.

Issue 8: Inmate Accountability and Assignment Accuracy
Periodic and unannounced checks are now conducted in SHU to determine pp30 assignments and actual inmate placement match. Please provide an operational definition of periodic. Please do the same for routine, as it relates Executive Staff bed book counts in all units. Where will the periodic and routine reviews be documented and will they include the identity (e.g., name and title) of staff who complete them?

Issue 9: Attorney Log Books

Issue 10: Automatic External Defibrillators
The response states the reconstruction team reviewed an old and outdated list from January 8, 2018. It is important to note this list was provided to the reconstruction team by institution staff. Provision of inaccurate documentation may reflect systemic issues related to collecting, maintaining, and sharing relevant documentation.

Corrective Measure Accepted

Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 12: Staffing
Corrective Measure Accepted

Issue 13: Sex Offense Risk Factors
Psychologists are subject matter experts in sex offender risk factors and they play a crucial role in sharing this knowledge through traditional settings such as ICT, AT, and institutional meetings. However, Executive Staff play a pivotal role in establishing and addressing institutional culture and promoting and participating in training. A lack of a broad understanding of sex offender specific risk factors requires an intentional training approach led by Executive Staff. They must be out front talking about inmates with a sex offense, expressing an understanding of sex offender dynamics, modeling agency condoned expectations for the understanding and treatment of inmates with a sex offenses, and assisting with institutional trainings. These practices encourage a broader acceptance by line staff.
